Court Appointee Tells Senate Committee He Never Was a Red; Vote Is Unanimous

The nomination of Felix Frankfurter as associate justice of the Supreme Court was unanimously approved yesterday by a judiciary sub-committee of the Senate, after the mild-mannered Harvard scholar had denied he was a communist and proclaimed his loyalty to the American Constitution.

At a hearing in the caucus room of the Senate Office Building, Frankfurter replied to the critics who in two days of testimony had asserted he was sympathetic to the "reds" and was a "menace to the Nation."

Firm for Americanism

The professor, who has taught many a New Dealer the precepts of liberalism, declared, in answer to a question by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada: "I do not believe you have ever taken the oath to support the Constitution of the United States with less reservation than I have or would now, nor do I believe you are more attached to the theories and practices of Americanism than I am."

In a demonstration unusual in committee hearings, the statement was greeted by a burst of applause from the spectators who crowded every inch of available space and included a scattering of Prof. Frankfurter's former pupils.

Meanwhile, the Senate confirmed by a voice vote the nomination of former Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, to be a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Bridges Opposed

Action came after Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, had spoken against the nomination on the ground that President Roosevelt had no authority to dismiss Dr. Arthur E. Morgan from the post Pope is to fill.

Also confirmed by the Senate yesterday were John W. Hanes, of North Carolina, to be Undersecretary of the Treasury, succeeding Roswell Magill, resigned; Preston Delano, of Massachusetts, to be Comptroller of the Currency, succeeding J. F. T. O'Connor, resigned, and Ellen S. Woodward, of Mississippi, to be a member of the Social Security Board, succeeding Mary W. Dewson, resigned.

Soon after the Frankfurter hearing ended, the sub-committee met in executive session and voted approval of Frankfurter's appointment. Senator McCarran was absent but later cast his ballot in the affirmative.

McCarran for Him

McCarran explained he had been at lunch with friends at the time of the vote. He told The Post: "I think at times past, Frankfurter has perhaps inadvertently found himself in bad company, but there is no evidence that has come to my attention that he ever followed the leadership or dictates of that company. Had I discovered anything in the record indicating he was inclined to follow or give sanction to thoughts of Harold Laski (British political scientist and friend of Frankfurter) I would have voted against confirmation."

When Chairman Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, asked the nominee: "Are you or have you been a Communist?" the reply came back, "I never have been and am not now."

"Do you mean you have never been enrolled as a member of the Communist Party?" queried McCarran.

"I mean more than that," said Frankfurter. "I never have been qualified to be enrolled because

What America thinks about Mrs. Roosevelt's activities

Does the public approve or disapprove of the way Mrs. Roosevelt has conducted herself as "First Lady?" Does the public think Mrs. Roosevelt should have taken her son's job with a Boston insurance firm? How does her popularity compare with that of the President? Trade Board Scores School Budget System; Burke Hits Spending

Senator Likens Buying Prosperity to Drinking Self Sober

United States Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, told 750 members of the Washington Board of Trade last night the theory that the Government can spend itself out of depression and into prosperity is about as sound as the sophistry "that a man can drink himself sober."

Senator Burke, one of the chief foes of President Roosevelt's Supreme Court plan in the last Congress, said the voters in November demonstrated they wanted a Congress that would do its own thinking and reach its own decisions.

"There is encouragement today," he said. "We will not be hearing so much in this Congress about the virtue of subservience in blindly following a leader, no matter how popular that leader may be."

Quotes Roosevelt

Resorting to Al Smith's custom of looking at the record, Senator Burke harked back to President Roosevelt's economy speeches when he was running against Herbert Hoover in 1932. The Washington businessmen, gathered in the ballroom of the Report Holds Board Of Education Should Allocate Own Funds

The budgetary procedure for Washington's school system was described last night by the public school committee of the Washington Board of Trade as "tiresome, needlessly complicated, time-consuming and expensive."

George E. Keneipp, chairman of the committee, told the Board of Trade at its January meeting in the Mayflower Hotel that one result of the budgetary policy was a "somewhat acute" problem of acquiring land for schools. No planned program for school purposes has ever been approved, he said, and consequently when the time has come to build, desirable land which might have been purchased earlier at a reasonable price has become prohibitively high.

Non-Resident System Scored

Keneipp also criticized the costly burden placed on the District of Columbia by the obligation to teach nonresident students. There are 2,246 such nonresident students, and the cost to the taxpayers is $232,514 a year. It was proposed that the Ickes, Gannett Debate Free Press in U. S.

Cabinet Official Says Newspapers 'Shackled,' Publisher Replies 'No'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12—Secretary Ickes and Frank Gannett debated tonight the question "Do We Have a Free Press," the newspaper publisher returning an emphatic "yes," and the Cabinet officer asserting the press had been put in "shackles" by private interests and owners themselves.

Gannett contended that "no other form of press control" need be feared, given freedom from "governmental domination or censorship."

Their speeches were prepared for "America's Town Meeting of the Air," and broadcast nationally and by short wave to Europe and South America.

Boos and Applause

The debate drew hisses and boos as well as applause.

At one point in Gannett's speech a woman in the audience shouted "liar." Boos followed.

Gannett, owner of 19 newspapers and three radio stations, was interrupted before conclusion of his prepared address by George V. Denny.

Father Smothers Paralytic Boy, 17, With Chloroform

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—For years Louis Greenfield was tortured by the suffering of his backward and chronically paralyzed son and today the son, Jerry, 17, was dead by chloroform pressed in saturated handkerchiefs to his nose during a seizure of paralysis.

Bronx County District Attorney Samuel Foley said the father told him he administered the lethal anesthetic with calm deliberation.

Greenfield was charged with homicide after prolonged questioning.

Greenfield said the boy had complained of a severe headache and he administered the chloroform with the statement that "This will fix it."

Vermont Votes Fund to Uphold State's Rights

Woodring and Aiken Square Off for Fight On Flood Control

Secretary of War Woodring and the State of Vermont last night were squared off for a finish fight over an issue which the Republican Commonwealth government saw as a threat to State rights.

The fighting Vermont Governor, George D. Aiken, was bulwarked by a fund of $67,500 hastily appropriated by his Legislature to resist efforts of the War Department to take over lands in the State for flood-control purposes without a formal agreement insisted upon by the State.

Here, Secretary Woodring issued a statement citing provisions of the flood control act approved last June 28, which reads:

'Notwithstanding any restrictions, limitations or requirements of prior consent provided by any other act, the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to acquire in the name of the United States title to all lands, easements and rights-of-way necessary for any dam and reservoir project or channel improvement or channel rectification project for flood control . . .

Aiken Sees "Assault"

"I propose," Woodring said, "to follow the same procedure in Vermont as I have . . . in New York and other States. I cannot accept lands transferred to the Federal Government if any restrictions are imposed by the State."

The lands involved are for a proposed flood control dam at Union Village, Vt. Woodring said examination of Vermont statutes did not disclose any conflict with the Federal law and the necessity of formal agreements is eliminated.

At Montpelier, Aiken declared the Federal Government's "secret motive was 'domination,' and its actions constituted an 'assault' on 'our sovereign rights.'"

At his bidding, the Legislature petitioned Congress to direct the Secretary of War to sign an agreement for the project.

Observers here concluded the issue was headed for the Supreme Court.

Doctor of 'Sonny Boy' Tangle Slain by His Brother-in-Law

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Detectives announced tonight that John Quinn confessed he had shot and killed his brother-in-law, Dr. Gordon E. Mordorff, a major figure in the 1936 "Sonny Boy" paternity tangle.

DR. MORDOFF

Quinn was arrested at his home seven hours after Dr. Mordoff was fatally wounded this afternoon while running from his office in suburban Wilmette.

Gordon Mordoff 2d, son of the slain physician, had told police that Quinn had accused his father of being responsible for his mother's death and had been hunting for the doctor.

A woman patient and two children in an adjoining room screamed in terror as the slayer fled down a second-floor corridor and escaped.

The killer fired once at Mordoff in the victim's own office in suburban Wilmette, and then pursued him with smoking pistol while Mordoff ran screaming into the adjoining office of Dr. Floyd McGrath.

McGrath, aroused by the disturbance, had opened the door to his reception room when the assailant fired again at the fleeing Mordoff. The bullet struck Mordoff in the shoulder, went through his body and struck McGrath in the abdomen. McGrath suffered only a flesh wound.

"I yelled, 'my God, don't kill me!'" cGrath told police.

Relief Cut Kept; House Votes Today

Minority to Ask Even Greater Slash; Maneuver to Force Record Vote Fails

With the strong backing of the House Appropriations Committee, a 17 per cent slash in the President's deficiency relief estimates yesterday rode through a storm of debate toward the first outright test of Administration strength in the House.

The President's $875,000,000 bill to tide WPA through the next five months, cut to $725,000,000 by a 20 to 12 vote of the House Appropriations Committee, was slated for a vote before twilight tonight.

Restoration Dims

Chance of restoration of the full amount dimmed as a parliamentary maneuver to force a record House vote on the amount of the cut went down to committee defeat.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, sponsor of the unsuccessful bid for strategical advantage, immediately took the floor in support of an amendment offsetting the slash. Cannon is ranking Democrat on the committee and former House parliamentarian.

With committee Democrats sharply divided, Representative Taylor, of Colorado, committee chairman, joined Representative Woodrum, of Virginia, sub-committee head, in the showdown fight to sustain the cut.

On the one hand, Woodrum urged the House not to "rush appropriations and spending without increasing our revenue and with no alarm over the increased national debt."

"In this bill we provide generously for the unfortunate citizens of our country, yet we have not lost sight of our ultimate objectives."

Taking the Administration side, Cannon, twice a visitor at the White House in the last two days, condemned the committee slash of $150,000,000 from the bill as "arbitrary." He said the committee met "with a preconceived notion to cut whatever figure was recommended in the budget."

"This is a proposal to discharge 1,150,000 persons from employment," declared the Missourian. "Let's clear away the underbrush and get down to facts. This is a proposition to take food, clothing and shelter in the dead of winter away from four or five million people, depending on the number of dependents these men and women have.

Bigger Cut Sought

Obviously enjoying the majority split, House Republicans, led by Representative Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the committee, prepared to move for still deeper slashes in the House today. Taber will ask appropriation of only a small figure to carry WPA through April 7, and insist that Congress meanwhile determine relief policies undisturbed by emergency pressure.

Across the Capitol, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, was drafting a permanent formula for distribution of relief funds on a geographic unemployment need basis, after a brief executive meeting of his special unemployment committee. Whatever deficiency figure the House approves today, it is

Police Find Weary Lads Who Played G-Men All Night

Eleven-year-old Jimmy Wise stayed home from John Burroughs School yesterday to rest up from an all-night 20-mile game of "G-Man."

Jimmy, who lives at 1803 Kearney street northeast, and his chum, Leon Margullis, 12, of 3214 Eighteenth street northeast, chose Federal agent roles while playing Wednesday in the freight yards at Fourth and T streets northeast.

While police searched for the lads at the request of anxious parents, they pursued an imaginary quarry across the District line and into Prince Georges County, Md.

Local police authority, in the shape of County Officer R. Arnold Taylor, closed the "Federal" case early this morning when the weary G-Men were picked up on an Upper Mariboro street and sent home to bed.

Governor Horner Suffers Setback

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois, who had been reported recovering from a serious heart ailment, suffered a slight setback today.

The 60-year-old chief executive was to have conferred with four Illinois officials, members of the regency administering affairs of state during his illness, but a turn for worse in his condition made the meeting impossible.

Cedillo Slain In Brush With Federal Troops

Mexican Rebel Meets Death in Hills Where He Defied Cardenas

By the Associated Press.

Mexico City, Jan. 12.—Ex-Gen. Saturnino Cedillo, leader of an abortive uprising against President Lazaro Cardenas last spring, was killed yesterday in an encounter with federal troops, the war department disclosed today.

Long-time dictator of San Luis Potosi state, Cedillo met death in the rugged mountains of that central Mexican region where he had found refuge from pursuing troops for seven months.

The war department said his body, "fully identified," was found after troops dispersed a band of rebels headed by Cedillo near the village of La Viznaga

Also left dead on the field after a 35-minute battle with the band of 17 men was the body of Elodio Cedillo, identified as a relative of Saturnino Cedillo.

A Mexican Indian of about 46, Cedillo was secretary of agriculture in Cardenas' cabinet until 1937 when he broke with the President in the belief division of farmlands among the peons was being carried out too rapidly.

Cedillo retired to his Las Palomas ranch where he had at his disposal a peasant army of 18,000 men

Brig. Gen. Henriquez Guzman, the military commander of San Luis Potosi, who reported his death, was ordered to send the body to Cedillo's ranch to be surrendered to his family.

Md. Father, 80, Saddened by Death of Triplets

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Leonardtown, Md., Jan. 12.—Efforts to save the lives of triplets born Tuesday to Mrs. Annie Burroughs, 33, wife of John Benjamin Burroughs, 80-year-old farmer, failed, despite strenuous efforts to keep them alive in incubators, physicians at St. Mary's Hospital announced tonight.

Burroughs is the father of 14 other children. He married his present wife—his third—when she was 15. They had five youngsters before the triplets were born.

The triplets—two girls and boy—were born Tuesday night and early Wednesday. The births were premature, and Mrs. Burroughs was attended only by a colored midwife, when the first baby was born. The midwife summoned aid, but the boy died soon after reaching the hospital, one of the girls died Wednesday and the second girl died today.

Cummings Clears Exile, Scores Nazis

Jewish Immigrant Absolved of 'Moral Turpitude' in Farewell Legal Opinion

A denunciation of the methods of Nazi Germany is contained in the last legal opinion of Homer S. Cummings before vacating the office of Attorney General, the Justice Department revealed yesterday.

The opinion, made public by Frank Murphy, his successor, absolves a Jew convicted by a German court for making a false statement concerning his property from "moral turpitude" as defined by United States immigration laws.

The Jew, designated by the initials "A. R."—one of the many subjected to Nazi terrorism—had applied for a visa to enter this country. His German "criminal" record had caused the United States consul to question whether this country would classify him as a felon.

The State Department, on December 2, referred the case to Cummings for an opinion.

The latter replied it would appear that the false statements for which the visa applicant was convicted "were performed under a compulsion as great as it was unjust." He added:

"The alternatives open to the alien were to remain in Germany and be reduced to a state of penury and serfdom or to seek another life in another land.

"In selecting the latter alternative, he was confronted with the necessity of going forth with his dependent family stripped of all his possessions or seeking to retain what was rightfully his own, in avoidance of a statute and a procedure which cannot be defended on the basis of morals or justice.

Advised Granting of Visa

"It was a form of duress which in good conscience we would not be justified in ignoring.

"I do not believe that the term 'moral turpitude,' as it is generally understood, can properly be ascribed to the conduct of this alien. I advise that you would be warranted in granting him a visa."

The opinion admittedly was highly unusual, although not without precedent. State Department officials pointed out that the Attorney General occasionally had been called upon to pass on questions of "moral turpitude" in connection with immigration visa applications.

No instance could be cited, however, where the Attorney General so forcefully had called attention to the differences in government in this country, and a foreign land.

Cummings pointed out that "moral turpitude" would be used in classification of persons convicted by courts of this country of "false swearing."

"However," he said, "in view of the claim made in this case that the crime was political in nature or had political aspects, the question whether it is in its essence one debarring the alien from entry is a question which, if presented to a court in the United States, would, in my opinion, require consideration in the light of the present-day situation in Germany."

State Department officials explained that a person convicted of a felony in a foreign country is adjudged to be guilty of "moral turpitude," and, as a result, would be barred under the immigration laws. "Moral turpitude," however, usually does not include misdemeanors.

"A. R." was convicted by the Court of Assizes at the District Court, Fuerth, Bavaria, February 2, 1938. He was sentenced to one year and two months imprisonment.

"It is well known indeed," Cummings declared, "that the economic

80% of Public For Armament Increases

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 12.—President Roosevelt's national defense program, proposing a huge peacetime array of armed might, is one form of Federal spending which is welcomed by an overwhelming majority of American voters.

GALLUP

Surveys by the American Institute of Public Opinion find that although a substantial number of voters think that on the whole the Federal Government is spending too much money at the present time, nevertheless there is virtually no sentiment for reducing the particular outlays that go for defense.

In fact, the most recent studies show that more than eight in every ten voters want to see the Army and Navy increased, and an even larger proportion—nine in every ten—favor a larger air force. The surveys also show that a majority are even willing to pay higher taxes to support an enlarged defense program.

Thus it seems clear that as debates over the defense bill are

Duce, British Part; Views Unchanged

Divergent Attitudes On European Problems Remain After Parley

By James M. Minifie
Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, Jan. 12.—Wide divergences between British and Italian viewpoints were admitted in British circles today to have been disclosed in talks between Premier Mussolini and Prime Minister Chamberlain, the second and last of which was held today. This had been expected, it was said, and nothing was lost by the exchange of views.

Following the meeting between Chamberlain and his host today, Chamberlain made public a statement saying:

"No new commitments or arrangements or agreements have either been asked for or entered into by either side."

A British spokesman added that the Prime Minister and Mussolini today continued, and in Chamberlain's opinion, satisfactorily finished their survey of Europe, stating their respective positions and their understanding of each other's side. No further formal talks are anticipated.

To Visit Pope Today

Chamberlain will have an audience tomorrow with Pope Pius XI.

The fact is Chamberlain stood his ground and resisted any attempt—if any were made—to inveigle him into "mediating" in the France-Italy dispute. The bulwark prepared by the French ambassador at London, Charles Corbin, and by Premier

Roosevelt Asks 552 Millions to Expand Arms; Decries War Talk

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt's "minimum program for the necessities of defense" asking $552,000,000 in new authorizations for air, land and sea fighting power last night received prompt Congressional right of way.

The emergency request asked $450,000,000 for the Army, with $300,000,000 set aside for 3,000 new planes. For new Navy bases and air material $65,000,000 was estimated. Another $27,000,000 was recommended to strengthen Canal Zone defenses.

With existing authorizations, the new recommendations would make possible combined Army and Navy plane strength more than double the present 4,000 level. The message set no top.

The new program, complementing the $1,126,000,000 regular budget estimates for national defense, was laid before Congress with a Presidential injunction that the need is "imperative" and a warning against war "hysteria."

"It is equally sensational and untrue to take the position that we must at once spend billions of additional money for building up our land, sea and air forces on the one hand, or to insist that no further additions are necessary on the other," the President told Congress.

"Devoid of all hysteria, this program is but a minimum of requirements."

The response in Congress was immediate.

In the House, Charman May of the Military Affairs Committee prepared a bill to build up the Army's plane strength to 6,000 planes, over a period of three years. This is approximately 4,000 more planes than the Army now has, and slightly in excess of the President's figure.

Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said he already has drafted a bill providing for priority recommendations in the recent Hepburn report on needed new air, submarine, destroyer and mine bases on both coasts and in island territories. May and Vinson said they will introduce their bills next week.

Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, called a meeting of his group for this morning to consider the program at once.

Walsh Favors Recommendations

Indicating his committee will meet shortly, Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, Senate Naval Affairs chairman, said he favored those defense steps found necessary and promised "thorough examination

Warden's Aide Is Found Guilty In 'Baking' Deaths

Philadelphia, Jan. 12 (AP).—Frank A. Craven, former deputy warden of the Philadelphia County Prison, was convicted of involuntary manslaughter tonight for the death of one of four convicts last summer in superheated punishment cells.

The conviction carries a possible penalty of 18 months to 3 years' imprisonment.

A jury of seven men and five women deliberated three hours. They ignored the prosecution's request for a second-degree murder verdict.

Craven was charged with being in control of the prison when 25 hunger-striking convicts were herded into "Klondike," a punishment building heated by steam radiators.

Washingtonian, 26, Hears From Mother He Never Knew

Twenty-six years ago Francis J. Smith was born at Buffalo, N. Y. Yesterday he received the first word he has ever had from his mother.

knew for the first time who she is, where she lives, and indeed, that she lives at all.

Smith, a computer for the District Water Department, found in his mail box a letter with his name written in ink across the top of the envelope. His address was typed below. Inside was a letter, short, earnest, pathetic.

"I have been trying all these years to locate you," it said, and mentioned that those years had not been without their troubles—"times have been hard with me." It was signed Mrs. Jean Smith Wilson, of Buffalo.

"Long ago I had given up any idea of ever finding my mother," Smith said. "Right now, although I've satisfied myself this letter actually is from my mother, I don't have any special feeling about it."

Would he go to Buffalo at once to see her?

"If I could, I'd go right now. But I can't go—financial reasons."

Smith said he was born at St. Mary's Infant Asylum, at Buffalo and grew up in various Catholic orphan asylums there. When he was 16, he said, he was sent to work on a farm. He was not there long.

"I didn't like anything about it," he said, "and I ran away."

How his mother found him here he is not at all sure.

All that, though, concerns him little. His principal aim is to go to his mother, if he can, and find out for himself if he can capture some of the emotion which passed him by when she reached across 26 years to touch her son.

Senators Hear Murphy's Story Of Strike Today

Hearing Called at His Request Though He Has Sub-Committee Approval

Frank Murphy, former Michigan Governor whose appointment as Attorney General is awaiting Senate confirmation, will get a chance today to tell a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee his story of the Michigan "sit-down" strikes.

Acting on the red-headed Cabinet member's request, Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, sub-committee chairman, has directed the group to assemble at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Murphy, at his second press conference yesterday, made plain that he wanted an opportunity to tell the "real story." There have been numerous misstatements, he feels, about the part he played.

He's Already Approved

The sub-committee, however, has approved Murphy's nomination and is ready to recommend to the full committee that he be confirmed. Logan said the group took this action without calling him to testify because no protest against his appointment or demand for hearing had been received.

At his first press conference last week, and in subsequent telephone conversations with Senators Logan, Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, judiciary committee chairman, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan; Murphy revealed his desire to be heard.

"It has been the long-established practice," Logan explained, "not to hold hearings on appointments unless protests or demands for hearings are received.

"If the Attorney General wants to be heard, however, the sub-committee will be delighted to listen to him."

Approval of Murphy's nomination was moved at a meeting of the sub-committee Tuesday by Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho. No dissenting voice was raised among the other six members, who, besides Logan, are Senators Hatch, of New Mexico, and Pittman, of Nevada, Democrats; Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and Norris (Independent), of Nebraska.

Would Clear All Doubt

Murphy said he would be reluctant to enter upon his duties as Attorney General unless he could clear up all doubt concerning the way in which he handled the "sit-down" strikes.

He said he was writing Logan a letter informing him of his desire to be heard.

Murphy said he thought it in the public interest that he "submit" himself to "cross-examination."

"I do not want the confidence of the public in this office impaired . . .

"A great many mistatements have gone out. That they have gone unchallenged and become somewhat established by repetition is probably my own fault. But at the time (of the strikes) I did not want to say anything, because, if I had become involved in controversies or had appeared to take sides, the effect would have been to impair my usefulness as a mediator. I wanted above everything else to be in a position to guide the negotiations to a successful conclusion in a civilized way."

He said he had mentioned his desire to testify to President Roosevelt, with whom he had lunch at the White House yesterday.

Taylor to Seek House Sentiment on Appropriation Items Veto for President

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Taylor (Democrat), Colorado, of the House Appropriations Committee, said yesterday he soon would sound out sentiment for giving the President power to veto individual items in appropriations bills.

TAYLOR

"If the President had such power," he said, "it would mean savings of millions of dollars in Government expenses every year. There is no reason why he shouldn't have it. Nearly every State grants the power to its Governor."

Some legislators contend a constitutional amendment would be necessary to change the system. Opponents say the "item veto" would give a President too great control over acts of Congress.

The joint Congresisonal committee appointed to investigate the TVA asked yesterday for $25,000 additional funds and until April 1 to complete its report. Senator Donahey (Democrat), Ohio, is chairman of the Senate-House group which conducted extensive hearings on the Government power agency, and which was given $50,000 last April.

The Illinois delegation in the House was completed yesterday when John C. Martin, Representative-at-large, and Representative Maciejewski, both Democrats, were sworn in by Speaker Bankhead.

Martin, former State treasurer of Illinois, could not take the oath until his successor qualified for the State office and Maciejewski, treasurer of Cicero, Ill., delayed taking his oath until he had signed some city bonds.

The Senate confirmed Chester W. Nimitz, Albert T. Church, William R. Furlong, Arthur B. Cook, Harold G. Bowen, Standord C. Hooper, John H. Newton, Wilhelm L. Friedell, and John W. Wilcox, jr., to be rear admirals in the United States Navy. It approved promotions of 1,156 others, ranging from lieutenants to captains.

Wagner's Bill Doubles USHA Slum Program

Senator Again Proposes Billion Dollar Federal Mortgage Bank

Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, yesterday introduced a bill to increase loan funds of the United States Housing Authority by $800,000,000, doubling its already authorized program, and to enable it to enter into additional contracts for annual contributions of $45,000,000.

The Senator also re-introduced his bill to create a $1,000,000,000 Federal mortgage bank, which, he said, "is designed by comprehensive yet conservative action to fill a gap in the national financial structure to the end of stabilizing mortgage practice and easing mortgage credit." Under the terms of the bill the bank would be charged with preventing periodic "frozen" conditions in financial institutions.

Commenting on his bill to increase loan funds of the Housing Authority's subsidized slum-clearance, low-cost housing program, Wagner said "all of the funds made available to the United States Housing Authority in 1937 and 1938 are now covered by contracts or earmarkings for local housing authorities, so that no further projects can be undertaken until Congress makes additional funds available to the authority.

"The present bill proposes to increase the authority of the USHA to issue its own bonds for the strictly repayable loan funds in the manner already provided by law, for the purpose of raising these funds. The issuance of such bonds will not affect the national debt or the budget."

Representative Joseph W. Byrns (Democrat), Tennessee, introduced a bill in the House calling for reduction of interest rates on outstanding HOLC mortgages from 5½ to 3½ per cent.

Berle Given Leave For Teaching Work At Columbia U.

By the Associated Press.

Adolph A. Berle, jr., last survivor of the original "brain trust," will take a four-month leave of absence beginning in February in order to teach at Columbia University.

He has been trying for months to get a respite from his job as Assistant Secretary of State. Last August, he resigned with the intention of teaching economics at Columbia, but President Roosevelt deferred accepting the resignation so Berle would be on duty at the State Department during the European crisis.

When the crisis abated, the President, instead of accepting the resignation, named Berle to be Hull's right-hand man at the Lima Pan-American conference.

Friends say Berle wants now to get a little distance away from Washington to do some serious thinking on the course of the Nation in the next few years and to get his thoughts on paper. He believes considerable thinking and planning should be done for the next economic crisis which in his opinion should come around 1941.

Fahy Attacks Dismissals of Sit-Downers

High Court to Rule on Employers Who Commit 'Unfair Practices'

An attorney for the National Labor Relations Board contended yesterday before the Supreme Court that an employer who commits "unfair labor practices" cannot dismiss workmen who engage in a sit-down strike.

This contention was made by Charles Fahy, general counsel of the Labor Relations Board, in one of three labor cases argued before the tribunal. They are expected to produce opinions clarifying the rights of striking employes.

Fahy challenged a Federal circuit court decision that the Fansteel Metallurgical Corporation of North Chicago had the right to dismiss employes who seized two key buildings in 1937 and held them for nine days.

He asserted the sit-down resulted from refusal of the corporation to bargain collectively with representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America.

The national labor relations act, Fahy said, gave the board power to order reinstatement of employes if there had been unfair labor practices by their employer. He explained this was done to give the board latitude in "making effective the policies of the act."

Fahy will continue at noon tomorrow, followed by Max Swiren, Fansteel attorney.

One of the other cases involved a labor board contention that men who strike in connection with a labor dispute retain the status of employes even though under contract not to strike.

The dispute involved directly the Columbian Enameling & Stamping Co., of Terre Haute, Ind.

The third controversy concerned the validity of a board order directing the Sands Manufacturing Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, to reinstate 48 employes.

All three cases were lost by the board in circuit courts. Supreme Court decisions will be delivered in a few weeks.

Hopkins Must Testify Again On WPA Job

Sen. Johnson Forces Continuance on Politics In Kentucky Primary

The Senate Commerce Committee, acting on motion of Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, yesterday decided to continue today its questioning of Harry Hopkins, nominated to be Secretary of Commerce, on politics in relief during his administration of WPA.

After extensive questioning of Hopkins Wednesday and a briefer session yesterday, Johnson asked the former relief head for the results of WPA's own investigation of charges of political coercion of relief workers in last summer's Kentucky primary, made in a series of newspaper articles by Thomas L. Stokes, Washington correspondent.

Hopkins replied that he could not remember the details, but if given time would be able to answer the Senator's questions. Although Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, contended that the report of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee covered the charges and no further examination of Hopkins was necessary, the committee acceded to Johnson's request.

Calls Charges "Trivial"

Hopkins testified yesterday the Stokes charges were "trivial" in some cases, and "totally inaccurate" in others. Johnson replied that regardless of Hopkins' opinion of them he wanted to question him on the allegations "because he is here defending himself."

"I am not here defending myself," Hopkins retorted. "I am here at the request of the committee, but I don't want to appear here as a defendant."

"You can appear here as a plaintiff if you want to," Johnson replied.

Admit Error

Hopkins suggested that members of the campaign funds committee might tell the Commerce Committee "whether as a result of their report they think there is evidence that in their judgment I should not be confirmed as Secretary of Commerce."

"I know they think I should have acted differently," Hopkins added, "and I have tried to show as frankly as I could that I felt I should have acted differently in some matters."

Says He Registered as Socialist

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The New York Sun said today Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins is shown on board of elections records as having been registered here as a Socialist Party member in [illegible] and 1916.

The Sun pointed out that Socialist vote fell off in the national campaign in 1916, totaling 750,000 votes as compared with 901,000 in 1912.

In New York City—where Hopkins said at the Washington hearing, he sought "decent government"—a "reform" mayor, John Purroy Mitchel, was in office on a fusion ticket for the 1913-1917 term. In the next mayoralty election in 1917, Morris Hillquit, Socialist, polled 145,332 votes as compared with 32,057 and 82,607 for Socialist candidates in 1913 and 1921, respectively.

Hillquit cut heavily into votes that Mitchel received in the previous election and they were both beaten by John F. Hylan, Democrat. The Sun said Hopkins did not specify, the choice of any party in 1917.

U. S. Employes Back Civil Service

The National Federation of Federal Employes yesterday sent letters to Congressmen asking them to oppose the joint resolution to exclude WPA administrative employes from civil service.

Luther C. Steward, N. F. F. E. president, wrote: "The wholly erroneous idea is altogether too prevalent that bringing Federal positions into the competitive classified service tends to make such positions permanent and to fasten for all time an additional expense upon the Federal Treasury. Such is not the case. The Congress at any time, by declining further to appropriate funds, can eliminate positions, either singly or by wholesale."

Big Gamblers Defy G-Men As Drive Opens

Conviction of Rowans On Tapped Wire Evidence Upset

Undaunted by news that G-men were after them, kingpin gamblers of the Greater Washington area yesterday continued to practice their profession, while two new developments appeared in the picture.

The Maryland Court of Appeals at Annapolis reversed conviction of two alleged bookmakers, operating within a block of the District line, on evidence obtained by wire-tapping.

Ben G. Wilkinson, new State's Attorney for Montgomery County, declared war on gambling there and Chief of County Police J. William Garrett called a conference of police sergeants for today to discuss strategy.

Rowans Win Appeal

The convictions reversed by the appelate court were those of Joseph J. Rowan and Eleanor E. Rowan, charged with operating and maintaining a handbook betting establishment in Takoma Park. They appealed on the grounds Sergeant Theodore F. Vollten, of Montgomery County police, had engaged a telephone company employe to tap wires to the three telephones in their home.

Evidence obtained in this fashion was held inadmissable because Vollten and his aides were unable to identify positively voices answering phones. The court inferred that evidence obtained over tapped wires might be admitted if the speaker could be identified properly. A new trial for the Rowans was ordered.

Know Devices Illegal

In his declaration of war against gambling in Montgomery County, Wilkinson said he has been informed "a large number" of slot and pinball machines were being operated in the county "in direct violation of the law."

"I feel," he said, "that the distributors have sufficient knowledge so that there can be no doubt in their minds as to what machines are legal. I cannot help but feel that they have had sufficient time in which to comply with the law—I mean to the letter—for that is what I am going to demand as State's attorney."

He had been assured by Chief Garrett, he said "that he would begin at once to make a survey of various types of gaming machines now operating in the county and, assured of the full co-operation of my office, said that those found operating illegally would be seized at once."

Pickup Men Active

Meanwhile, scores of pickup men, who collect numbers bets from hundreds of writers in the District, continued scurrying back and forth across the Prince Georges County line.

Rigid secrecy was clamped on the Government's campaign to destroy the big numbers bankers, who migrated to the tolerant atmosphere of Prince Georges County after the new anti-numbers law was enacted for the District.

The Government hopes to trap these big operators by invoking the Federal law against criminal conspiracy. The theory is that since every law of the District is a statute of the United States, and that since the numbers operators in Prince Georges have sent their runners over the District line to collect bets, they have conspired to violate a District-Federal statute. Such a conspiracy would be a violation of the Federal law against criminal conspiracy.

No More Publicity

The high official of the Justice Department who disclosed Wednesday that a Federal Bureau of Investigation inquiry had been agreed upon said yesterday that from now on there would be no public statements about the numbers drive. The new policy coincided with that of District Attorney Pine, who was said Wednesday to have suggested the conspiracy prosecutions in conferences with attorneys of the Justice Department criminal division.

Pine Is Silent

Pine yesterday continued to decline comment on the numbers situation.

Before Justice Laws in District Court today will be arraigned six defendants in the first conspiracy case arising out of the numbers campaign. Attorney Juan R. Quijano and five others are scheduled to plead to an indictment, returned Wednesday, which charged nine violations of the lottery laws and a criminal conspiracy, setting out 28 overt acts.

Pooh-Pooh and Tush-Tush, D.C. Residents Say, To Idea Friday, 13th, Is Unlucky Day

Nina Starkey (left) is No. 13 in the row of 16 Roxyettes at the Earle and isn't superstitious a bit but she crosses her fingers just for luck. Sylvia Dale, appearing at the National, shows she's not afraid of dressing room 13, but—she won't whistle in dressing rooms and knows just what to do when she spills salt

Today, Friday the thirteenth, is just another day to most Washingtonians, permanent or transient, although bad luck, according to tradition, is due to play a double-header.

Capital residents greet such things with a "pish" or at the very least a "tush." They know too much to be afraid.

The same attitude was discovered yesterday in research through Washington playhouses, where one may expect to find superstitions if anywhere. One show girl cheerfully posed in dressing-room No. 13. Another said that she dances No. 13 in the chorus line-up without the slightest fear. At the same time she crossed her fingers when she said she expects no bad luck today.

Fireman Only Victim

Perhaps Washingtonians are bold because the most serious thing that has happened here on Friday the thirteenth since 1933 is that a fireman slipped on his way to a warehouse fire and sprained his ankle. That is, if you leave out of account the feelings of the owners of the warehouse.

Here's how some of those interviewed yesterday look at the matter:

"No, I am not superstitious," said Miss Sylvia Dale, who occupies dressing room No. 13 at the National. "And I've been so careful on Friday the thirteenth that I've had very good luck. Of course I don't whistle in dressing rooms. That means the girl nearest the door will get her notice. The jinx has to be lifted by going outside, turning around three times, and cussing. I do knock wood before opening nights. I cross my fingers for luck. And if I spill some salt, I throw some of it over my left shoulder. But I'm not supersitious."

She Even Whistles

At the Earle Theater Miss Nina Starkey is No. 13 in the row of sixteen dancing Roxyettes. "I even whistle in dressing rooms," she boasted. "But of course I keep my fingers crossed when I go on the first time in a new show."

At Columbia Hospital room No. 13 is in the obstetrical ward.

"I've never known a patient to be superstitious about it," reported Miss Ruth Schul, supervisor of nurses. "Usually they are in a happy state of mind when they go in there, and there has never been any bad luck connected with the room."

Had Twins in Room 13

"Mrs. Dorsey was in that room not long ago," said R. C. Dorsey, of the division of information and extension, Farm Credit Administration, 1300 E street northwest. "And her room mate had twins."

Dorsey was interviewed because of the number of the building in which he works. D. A. Wright, head of the purchase and supply section in the same fatefully numbered building, occupies room 1300, and has a telephone extension number 130.

"I like the number 13," Wright said, "and I like black cats. There hasn't been any bad luck here."

Tears $2 Bill

The Post's superstition reporter had some lunch on his way back to the office, and paid with a $2 bill. He noticed that the waitress tore off a corner of the bill.

"Why do you do that?"

"I don't know. It's just the wise thing to do."

The whim struck him to question an elevator operator.

"Expect any bad luck tomorrow?"

"I don't take no stock in those things," he answered, a bit cautiously. "If it happens, it happens. I don't exactly believe in predestination, but if it happens, it happens. That's all."

Snow Discomforts Sharecroppers

New Madrid, Mo., Jan. 12 (AP).—Snowstorm, on the heels of an all-day rain, added to the discomfort tonight of southeast Missouri's 1,000 tenent farmers who are encamped in the open in what they have termed a demonstration starting Tuesday against sharecropper poverty.

The driving snow, however, failed to force many of the farm families from their encampments in this vicinity, although the crowds were reported diminishing in adjoining counties.

Van Duzer Gives Drivers Advice On License Tags

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer yesterday advised motorists who fail to receive applications for new license tags by next Wednesday, to apply in person at the Traffic Department, 451 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Van Duzer said applications were being mailed to all drivers with no warrants outstanding against them. Those who have failed to pay fines and others who have not notified the Traffic Department of changes in address must call at the office in person before their applipication wil be issued.

The 1938 tags will be good until midnight February 28. Motorists will not be requerid to have their automobiles inspected until after they obtain the new plates. Post cards wil be mailed out to notify drivers when their cars will have to be at the testing station for inspection. Those inspections will begin April 1.

Accidental Shot Kills Girl, Hurls 2 At Hughesville

Hughesville, Md., Jan. 12 (AP).—An 8-year-old girl was killed today and two other children were wounded, one seriously, when a shotgun toppled over and discharged.

State police reported the three children, all colored, were sitting on a cot when their father dropped a chunk of wood on the floor and the vibration knocked over the gun.

Myrtle Rose Thomas, a daughter, died a few hours later in Leonardtown's St. Mary's Hospital of wounds in the pelvis. Eli Thomas, 10, was taken to Mercy Hospital, in Baltimore, seriously wounded through the abdomen and chest. Another girl, Marie Thomas, 6, was sent home after treatment for wounds about the hands.

Richberg Will Go to Mexico To Seek Agreement on Oil

Former Administrator of NRA to Leave Next Month to Press U. S. Claims For Compensation for Seized Property

Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, will go to Mexico next month to negotiate toward a settlement of claims of American companies against the Mexican government for expropriated oil lands, it was learned last night.

Although declining either to confirm or deny the report, Richberg said that he had been representing the oil companies "for some months." He declared he intends to refrain from public discussion of the affairs of the oil concerns, because "it is a private matter."

Much importance was attached here to word of the contemplated trip, inasmuch as a principal difficulty in the question was a claim by Mexico that the oil companies would not negotiate with her representatives on the possibility of a settlement.

The stand on the part of the American business concerns was based on the grounds that Mexico is without funds to make substantial compensation for the seized properties, and any financial means she might obtain in the future would come, in part at least, from sale of petroleum from wells taken from the companies.

Valuation of the expropriated properties has been another obstacle in negotiations, figures from Mexican sources and those from the American owners, as advanced in informal discussions, being so far apart as to appear to make an agreement difficult.

Ever since expropriation of the oil properties, the State Department has endeavored to bring about a settlement. Ambassador Josephus Daniels at Mexico City has been in frequent conference with officials there, and the Mexican Ambassador, Francisco Castillo Najera, and oil company officials have been somewhat regular separate visitors to the State Department. Secretary of State Hull said at his press conference Wednesday that more of the oil officials would be in to see him this week.

Extensive British oil properties were expropriated at the same time the American lands were taken over, and subsequent correspondence between Great Britain and Mexico grew so heated that diplomatic relations between the two countries were broken off.

Agreements late last year between Mexico and the United States on the claims of this country for agrarian lands taken from American owners in Mexico brought much satisfaction in both countries.

Mexico recently made a payment of about $500,000 under the agreement for compensation of the American owners, and it was said another payment of about $1,000,000 would be made within a few months.

Steady progress is reported in the work of the commissioners designated by both countries to determine valuation of the properties taken over. Four officials from the

New Farm Bill Offered With Broad Support

Given Both Houses; Expected to Unite Those Opposing Present Plan

By the Associated Press.

A broad farm bill, which its sponsors predicted would rally the support of practically all elements opposed to the present agricultural program, was introduced in the Senate and the House yesterday.

Under the bill, all dealers and processors would be required to pay not less than the cost of production price for products which they purchased or processed for domestic consumption.

Described by Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, as "a non-partisan answer to Secretary Wallace's challenge for a farm program," the bill had backing from farm State legislators of both major parties, including some Administration Democrats.

Introduced By Frazier

Senator Frazier (Republican), North Dakota, introduced the bill in the Senate. Other sponsors were Senators Wheeler (Democrat), Montana; Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma; Bulow (Democrat), South Dakota; Capper (Republican), Kansas; Shipstead (Farm-Labor), Minnesota; Nye (Republican), North Dakota; Russell (Democrat), Georgia; McCarran (Democrat), Nevada; Donahey (Democrat), Ohio; Burke (Democrat), Nebraska; Johnson (Democrat), Colorado; Lundeen (Farm-Labor), Minnesota; Gurney (Republican), South Dakota; Holman (Republican), Oregon; Bone (Democrat), Washington; Schwartz (Democrat), Wyoming, and La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin.

In the House the measure was presented by Representative Massingale (Democrat), Oklahoma; Lemke, O'Connor (Democrats), Montana; Pierce (Democrat), Oregon; Stefan (Republican), Nebraska; Gehrmann (Progressive), Wisconsin; Mundt (Republican), South Dakota, and Sweeney (Democrat), Ohio.

The bill retains certain features of the AAA, but discards the principle of limited production.

It would apply not only to the commodities now covered by the AAA, but also to all other farm products in which there was interstate or foreign commerce to the extent of $10,000,000 or more annually.

Gives Secretary Power

The Secretary of Agriculture would determine the cost of production of each farm product annually after holding hearings. He would estimate the volume of production, the portion required for domestic consumption and the portion remaining for warehouse reserves or export.

Dealers and processors would periodically deliver to the Secretary of Agriculture their warehouse reserves and export quantities, to be disposed of "to the best advantage in the world market."

If the world price of a product were below the domestic price, the tariff on imports of that product would be raised to the amount of the difference, plus 10 per cent.

The bill would leave infact the soil-conservation program, adjustments in freight rates on farm commodities, development of new uses and new markets, the Federal Surplus Commodity Corporation, loans on agricultural commodities and refunds to the Department of Agriculture of 30 per cent of the duties collected on imported farm products.

Lemke referred to the bill as a "streamlined version of the McAdoo-Eicher bill,' 'which failed in the Senate at the last session by only six votes.

Children Sell Drugs in N.Y., Agents Charge

17 Indictments Reveal Narcotics Bought As 'Easily as Apples'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—A startling story of children selling narcotics in the streets of Harlem "as openly as though they were selling apples and with a good deal more success" was told tonight by Treasury Department officials as the indictment of 17 persons was disclosed.

Among those charged with conspiracy and sale of narcotics was Carlos Cubela, steward of the steamer Santa Maria, which returned Secretary of State Hull and his party from the Pan-American conference in Lima.

Maj. Garland Williams, chief of the narcotics division here, said conditions in the populous colored and Latin-American section of Manhattan were "atrocious."

"Dealers fairly swarmed over a few poolrooms and restaurants with their wares, and they sold to men, women and children of all descriptions," Williams said. "Some of the narcotics were paid for in pennies begged on the streets.

The Treasury agent in active charge of the undercover investigation said that at times he was suspected of being a "stool pigeon" and that he "stole" a Government automobile to show he was a "right guy."

"The gang's password was 'manana no; manana no; manana no.' I got tired of hearing it and was glad when I could use it for the last time. That was when two of the main cogs in the machine were to introduce me to the ringleader, from whom I was to buy some 'stuff.' We met on a street corner, but one of the dealers spotted four Treasury agents parked across the street and whispered, 'Beat it, kids; the dicks.'

"I raised my hat—our signal—and all of us were collared in jig-time. I then told my surprised friends: 'Manana no; manana no; manana no. But jail today yes.'"

Assistant United States Attorney Abel I. Smith said ten defendants were under arrest and others probably were in Cuba and South America. He estimated the ring had smuggled in about $60,000 worth of one variety of narcotics on Grace liners from South America.

Two Planes Crash; 1 Killed, 3 Hurt

Atlanta, Jan. 12 (AP).—Crashes of two airplanes heading north from the Miami air races left one flier dead and three injured, while others were thrown off schedule by rain and fog in Georgia today.

Harold L. Knowlton, 22, of Westfield, N. Y., died here of injuries received in a forced landing late yesterday. Pilot James Earl McGwinn, of North East, Pa. Received a wrenched back and deep cut over an eye.

Jack Withers, of Danville, Va., and Dan Loftis, of Roxboro, N. C., were injured seriously by a crash of their little plane near Midville, Ga.

Aviator Kills Young Mother And Ends Own Life

Brackenridge, Pa., Jan. 12 (AP).—A 29-year-old aviator today shot and killed the attractive 21-year-old mother of three children and then killed himself, police reported.

Mrs. Virginia Grace Lydig and Anthony Camille were found dead in the former steel worker's quarters in a rooming house.

Mrs. Lydic, dressed only in a slip, was on a bed, police said, and Camille's body, clad in shorts and undershirt, was in a kneeling position at the side of the bed.

Police said Camille, the father of a child, was divorced, and that Mrs. Lydic was separated from her husband, whom she married while a high school sophomore.

Tweedsmuir May Succeed Envoy Here

Earl of Perth Slated To Follow Him as Canada's Viceroy

Lord Tweedsmuir, governor-general of Canada, is scheduled to succeed Sir Ronald Lindsay as British Ambassador here after the visit next June of King George and Queen Elizabeth, diplomatic circles heard yesterday.

At the Canadian post, it was said, the Earl of Perth, now the British Ambassador to Rome, will succeed Lord Tweedsmuir.

Although Lord Tweedsmuir's transfer to Washington has been rumored for some months, the British Government is reported reluctant to make the change if it will offend Canadians. Nevertheless, London officials are said to desire the Canadian governor general to come here as British Ambassador, because his wide reputation and friendly reception on his visit to this country several years ago would make him an exceptionally valuable adviser.

Sir Ronald to Retire

Sir Ronald Lindsay, who is in line for retirement, has had two extensions on his term of office here. His retirement was first postponed to permit conclusion of the negotiations of the recent Anglo-American trade agreement and a second extension was made to allow Sir Ronald to remain on duty here until after the visit of the King and Queen.

Lord Tweedsmuir, formerly known as John Buchan, has been a distinguished historian, journalist, novelist and statesman.

After studying at Glasgow University and Brasenose College, Oxford, where he won prizes for his historical essays and English verse, he studied at the Middle Temple, London, one of the four Inns of Court, and was called to the bar at the turn of the century.

He went to South Africa as private secretary to Lord Milner, British high commissioner after only a few months' practice as a lawyer, but returned to London in 1903. Four years later he became associated with a publishing firm and since has written nearly 50 books on legal, historical and narrative themes.

Perth Went to Rome

Lady Tweedsmuir is the former Susan Charlotte Grosvenor. They have three sons.

The Earl of Perth, formerly known as Sir Eric Drummond, was for many years secretary-general of the League of Nations. After leaving the League he was appointed British Ambassador to Rome where he continued to play a quiet but important part in the relations which have developed from the rise of Hitler in Germany, the disappearance of Austrian independence, the dismemberment of Czechoslovakia and attempts to solve the international tangle since the breakdown of the 1933 World Disarmament Conference.

He was attached to the British delegation to the peace conference after the World War and has been called "The Man Named in the Versailles Treaty" since his appointment as secretary-general of the League is included in the document.

Increase Arms, Tweedsmuir Urges Canada

By the Associated Press.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor General of Canada, told a new session of the Dominion Parliament today that expansion of Canada's defenses, especially military aviation, was imperative.

The Governor General said legislation would be introduced to establish a defense purchasing board.

"The government have considered that the uncertainties of the future and the conditions of modern warfare make it imperative that Canada's defenses be materially strengthened," he said in his opening speech.

He emphasized that relations continue on friendly terms with other countries, but asserted "the aggressive policies actively pursued on other continents inevitably had a disturbing effect on every part of the world."

Lord Tweedsmuir said the new United States-Canadian trade treaty which went into effect January 1 had opened wider markets for Canadian products. He asserted the pact brought about a great reduction in taxes on trade than had been made by any other country in recent years.

The Governor General expressed enthusiasm over the visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth to Canada next spring. He also hailed the visit of President Roosevelt last August as the occasion for "unusually warm demonstrations of friendship and understanding."

38 Reich Refugees Halt Temporarily At Ellis Island

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Jan. 12.—Thirty-eight German refugees, bound for Peru, whose temporary debarkcation at Ellis Island was asked of immigration authorities to permit them to obtain permanent visas for that country, arrived today among 141 refugees on the liner Imperial some bound for Bolivia and Chile.

The refugees were found to have visitors' visas valid for two months stay in Peru and so were permitted to sail on the Imperial when it departed later in the day. Ninety-five of the travelers who had relatives awaiting them were permitted to land for brief visits before sailing time.

One of the passengers, a woman traveling to meet her husband in Chile, was left in Marine Hospital, Staten Island, for an emergency operation.

President's Defense Message

Following is the text of the President's defense message to Congress:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my annual message to this Congress I have spoken at some length of the changing world conditions outside of the American Hemisphere which make it imperative that we take immediate steps for the protection of our liberties.

It would be unwise for any of us to yield to any form of hysteria. Nevertheless, regardless of political affiliations, we can properly join in an appraisal of the world situation and agree on the immediate defense needs of the Nation.

It is equally sensational and untrue to take the position that we must at once spend billions of additional money for building up our land, sea and air forces on the one hand, or to insist that no further additions are necessary on the other.

What needs to be emphasized is the great change which has come over conflicts between nations since the World War ended, and especially during the last five or six years.

Those of us who took part in the conduct of the World War will remember that in the preparation of the American armies for actual participation in battle, the United States, entering the war on April 6, 1917, took no part whatsoever in any major engagement until the end of May, 1918. In other words, while other armies were conducting the actual fighting, the United States had more than a year of absolute peace at home without any threat of attack on this continent, to train men, to produce raw materials, to process them into munitions and supplies and to forge the whole into fighting forces. It is even a matter of record that as late as the autumn of 1918, American armies at the front used almost exclusively French or British artillery and aircraft.

Calling attention to these facts does not remotely intimate that the Congress or the President have any thought of taking part in another war on European soil, but it does show that in 1917 we were not ready to conduct large scale land or air operations. Relatively we are not much more ready to do so today than we were then—and we cannot guarantee a long period free from attack in which we could prepare.

I have called attention to the fact that "we must have armed forces and defenses strong enough to ward off sudden attack against strategic positions and key facilities essential to insure sustained resistance and ultimate victory." And I have said "we must have the organization and location of those key facilities so that they may be immediately utilized and rapidly expanded to meet all needs without danger of serious interruption by enemy attack."

I repeat that "there is new range and speed to offense."

Therefore, it has become necessary for every American to restudy present defense against the possibilities of present offense against us.

Careful examination of the most imperative present needs leads me to recommend the appropriation at this session of the Congress, with as great speed as possible, of approximately $525,000,000, of which sum approximately $210,000,000 would be actually spent from the Treasury before the end of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1940.

The survey indicates that of this sum approximately $450,000,000 should be allocated for new needs of the Army, $65,000,000 for new needs of the Navy, and $10,000,000 for training of civilian air pilots.

The several items will be submitted to the appropriate committees of the Congress by the departments concerned, and I need, therefore, touch only on the major divisions of the total.

In the case of the Army, information from other nations leads us to believe that there must be a complete revision of our estimates for aircraft. The Baker Board report of a few years ago is completely out of date. No responsible officer advocates building our air force up to the total either of planes on hand or of productive capacity equal to the forces of certain other nations. We are thinking in the terms of necessary defenses and the conclusion is inevitable that our existing forces are so utterly inadequate that they must be immediately strengthened.

It is proposed that $300,000,000 be appropriated for the purchase of several types of airplanes for the Army. This should provide a minimum increase of 3,000 planes, but it is hoped that orders placed on such a large scale will materially reduce the unit cost and actually provide many more planes.

Military aviation is increasing today at an unprecedented and alarming rate. Increased range, increased speed, increased capacity of airplanes abroad have changed our requirements for defensive aviation. The additional planes recommended will considerably strengthen the air defenses of the continental United States, Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Canal Zone. If an appropriation bill can be quickly enacted, I suggest that $50,000,000 of the $300,000,000 for airplanes be made immediately available in order to correct the present lag in aircraft production due to idle plants.

Of the balance of approximately $150,000,000 requested for the Army, I suggest an appropriation of $110,000,000 to provide "critical items" of equipment which would be needed immediately in time of emergency, and which cannot be obtained from any source within the time and quantity desired—material such as anti-aircraft artillery, semi-automatic rifles, anti-tanks guns, tanks, light and heavy artillery, ammunition and gas masks. Such purchases would go far to equip existing units of the regular Army and the National Guard.

I suggest approximately $32,000,000 for "educational orders" for the Army—in other words, to enable industry to prepare for quantity production in an emergency, of those military items which are non-commercial in character and are so difficult of manufacture as to constitute what is known as "bottlenecks" in the problem of procurement.

The balance should be used, I believe, for improving and strengthening the seacoast defenses of Panama, Hawaii and the continental United States, including the construction of a highway outside the limits of the Panama Canal Zone, important to the defense of the zone.

The estimated appropriation of $65,000,000 for the Navy should be divided into (a) $44,000,000 for the creation or strengthening of Navy bases in both oceans in general agreement with the report of the Special Board which has already been submitted to the Congress, (b) about $21,000,000 for additional Navy airplanes and air material tests.

Finally, national defense calls for the annual training of additional air pilots. This training should be primarily directed to the essential qualifications for civilian flying. In co-operation with educational institutions, it is believed that the expenditure of $10,000,000 a year will give primary training to approximately 20,000 citizens.

Omits Reference To Definite Need

In the above recommendations for appropriations totaling $525,000,000, I have omitted reference to a definite need, which, however, relates to the implementing of existing defenses for the Panama Canal. The security of the canal is of the utmost importance. The peace garrison now there is inadequate to defend this vital link. This deficiency cannot be corrected with existing forces without seriously jeopardizing the general defense by stripping the continental United States of harbor defense and anti-aircraft personnel. The permanent garrison in the Canal Zone should be increased to provide the minimum personnel required to man the anti-aircraft and seacoast armament provided for the defense of the canal. Such personnel cannot be increased until additional housing facilities are provided—and, in the meantime, additional personnel must be trained. I recommend, therefore, an appropriation of $27,000,000 to provide an adequate peace garrison for the Canal Zone and to house it adequately. Five million dollars of this sum should be made available immediately in order that work on necessary construction can be initiated.

All of the above constitutes a well-rounded program, considered by me as Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy, and by my advisers to be a minimum program for the necessities of defense. Every American is aware of the peaceful intentions of the Government and of the people. Every American knows that we have no thought of aggression, no desire for further territory.

Nevertheless, as the Executive head of the Government, I am compelled to look facts in the face. We have a splendid asset in the quality of our manhood. But without modern weapons, and without adequate training, the men, however splendid the type, would be hopelessly handicapped if we were attacked.

The young men of this Nation should not be compelled to take the field with antiquated weapons. It would be economically unsound to provide in time of peace for all the modern equipment needed in a war emergency. But it would be nationally unsound not to provide the critical items of equipment which might be needed for immediate use, and not to provide for facilities for mass production in the event of war.

Devoid of all hysteria, this program is but the minimum of requirements.

I trust, therefore, that the Congress will quickly act on this emergency program for the strengthening of the defense of the United States.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

British, French Hail Roosevelt Arms Message

Germans and Italians Ask Whom U. S. Plans To Fight

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 12.—President Roosevelt's message to Congress calling for a half-billion dollar defense program encountered cheers from Europe's democracies and sarcasm from the dictator countries tonight.

British and French applauded the United States rearmament proposals, Nazi Germans and Italian Fascists asked against whom the American Government wanted to defend itself.

President Roosevelt's proposals were displayed prominently on the front pages of all morning newspapers in Berlin, two of which commented bitingly.

"In order to make the expenditure of $552,000,000 palatable to the American people the incomprehensible argument is again advanced that America must defend itself against 'sudden attack,'" said the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung.

U. S. "Seeing Ghosts"

"One may well ask once more who in the world is thinking of attacking America suddenly. Whoever seriously imagines such a thing chases shadows and sees ghosts that are not of this world."

The Berliner Tageblatt said: "The President did well to let some time elapse between this message and the scare story of the Martian invasion."

This newspaper said the purpose of the message was plainly to serve as "a special train to rush Roosevelt into his third Presidential term—an armament locomotive with a job-creating tender attached."

Reichschancellor Hitler's leading organ, Voelkischer Beobachter contented itself with a bold-faced caption which read: "Roosevelt Demands $1,600,000,000 for America's 'Defense.'"

Below was a smaller head reading: "Exciting Comparisons with America's War Preparedness before the World War."

Paris Envies U. S.

There was evident relief in Paris now that the "third great democracy" was discussing arming to a point where her strength would be felt in catch-as-catch-can world politics.

There was frank envy of a nation strong and rich enough to contemplate a special program almost double the total of France's ordinary arms budget for 1939 and equal to half of all arms appropriations both extraordinary and ordinary for 1939.

There was no official Italian comment, since newspapers had not had time to report the Roosevelt message, but unofficial quarters expressed the opinion that American rearmament might unleash another press campaign on the theme of "Belligerent Democracy."

Off the record, British officialdom was cheered by President Roosevelt's action — almost as though Prime Minister Chamberlain had proposed the same thing for Britain.

German Reply Possible

Former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, with open enthusiasm for the United States since his recent visit there, told his parliamentary constituents that Britons would welcome "the greatest possible national effort to place our armaments on a footing equal to our great responsibilities."

He said some people were asking whether British rearmament, organized on a purely peacetime basis, ever could match that of the dictatorships which he said was on a wartime basis.

"Defense means reorganizing the whole nation for defense," he said.

and consideration" of the President's request.

Of the total $552,000,000 in new appropriations recommended in the message, the President said about $210,000,000 actually would be spent by the Treasury in the next fiscal year.

Mr. Roosevelt said it would be economically unsound to provide in time of peace for all the modern equipment needed in a war emergency.

"But it would be nationally unsound not to provide the critical items of equipment which might be needed for immediate use, and not to provide for facilities for mass production in the event of war," he firmly added.

Asks Backing of All Parties

He asked Congress, "regardless of political affiliations," to join in an appraisal of the world situation and agree on the immediate defense needs of the Nation.

No increase in plane strength was asked for the Navy, which already has 2,000 and already is authorized to build 1,000 more. Representative Vinson said the Navy should rapidly build up to that limit.

Under present authorizations, and funds supplied in the regular 1940 budget, provision for reaching the Army's old goal of 2,300 planes previously had been made.

Could Attain Limit of 4,120

A little-known provision of a 1926 statute technically authorizes the Army to build far in excess of that amount—or 1,800 additional planes, it was learned. So legally now, provided funds are appropriated, the Army could attain a plane limit of 4,120 ships, plus additional construction provided under the President's new program.

While Mr. Roosevelt declared no responsible officer advocates plane construction or productive capacity "equal to the forces of certain other nations," he said existing estimates for aircraft need complete revision and concluded "our existing forces are so utterly inadequate that they must be immediately strengthened."

He asked that $50,000,000 of the $300,000,000 asked for Army aircraft be made immediately available "to correct the present lag in aircraft production due to idle plants."

8 Million for Coast Defense

Other funds asked in the new program would:

Provide $110,000,000 for "critical items" needed by the Army, such as anti-aircraft artillery, semi-automatic rifles, anti-tank guns, tanks, light and heavy artillery, ammunition and gas masks.

Make $32,000,000 available for "educational orders," enabling industry to prepare for quantity production of noncommercial military items that might be needed in emergency.

Supply $8,000,000 for strengthening sea-coast defenses of Panama, Hawaii and this continent.

Allocate $44,000,000 for the Navy to strengthen bases on both oceans and $21,000,000 for the Navy to build aircraft already authorized and conduct air material tests. Of this $2,500,000 would go to the naval aircraft factory in Philadelphia.

To finance the training of 20,000 new civilian pilots, under a National Youth Administration program previously announced, $10,000,000 provided.

And to provide an adequate peace garrison for the Panama Canal Zone and barracks to house the increased Canal force $27,000,000 was asked, with $5,000,000 made immediately available to start work on the barracks.

Program "We Can Afford"

The program was favorably received at the Capitol, with even some members of the neutrality group conceding it more moderate than they expected. Senate Majority Leader Barkley called it a program "we can afford;" Chairman Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee termed the plane request "extremely conservative," and Democrats generally called it "reasonable."

There was some Republican criticism. Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan, said he was unwilling to "concede the imminence of American danger" but promised "prompt and open-minded attention" to the recommendations. Senator Austin, of Vermont, called it "politics" and Representative Fish, of New York, "pump priming."

But one Republican, Senator Barbour, of New Jersey, "approved unconditionally" the program, and said he was impressed with the "balance and conservatism" of the President's proposals.

Light on the President's request for funds to correct the aircraft production lag was provided in a survey made public yesterday by Leighton W. Rogers, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

Rogers said the survey showed the industry can more than double its military plane output with present factory space "by hiring more labor and installing machinery to prevent possible bottlenecks in production lines."

He said 5,500 military planes a year can be manufactured on demand by the industry "as it is now constituted." While 1938 production of all types of planes aggregated only 3,675, he said that "contrary to popular belief" the industry is nowhere near capacity production and some important plants "have practically no business."

Three conditions he said needed to be met to put the industry on a capacity basis included: Manufacture of military planes by some plants that have produced only commercial ships; additional machinery, and a stepup in labor from the present 36,000 level to about 74,000 working in three shifts a day.

Franco Seizes Falset in Push For Tarragona

Mining Center Taken By Moroccans; Other Towns Captured

By the Associated Press.

Lerida, Spain, Jan. 12.—Spanish insurgents reported tonight their forces in Catalonia had speeded their advance on Tarragona, Mediterranean port, by capturing Falset.

Falset is 2 miles from Tarragona, which is 50 miles southwest of Barcelona. The next apparent objective is Reus, 9 miles west of Tarragona.

Insurgent reports said the Moroccan army corps that captured Falset (in the vicinity of which are lead and manganese mines) took dominating positions on an improved highway and occupied the village of Marsa, 2 miles from Falset.

branch, about 20 miles north of Tarragona, were reported to have completed occupation of the villages of Pira and Barbara and to have taken Frenacete.

In a sector 60 miles northwest of Barcelona, Insurgents were said to have completed occupation of Agramunt and captured nearby Puigver de Agramunt and Preixens.

The Spanish Loyalist government mobilized thousands of middle-aged men in Catalonia to check Insurgent advances.

The call went out to men between the ages of 39 and 45 for the front lines and to others up to the age of 50, including those unfit for front-line duty, for fortification brigades.

Medical re-examination of all previously considered incapacitated for service was ordered.

War industries and supplies were militarized and the ranks of factory specialists were reduced by half to free still more men to buttress the sagging line from the Pyrenees to the Mediterranean, from north to south across Catalonia.

Gallup Poll Shows Support for Arms

about to begin, the President's program goes to Congress with the widespread support of the voting public, particularly in respect to air defenses. While Administration forces may experience some difficulty in selling the whole arms program to Congress, there will probably be little difficulty in selling it to the public.

This sentiment does not mean, however, that the American public is developing war-like tendencies or favors abandonment of the policies of neutrality and isolation. The majority still continue to think that American participation in the World War of 1914-17 was a mistake, and that America should not take part again if another World War develops. But since Hitler's seizure of Austria early last year there has been a growing feeling on the part of the public that America will be drawn into the next conflict. In fact, nearly half of the voters in a recent Institute survey said they thought the United States would have to fight Germany again within their lifetime.

Coincidental with recent war-like events in Europe and the Orient, the Institute's surveys have noted a sharp drop in disarmament sentiment throughout the United States. Whereas several years ago more than 60 per cent of American voters favored a world disarmament movement, this sentiment had dropped to about 52 per cent by March, 1938, shortly after Hitler's coup in Austria.

Although many pacifist groups have argued that a large American navy would be more likely to get the country into war than to keep it out, the majority of voters apparently do not agree with this viewpoint. Last March 73 per cent in a survey said they thought a larger navy would be more likely to keep us out of trouble.

But Universal Service Is Not Favored

To test how far the public is willing to go in the matter of improving the Nation's military establishment, the Institute recently asked voters whether they thought every able-bodied young man of 20 should be required to spend a year in the Army or Navy, as they do in many European countries. This proposition was voted down 6 to 4. The majority of voters do think, however, that military training should be part of the duties of the young men in the CCC camps.

[In Paris, Edouard Herriot, addressing the Chamber of Deputies on occasion of his re-election to the presidency of that body, called on France to speed up and perfect her armament in the face of Italian dangers to her colonial fronties, the Associated Press said.

An account of the Chhmaberlain-Mussolini talks will be given tomorrow by Lord Halifax, British foreign secretary, to William Phillipps, American ambassador, and Andre Francois-Poncet, French ambassador. Halifax is going to Geneva tomorrow night for a League Council session where he will see Bonnet.

Chamberlain Popular

The rather negative benefits which may have been derived from the talks are to some extent offset by the personal success achieved by Chamberlain with the Italian public.

Italian Foreign Secretary

The day commenced with a talk between Count Galeazzo Ciano and Halifax, which lasted an hour, but is stated to have been purely formal. In the afternoon, Chamberlain and Halifax went to the Foro Mussolini, where they watched the youth of the nation put through its paces.

After this, they went to the Palazzo Venezia for the final conversation. The evening was rounded off by a gala performance of "Falstaff" at the Opera and supper given by Count Galezzao Ciano at the Armed Forces Club.

[Chamberlain faced a "firing squad" of a Balilla squadron, 50 lads from 6 to 8 years old, during the Fascist youth display, the Associated Press stated.

[Chamberlain was vastly amused—until marines simultaneously fired a round of blanks from small naval guns in the exhibition arena. The explosions startled him so his famed umbrella wavered and he nearly lost his balance.—Editor's note.]

Generalissimo Francisco Franco's ambassador to Italy, Pedro Garcia Conde, called on Foreign Minister Ciano this morning, and in the afternoon he left his card at the Villa Madama.

The Germans also appear to have been kept informed as to what was going on as was to be expected in view of their special relationship with Italy. The German ambassador, Hans Georg von Mackensen, called on Ciano this morning and was with him upward of an hour.

To Lift Ban Today

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Two American broadcasting chains announced tonight a three-day ban on short wave broadcasts to America concerning Prime Minister Chamberlain's visit to Italy would be lifted tomorrow. Facilities have been denied since Tuesday, the day before the British Prime Minister arrived in Italy. The British Broadcasting Co., under government control, was alowed to make reports to the British Isles.

Counsel for Kuhrig To Ask New Trial; 2 More to Face Jury

By the Associated Press.

Cristobal, C. Z., Jan. 12.—Robert Edward Kuhrig, 29, a German, was convicted today of spying on United States Canal Zone defenses. The Federal Court jury deliberated seven hours.

The Government submitted evidence to show Kuhrig entered Fort Randolph Reservation October 16 with Hans Heinrich Schackow, another German, who was convicted December 14 of photographing fortifications.

The Government also presented evidence that Kuhrig tired to rent a small fishing boat, allegedly to approach the reservation from the sea.

Kuhrig and Schachkow were arrested October 16 at Fort Randolph with Ingeborg Walthunt Gutman, 19-year-old girl secretary, and Gisbert Wilhelm Gross, 26, also German, who are yet to be tried on espionage charges.

Defense Counsel C. P. Fairman announced he would file a motion for a new trial for Kuhrig and Judge Bunk Gardner gave him until January 20 to do so. Judge Gardner was expected to rule on a similar motion in Schackow's case the same day. Schackow has not been sentenced.

World Parley Called to Solve Wheat Crisis

Producing Nations Favor Price Minima; Consumers Object

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 12.—The International Wheat Advisory Committee, attempting to solve a double problem of huge surpluses and low prices, agreed today to call a world conference to consider the wheat situation.

Such a meeting, the first since 1933, will be subject to general acceptance of an agenda. A subcommittee including the United States, Britain, Argentina and Canada was appointed to work out details of that problem.

At committee sessions today ten exporting nations favored minimum price agreements as a solution of world wheat ills, but delegates from 12 importing countries disagreed and favored an export quota system.

Crisis Predicted

(A wheat crisis was predicted Tuesday by the International Institute of Agriculture in Rome which estimated that exportable wheat supplies on July 31, 1939, would be 1,140,000,000 bushels with world import demand only 540,000,000 bushels.)

While the United States Delegate, L. V. Steere, accepted in principle the summoning of a conference, Argentina's representative warned of the perils of a fruitless parley and rejected acreage reduction proposals which might cut the South American Nation's production.

Solutions suggested by the committee secretariat included some agreement on minimum prices subject to market fluctuations, abolition of export subsidies, nonexpansion of present acreage and lowering of tariffs.

Suggestions delegates made for disposal of surplus grain included an increase in dairy farming so wheat could be used as cattle feed, increased consumption of wheat by the European peasants and distillation of grain for motor fuel.

Argentine Attitude Regretted

Chicago, Jan. 12 (AP).—The grain trade here welcomed news from London today that a world wheat conference is to be held but regret was expressed in some quarters that Argentina already had rejected acreage reduction proposals.

Trade reports here indicated Argentina is harvesting a large crop of good quality wheat this season. While new Argentine wheat is not being pressed on the international market, according to reports here, many traders expect normal increase in shipments and sales from that country.

Hitler Surprises Diplomats by Talk With Soviet Envoy

Berlin, Jan. 12 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler surprisd the foreign diplomatic corps today at his New Year's reception by talking especially long with Soviet Russia's Ambassador, Aleksej Merekaloff.

Both Hitler and the Ambassador omitted the conventional expressions concerning the friendship of their countries at their previous meeting, July 13, when Merekaloff presented his credentials.

The chancellor appeared at the reception in black trousers and the usual brown coat decorated with a swastika armband and Iron Cross, instead of in full evening dress. He wore, however, a silver belt similar to the one worn by army officers.

Coster Armed Italians, Says N. Y. Attorney

Volunteers Could Get Munitions From Him For Spain, Is Report

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—A Brooklyn attorney told Federal authorities today that F. Donald Coster carried on arms negotiations so that "munitions could be bought by Italy for reshipment to insurgent Spain for use by Italian volunteers."

The attorney, Nathaniel A. Holzer, said he believed Coster had made trips to Italy "to leave money there" and that he was friendly with high Italian officials.

Holzer, who represented various members of the Musica family since 1908, told Assistant United States Attorney John W. Knox that he knew several years ago that Coster was actually Philip Musica and a brother of George Vernard.

Investigators said Coster's diaries disclosed he paid approximately $150,000 to blackmailers who knew of his criminal past prior to the disclosure of the $11,000,000 drug corporation fraud last month.

The documents, found in a shed on the swindler's estate at Fairfield, Conn., also revealed the so-called "Donald Coster, jr.," who rented office space in Montreal, supposedly at the request of Coster, was not a member of the Musica family.

Meanwhile, a Federal order was filed enjoining the transfer of property now held in the names of the Musicas and more than a dozen other individuals and corporations already involved in the case.

Two of the Musica brothers—George Dietrich and Robert Dietrich—have been re-arrested by District Attorney Dewey on grand larceny charges and placed in the Tombs after Federal authorities released them on posting of low bail.

The third brother, Vernard, remained in Federal jail in default of $5,000 bail.

Burke Assails Reckless Spending

Burke

Mayflower Hotel, chuckled as he recalled how Candidate Roosevelt, in a speech at St. Louis during that campaign, promised that he would "never stop preaching that government—Federal, State and local—costs too much."

"That was good sense in 1932," Burke said. "And it is good sense today."

The outspoken Nebraskan said that three things had to be done if America was to recapture the sense of security that sent her forward to prosperity:

"Remove the threat of unfair and widespread Government competition with private industry;

"Unsatisfactory labor relations must be adjusted so that the danger of strikes and forced shutdowns will be lessened;

"A better tax structure must be devised so that as soon as possible the burden of taxation be reduced, and unsound tax measures repealed."

Senator Burke said the American Nation, realizing that the system of free enterprise has brought it greater wealth and a more equitable distribution than are to be found anywhere on earth, have no desire to weaken or give up that system. He continued:

"We hear talk about the 'sixty families' from those who would stir up class hatred and make us believe that most of the wealth of the country is concentrated in a few hands. Yet of the nearly 30,000,000 families in this country almost one-half own their own homes. Farm tenancy is one of our problems, yet of the 6,250,000 farms in this country more than 3,500,000 are owned by the farmers who operate them.

"There is, to be sure, poverty, and at present an appalling number of unemployed. There are adjustments to be made, wrongs to be righted. Yet, so rapid and substantial has been the growth of the country under our system of free enterprise, so widespread the diffusion of wealth and well-being, that it is a bold critic who ventures to charge that the program is fatally defective, that it should be abandoned, and a new start made along the line of a planned and Government economy."

Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Board of Trade, in introducing Senator Burke, recalled that he was once president of the Omaha Board of Education, and told how he rescued the school system from inefficiency and debt.

Senator Burke, arising to speak, turned to the left of the platform, and, amid laughter, reminded Addison that there sat his "inefficient" predecessor as president of the Omaha Board of Education, R. A. Van Orsdel, now vice president and general counsel of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.

Van Orsdel was among those introduced. Others were Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, chairman of the District sub-committee of the House Appropritions Committee; Ben M. McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star, and Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Washington Post.

Mrs. Henriette Bagger Plum, Danish mezzo-soprano, entertained the gathering.

Boy, 19, Tells Church Workers How He Slew Grandmother

Firemen Couldn't Believe Youth Capable of Crime

By the Associated Press.

Swainsboro, Ga., Jan. 12.—Displaying a childlike eagerness for human contacts he had avoided on a week-long hitch-hiking flight from Rhode Island, 19-year-old Elmer Leduc conversed freely today with ministers and women church workers at the jail where he awaits transfer to Providence on charges he beat and strangled his 72-year-old grandmother.

Warmed and fed after his surrender and reputed confession that he killed Mrs. Anna Baker, Leduc accepted a Bible from a church organization. He disclosed that the fireman to whom he surrendered, at first refused to believe his story, thinking it was a scheme to obtain free food and lodging.

Fire Chief Bell said Leduc "looked incapable of being a criminal."

Leduc told his story of slaying Mrs. Baker tersely. He said that when he went to Mrs. Baker's home, a single room in Providence, he found the building locked.

The youth said he threw a rock into her window and Mrs. Baker opened the door for him.

She scolded him for breaking parole, he said, and threatened to turn him over to the authorities if he did not give himself up. Leduc continued. (Providence officers said he had been sentenced for purse snatching and had a record for petty crime).

Irked by the scolding and threats, Leduc told Corpl. S. W. Robertson of the State Highway Patrol, he bludgeoned his grandmother with a milk bottle, then choked her. Afterward, he took her watch and $13, he said, and "the first I knew I was in Washington."

Mrs. Baker was the mother of Ellery W. Baker, of Brentwood, Md., employed in Washington with the examining division of the Federal Reserve Board.

Committee Sends WPA Bill To House With 17% Slash

certain to run into close scrutiny in the Senate, where demands for curtailments will be coupled with proposals to determine in advance on Congressional terms how the money will be spent.

Democrats Back Cut

Eleven Democrats joined nine Republicans in the House committee yesterday to override the vote of 12 Democrats led by Cannon who sought to provide the full $875,000,000 asked by the President in the bill laid before the House.

The strongly worded report subsequently filed by Chairman Taylor, demanded "that the Works Progress Administration rolls should be purged of malingerers and many others who manage to remain on the rolls continuously."

Contending 10 per cent of those on WPA have been on relief rolls since their inception, the report argued their removal would both offset the effect of the cut and "make room for others eligible to be provided with work."

It charged many "unemployables" are on WPA who should be cared for by the established State relief agencies, and asserted:

"The committee believes that if the Works Progress Administration would make a thorough canvass of persons carried on its rolls, there would be disclosed many thousands neither rightfully or justifiably thereon."

2,377,049 Workers Provided

The report said the $725,000,000 figures provides for an average of 2,377,049 workers, compared with the 2,870,000 load asked by the President.

Following is a comparative statement of how the committee said WPA loads would be distributed under its own and under the Administration's estimates:

Month.	Committee bill	Administration bill.
February	$2,800,000	$3,000,000
March	2,600,000	3,000,000
April	2,400,000	2,875,000
May	2,200,000	2,775,000
June	2,000,000	2,700,000

The committee pointed out that relief budget estimates for 1940 provide for only an average roll of 2,132,517, and declared it obviously necessary therefore "to reduce very substantially the number of workers during the remainder of the fiscal year."

It pointed to the business recovery forecasts made by Work Progress Administrator Harrington during the hearings and his estimate that some 1,500,000 jobs in private lines should open up before June, 1939.

The published record of the hearings quoted Harrington as saying:

"The recovery which has occurred since July has been both rapid and extensive. The number of workers employed in industry and other non-agricultural activities has increased by more than 1,000,000 in the past 6 months. Seasonal factors may be expected to bring about some interruption of the trend of re-employment during the winter months, but in estimating the need for WPA employment during the last 5 months of the fiscal year, a continuation of rapid recovery has been assumed."

The record showed Harrington strongly recommended against proposals to set up non-salaried county boards to pass on complaints, agreeing with Woodrum it would bring "confusion worse confounded."

Made public along with the majority report were the minority views of the four Republican subcommittee members led by Taber, and recommending "the ultimate substitution of a system of grants in aid to the States along well recognized principles with proper contribution by each State."

"A national scandal requires immediate action," said the minority report. "The administration of relief must be revamped and purged." It asked appointment of a committee to investigate and report on relief needs and recommend "that appropriate steps in respect to the future should be taken in the light of that investigation."

Roosevelt Quoted

Representative Woodrum, opening the House committee's defense of the $725,000,000 appropriation, quoted from President Roosevelt's message to Congress March 10, 1933. He quoted Mr. Roosevelt as saying then the "Government has been on the road toward bankruptcy" as the result of accumulated deficits in the last three years of the Hoover Administration.

"At the time that message was read," Woodrum said, "I believed it to be a statement of national fiscal policy, not only fundamentally sound, but in conformity with the pledges of my party. I have not changed my opinion in that regard."

Woodrum said that "six years later there is practically nothing left of the economy act," and warned Congress is inviting "disaster to our economic structure" by proceeding "headlong with enormous expenditures."

"I believe that our Nation will be called upon to meet an annual budget of between $7,000,000,000 and $9,000,000,000," he continued. "It should be nearer $7,000,000,000. A return of prosperity and an increase of national income will automatically increase our revenues."

The Virginian estimated the committee proposal would mean a WPA roll cut of 500,000 over a five-month period, which, he said, would be eased by opening up of 1,500,000 new private jobs, forecast by the WPA.

master of ceremonies, who told him:

"I'm sorry, Mr. Gannett, but because the audience has taken so much of our time on the radio we haven't time to finish your speech. Could you kindly finish with a paragraph or two?"

"This is terribly unfair," Gannett replied, and then read several of his concluding paragraphs.

Holds Charges Unfair

He had said, in opening his speech, that he had not seen "Mr. Ickes' manuscript before I came here. If I had seen it, I would have given a good and sufficient answer to every one of the unfair charges that he has made against me."

Ickes had asserted:

"In April, 1929, the Federal Trade Commission found that the International Paper & Power Co. owned all of the preferred stock and 30 per cent of the common stock of the Knickerbocker Press and the Albany Evening News, as well as a sizable share of the Ithaca, N. Y., Journal News. These papers were, and still are, Gannett properties. Following this disclosure, Mr. Gannett hastened to refinance.

"I ask you, during the time this paper and power company had a very large interest in the Gannett newspapers, was Mr. Gannett free?"

In the question and answer period after the speeches, a man asked Gannett about the "actual circumstances" of the paper company assertion. He replied:

"I wanted to buy some newspapers, and I found I had to pay on exhorbitant rate of interest in the banking community.

"The International Paper Co. offered to loan me the money at a lower rate. I bought that money, and I sold them in exchange some of the preferred stock in some of these papers."

"We are still doing business with the International Paper Co. But it is unfair, most unfair, to intimate that because I had a business transaction with a paper company with which I had been doing business for years, that meant they had some control over my editorial policies. It is perfectly ridiculous!"

Gannett, answering Ickes' charge of a financially controlled press, suggested Ickes should "turn to a real danger," adding:

"... Let him join me in asking for a prompt and thorough Congressional investigation of this great menace of Government subsidized propaganda."

The "hue and cry" against the press, the publisher said, had arisen because "when President Roosevelt tried to break down the American Constitution by packing the Supreme Court and reducing it to a "yes" court, the press stood up and fought honestly and courageously in its editorials against the one-man rule embodied in the iniquitous court bill and helped beat it."

"It is because the press bravely raised its voice of warning when three men, chosen by Mr. Roosevelt, drafted the original reorganization bill," he went on. "No wonder the editorial opinion of the press opposed it. For this extraordinary measure was written in such a spirit of contempt for democracy that it authorized Mr. Roosevelt to abolish or change the name and functions of every office in the Government, constitutional or otherwise.

Press Fought War Bill

"In the third place, it is because the press fought and beat the so-called May war bill. It was, in reality, no war bill, but it went far beyond any measure ever devised in the interest of carrying on war. It clothed the President with a complete economic dictatorship."

Ickes said he did not intend to "bring an indictment against the press as a whole, but I charge, and the record will bear me out, that while as to Government regulation and control the press of America is free, it is not—because of its own financial and economic tieups—what it should be, a free servant of a free democracy"

Freedom Limited

"The chief accusations" made by the people against the press, he said, were:

"First, that it has financial affiliations, or is subject to financial pressures, which limit its freedom. Metropolitan newspapers in particular are part of the financial oligarchy that is trying to rule America.

"Second, that it is subject to the influence of advertisers, causing omission, distortion or improper slanting of news, and affecting its editorial opinions.

"Third, that it is unfair to certain groups of citizens, especially workingmen, whose interests conflict with those of the newspaper or its financial backers or its advertisers."

Frankfurter Denies He's Red, Senate Group Approves Him

that does not represent my view of life or my view of government." With that declaration, the hearing ended amid applause.

Although the 56-year-old professor was questioned at length about his membership in the American Civil Liberties Union, which figured prominently in the opposition testimony of the previous two days, his attitude toward President Roosevelt's court enlargement proposal was only briefly touched upon.

Senator Austin, Vermont Republican, produced an extract from an article in the Encyclopedia of Social Sciences (dated 1934, three years before the Roosevelt plan) in which Frankfurter had written:

"There is no magic in the number nine, but there are limitations to effective judicial action. ... Experience is conclusive that to enlarge the size of the Supreme Court would be self-defeating. ... When this recurring proposal for increasing the number of justices was once more made by the American Bar Association in 1922, Chief Justice Taft authoritatively rejected it."

Ovation Greets Him

Frankfurter, who has never publicly expressed his opinion of the Roosevelt plan, but has been represented as reluctantly favoring it, declined to enlarge on the quotation.

Asked by Neely if he had a statement, Frankfurter read a few paragraphs that were construed by some observers as an emphatic rebuke to those members of the committee who had desired him to appear before it.

"I, of course, do not wish to testify in support of my own nomination," he said, speaking in a rather high-pitched voice. "Except only in one instance involving a charge concerning an official act of an Attorney General, the entire history of this committee and of the court does not disclose that a nominee of the Supreme Court has appeared and testified before the Judiciary Committee."

In a silence broken only by the buzz of cameras, Frankfurter read on: "I hope you will not think it presumptuous on my part to suggest that neither the examination of a nominee's record nor the best interests of the Supreme Court will be helped by the personal participation of the nominee himself."

"My attitude and outlook on relevant matters," he continued, "have been fully expressed over a period of years and are easily accessible. I should think it not only bad taste but inconsistent with the duties of the office for which I have been nominated for me to attempt to supplement my past record by present declarations."

As senior member of the sub-committee, Senator Borah opened the questioning by asking how long Frankfurter had belonged to the American Civil Liberties Union, which several witnesses had denounced as subversive.

Frankfurter stated that he had been connected with union since it was formed shortly after the war. The nominee asserted that war hysteria had given rise to certain incidents which, he said, Charles Evans Hughes (now Chief Justice), had then described as "violations of personal rights which savor of the worst practices of tyranny."

Not a Lawyer for Union

"My experience as a prosecutor with knowledge of the terrible instruments placed in the hands of prosecutors," Frankfurter told the committee, made him alive to the importance of a group of people whose special business it should be to see that the bill of rights was invoked when civil liberties were endangered. He said he, therefore, lent "moral force" to the organizers of the A. C. L. U.

Sometimes pointing a long finger to emphasize his words, Frankfurter declared that he had "not appeared in any litigation" of the A. C. L. U. He said he was merely a member of the "national committee" and had been consulted from time to time on major issues.

To the charge that the organization was designed solely to protect left-wing agitators, Frankfurter replied that the A. C. L. U. had defended the free-speech rights of "Ku Kluxers," Nazi and Fascist sympathizers—and even of Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, author of "The Red Network" and one of the witnesses against him. He added that the union had also defended the rights of employers to circularize their employes, contrary to rulings of the National Labor Relations Board.

"'Civil liberties' means liberties for those whom we do not like," said Frankfurter, "as well as for those we like. I should have thought that the union would have been disloyal to its purposes if it had failed to take that even-handed position."

Asked by Senator Borah to explain the relation, if any, of the A. C. L. U. to Communism, Frankfurter answered that the union would be acting beyond its powers "if it had any relation to any party, political views or doctrine."

concepts of law presently existing in Germany are alien to those which prevail in this country ... Under such conditions the terror and desperation among hundreds of thousands of Jews now living in Germany cannot be other than acute ... I cannot bring myself to believe ... the courts of this country would close their eyes to those factors."

According to a translation of the German court judgment submitted to Cummings, "A. R." was engaged with his mother in the wholesale ironware business. He had intended emigrating from Germany since June, 1937, the judgment stated, and had withdrawn 30,000 reichsmarks or about one-fifth of the value of their business.

In order to obtain a certificate for emigration, he had to fill out questionnaires listing the amount of cash which he and his mother held. In each case, he gave the amount of cash as "about 1,500 reichsmarks."

Cummings said it had been stated in behalf of the alien that "when he submitted to the German authorities a false statement concerning his property he did so under the advice of an economic trustee upon whom he considered he was justified in replying."

Cummings advised, however, against attempting to try the case over, pointing out that it had been the practice not to go behind the record of the foreign court.

Forum to Study No Man's Land In Washington

Housing Group Seeks Way to Provide Homes For $1,000-$2,000 Class

Ways to provide housing for approximately 75,000 District of Columbia families with incomes between $1,100 and $2,000 annually will be discussed at the annual meeting of the Washington Housing Association January 23 at the United States Chamber of Commerce.

This "no-man's land" in housing lies between the ceiling of public housing set by Nathan Straus, United States Housing Authority administrator, and the floor being provided for the District by private enterprise, according to Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, the association's president.

"Most of them are in the service trades, industry or Government service. They need a house with at least two bedrooms that rents for $24 to $40 a month, depending on the number of children they have.

"At present, for many self-supporting families, their choice is between overcrowding and lack of sanitation. For some of them there is not even a choice between these two evils," he said.

Various viewpoints on the situation will be presented by a well-informed panel, with John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, conducting the forum and Dr. Stokes presiding.

On the panel will be Miles Colean, FHA; Leon Keyserling, USHA; John M. Daiger, FHA; Daniel O. Collins, Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers International Union of America; Sydney Katz, Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council; Morris Cafritz, Cafritz Construction Co.; John McC. Mowbray, National Association of Real Estate Boards; Katherine Lenroot, Children's Bureau; Jacob Baker, United Federal Workers of America; Dr. Robert C. Weaver, USHA.

Funds to Study Light, Growth To Be Asked by Smithsonian

Appropriation of Federal funds to continue research on the effect of light upon animal and plant growth will be asked of Congress, the board of regents of the Smithsonian Institution decided yesterday at its annual meeting. For the last ten years this work has been carried on with private donations.

Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, chairman, and Vice President John N. Garner, board member, attended the meeting.

Approval was given revised plans for two wings for the National Museum and a pension system for Smithsonian employes was approved in principle. Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary, submitted the annual report.

Dr. Abbot founded the division of radiation and organisms to investigate the relations between light, artificial as well as solar, and plant and animal life. Discoveries of "far-reaching importance" have been made, it was pointed out.

The regents expressed hope money will be allotted this year by Congress to start enlargement of the National Museum, handicapped by lack of space. Congress authorized the two wings in 1930.

Chief Justice Hughes reported progress on plans for the Smithsonian Gallery of Art, erection of which has been authorized by Congress. Dr. Abbot told the regents that construction of the National Gallery of Art is proceeding rapidly. The latter was presented to the Nation by the late Andrew W. Mellon.

Advances in the design and building of apparatus for astronomical and biological studies were reported by Dr. Abbot. All records for visitors to the National Museum were broken during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938, with a figure of 2,408,-170, he said. In the same period, 312,729 specimens were added to the collections.

Regents attending the annual meeting, besides Chief Justice Hughes and Vice President Garner, were Senator M. M. Logan, Representatives T. Alan Goldsborough and Charles L. Gifford; R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department; Frederic A. Delano, Dr. John C. Merriam, Dr. Harvey N. Davis and Dr. Arthur H. Compton.

Knox Urges G.O.P. to Seek Lower Tariffs

Farm Aid His Purpose; Stiffer Trust Laws to End Price-Fixing Asked

By the United Press.

Pierre, S. Dak., Jan. 12.—Frank Knox, Chicago newspaper publisher and Republican candidate for Vice President in 1936, urged tonight that the Republican Party "drastically" change its traditional position on the tariff and seek revision and rigorous enforcement of antitrust laws.

The purpose of both moves, he said, would be to restore farm prosperity by helping to eliminate the old complaint of the farmer that he sells in a competitive market and buys in an artificially high-priced market.

Knox, speaking at a Republican "victory celebration," urged establishment of tariffs high enough only to protect American wage standards and elimination of "artificial secret price-fixing," which he said had greatly increased among trade associations "since the experience of 1933 and 1934 with the NRA."

Contending the experience of both Republican and New Deal Administrations had been that the farmers' purchasing power cannot be brought to parity by artificial means, Knox held that "the only way left for attainment of our objective is to lower the cost of the things which the farmer must buy."

"Along with a drastic revision of our anti-trust laws and their rigorous enforcement," he said, "there should, and must go, a campaign of education designed to lay bare the exact effect of a secret price-fixing policy on business itself. * * * The private enterprise system cannot continue if the element of competition is destroyed."

Mrs. Roosevelt to Talk On Hygiene Day, Feb. 1

Rail Postalization

John A. Hastings, a former New York State Senator, has a plan for "postalizing" transportation which he regards as "the only answer to the railroad problem." Briefly, he proposes to base freight rates and passenger fares on zones instead of mileage, with the intention of eventually superseding the zone system by a national scale of charges.

Mr. Hastings' belief that he has discovered a cure-all for the financial difficulties of the railroads will certainly not be shared by thoughtful students of the subject. In the field of freight transport the principle of rate fixation which he indorses probably could be applied with profit only to a minor extent. In the restricted field of passenger travel, on the other hand, the outlook appears more promising.

In response to an inquiry from Senator Wheeler, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution and an authority on transportation problems, declared the Hastings plan one "worthy of the most careful study." He explained that it fell "so closely in line with the general conclusions which we have reached in some of our studies with reference to the vital significance of low prices in order to realize the full advantages of mass production that I am impressed with its soundness in principle."

The railroads have already discovered that a reduction in passenger fares on a mileage basis may so increase travel as to yield larger net returns. The so-called postalization plan is based on this principle of trying to attract business by offers to sell transportation at lower prices. However, it contemplates the establishment of uniformly low rates over a wide area regardless of distance traveled.

Senator Wheeler, who is seriously considering the Hastings plan, points out that a mass production industry to be successful must have mass consumption of its goods and services. In case of the roads, mass consumption is necessary to full and economical utilization of equipment. It costs practically as much to run an empty car as a full one. It costs very little more in the upkeep of roadbeds to run additional trains. And finally the cost of transporting a passenger does not vary directly with the number of miles traveled. As a result, distance as a factor in rate-making can be ignored within certain limits.

Of course it would require careful study and considerable experimentation to determine what Senator Wheeler calls "the lowest possible rate consistent with sound business principles." That means a rate that will attract more business without being so low as to result in loss of revenue or congestion of facilities with serious impairment of the value of the services rendered. The maximum economies of mass production in the railroad field as in industry are obtainable when it is possible to utilize the productive equipment fully. The closer the approach to such 100 per cent operating capacity, the lower become the overhead unit operating costs, hence the lower the price that may be charged to purchasers of goods and services.

The postalization of passenger rates, therefore, would merely be the extension of a familiar principle of price policy. To indorse that principle and its possible application to passenger traffic by rail is by no means an indorsement of the particular plan for zoning and fare reductions advocated by Mr. Hastings.

Mr. Hopkins Recants

In his appearance before the Senate Commerce Committee, which is looking into his qualifications for his new post as Secretary of Commerce, Harry Hopkins left a good impression. While defending his record as relief administrator with his customary vigor, he was wise enough not to try and exculpate himself from all the charges that have been directed against him. For instance, he repented publicly for having made partisan political speeches entirely out of keeping with the office he occupied.

A fault confessed, as the old saying goes, is half amended. In declaring that if he had to do it over again, he would have refrained from making such speeches, Mr. Hopkins does much to disarm his critics. But by the same token he is admitting that his critics knew what they were talking about when they accused him of playing politics as relief administrator.

The hope is that the hindsight which the new Secretary of Commerce now manifests with respect to past mistakes will guide him in avoiding similar mistakes in the future. Mr. Hopkins is in no position to erase the past. But a clean new page is now open before him. It is entirely up to him to see that the record written on it is free of the blemishes to whose existence he himself has, in part, testified.

For Modern Minutemen

There are some Americans who would capitalize on present international disorders to build a huge military machine in this country. There are others who seek to pretend that the security of the United States is in no way threatened by the rise of the philosophy of aggression. Between these two extremes the national defense message, sent by the President to Congress yesterday, steers a convincing middle course.

Aside from its specific recommendations this message is of great importance because of its tacit admissions regarding our present state of unpreparedness. Such admissions are necessary to shatter the fond illusion which makes the American people believe that they could overnight form a citizen army capable of resisting professional troops fully equipped with every instrumentality of modern war. On this pathetic hypothesis is based most of the argument of the professional "peace advocate."

The tradition of the citizen who becomes a competent soldier merely by taking his trusty rifle down from over the mantel has good historical backing. But it has no validity in the world of today. As the President points out, modern warfare is a matter of complicated technical equipment which cannot be hurriedly produced unless plans for its provision have been made long in advance of any actual need. Extensive training is also necessary for the operation of the modern war machine.

Of the emergency appropriation of something over $500,000,000, now recommended, a large proportion is designed either to improve productive methods for the manufacture of essential munitions, or else to provide "critical items" of equipment which are to the modern soldier what his powder horn was to the patriot of 1776. The remainder of the requested appropriation would be largely confined to developing naval bases, improving the defenses of the Panama Canal and enlarging the Army air force by at least 3,000 planes, a modest increase according to the standards of certain other countries.

The President emphasizes that the action now requested from Congress represents, in the opinion of his military advisers, "a minimum program for the necessities of defense." That economy has been a major factor in the planning is indicated by the fact that of the extra appropriation asked only about $210,000,000 would be spent up to July, 1940. In other words, Mr. Roosevelt presents an emergency defense program of which the cost, for the next 17 months, would be little over $12,000,000 a month. If there is any rational criticism of this it will be that it errs on the side of restraint.

The President does well to recall that it took the United States a whole year, after the declaration of war on April 6, 1917, to prepare its troops to meet the Germans on equal terms in any major engagement. That was not fatal only because the Allied armies were able to do the fighting while America strained every nerve to get ready. But it is obviously dangerous to count on other nations exhibiting a continued willingness to fight this country's battles. And today, says Mr. Roosevelt, we are relatively little more prepared for war than was the case in 1917.

The name of the minuteman banks large in American history because he was ready, at a minute's notice, to give a good account of himself in the defense of his country. It is merely restoring a national ideal to insure that the modern American Army shall also be ready immediately, and not after a year's delay, for such duties as the defense of the country places on it.

Suburban Sanitation

Despite the stringent anti-gambling and anti-lottery law enacted for the District by Congress last spring, the numbers racket continues to flourish in Washington.

The law has undoubtedly proved an embarrassment to small-fry gamblers. Many of them have been caught in the net spread by the local police. But for the "higher ups" immunity can be obtained merely by moving the base of operations to nearby points outside the District.

This immunity is not going to remain unchallenged. What the local police, through no fault of their own, are in no position to do, the United States Government can accomplish. In ordering the Federal Bureau of Investigation to seek evidence to convict outside numbers racketeers of plotting to violate the District's gambling laws, the Department of Justice may well succeed in plugging up the loopholes through which the "big shots" operate.

Nowhere in the United States is it more true than here that conflicting jurisdictions make it difficult for the local authorities to function efficiently. With respect to essential services this handicap has been overcome by the establishment of such agencies as the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. The intervention of the F. B. I. in the numbers racket situation should be equally valuable in improving conditions of good health for the metropolitan area.

District Tax Outlook

The District tax report prepared by Dr. Chester Pond and Colin F. Stam has been submitted to the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation after being approved by the Citizens Advisory Committee.

The recommendations apparently differ only in minor details from the plan which the Advisory Committee indorsed in December. Controversy will probably center, for the most part, on the proposed retail sales tax and the levies on unearned incomes above $500 and on salaries in excess of $15,000.

The restricted form of income taxation advocated in this report is undeniably a most unsatisfactory substitute for a comprehensive, graduated tax on net incomes earned in the District by Federal employes and others. Fortunately, the provision for taxing all salaries above $15,000 would make it possible to test the constitutionality of legislation imposing local levies upon incomes from Federal employment. If the validity of such legislation were upheld, as seems highly probable, the proposed income tax might serve as an entering wedge to more comprehensive and more equitable levies on local incomes.

Depite exemptions from the proposed 2 per cent retail sales tax of sales of food, medicine and articles priced at 25 cents or less, this levy would add to the living costs of low-income groups in the District. While that is regrettable, it would at least arouse wider interest in the fiscal problems of the local government and increase the pressure for a really thoroughgoing reformation of the tax structure that would place the burden of taxation upon those best able to pay. In short, a sales tax, as well as a partial income tax are calculated to impress upon District residents the superior desirability of a comprehensive personal tax on net incomes applicable to Federal employes as well as persons in private employment.

However, the best laid tax plans will always be tentative and imperfectly adapted to local expenditure requirements so long as Congress clings to the present system of lump sum appropriations, erratically expanding or contracting the amount voted without reference to budgetary needs. Some routine, dependable method of determining the amount of the Federal Government's contribution must be devised if the District is ever to enjoy the benefits of a well-balanced, equitable system of taxation, designed to take care of foreseen expenditures, instead of to finance a changing and unpredictable proportion of total governmental costs.

Allergic To Yellow

The most maligned of all colors is yellow. Forgetting golden sunshine, sunny hair, summer warblers and ripened grain, the word causes the mind to turn involuntarily toward jaundice and the pusillanimous.

Tradition has it that as an epithet "yellow" was first applied to the dodger and compromiser during the battles in Ireland between the Orange and the Green. One who sought to curry favor and take on the color of both factions would very naturally gravitate to yellow in the political spectrum; and he'd have the love of neither group.

Investigation by Denver police has now convinced them that traffic violators are "mentally allergic" to yellow, and that a yellow tag makes them "see red." For that reason the color of parking tickets in Denver has been changed to white.

It doesn't seem a wholly happy solution, for white proverbially represents innocence and, whether angry or resigned, few recipients of a traffic slip feel that way. If sensitiveness to color, as well as color blindness, is a factor in the traffic problem, then by all means let the violations be noted in a dismal blue.

While they were renovating the Statue of Liberty, they should have replaced that torch with a sawed-off shotgun.

You wouldn't worry about what people think of you if you knew how seldom they do.

So It Will Come Out If Necessary

Spain And The Embargo

Russia In Spain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Assuming Prof. Thorning's sources on Russian intervention in Spain to be correct, is it not significant that their date lines indicate that they came at a time when it was generally conceded that Mussolini and Hitler had long since flouted the idealism of nonintervention? Had not the Italian military already inflicted the scars converging on Madrid? Who would deny that at the very moment Fascist diplomatic doves cooed "Localization of the Spanish War" in London, their planes were raking Spanish towns with their souvenirs of good will? It is to the everlasting shame of the democracies that they could have been taken in by such hypocrisies.

No one in his right senses could deny the importance of Russian, Czech and French assistance to the loyalists in the critical days, but it is a matter of vital consideration and honesty to recognize that such intervention followed only upon the established faithlessness of the fascist powers to the policy of nonintervention. To speak of Russian "intervention" without regard to historical sequence, is to confuse the issue.

For that matter, with the exception of the Soviet Union, intervention on behalf of Government Spain has been extremely limited, being due more to popular manifestations of sympathy than to clear-cut and well defined policies of states. Assistance from the Soviet Union is severely restricted first by its geographical remoteness from the Spanish scene and, second, by the hide-and-seek border policy of Daladier, who is restrained by the appeasing hand of Chamberlain. French and British popular sentiment though eloquent is hamstrung by state departments that will have their little intrigues at the expense of the Spanish people. Here in America we are fast approaching a reformulation of the pathetic "neutrality" legislation.

I'm about fed up with the idea that Russians are hobgoblins peculiar to the American nightmare. So they don't like capitalists, so they don't go to church, so they like loose living. But one thing is certain and that is that Russia has taken her place in the democratic front to help the Spanish people against their fascist enemies. Russia acts according to her own dictates. But why must they necessarily clash with ours? M. E.

Washington, Jan. 10.

Cites Gallup Poll

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The pre-war Spanish government was one in which church and state were one. The present Spanish Republic's constitution divides the church and state. The Spanish constitution today gives the right of freedom of worship. Can it be said that Franco, backed by his cohorts, Mussolini and Hitler, embody such a principle in their governments?

The embargo does not make us a neutral country, as the Committee to Keep the Spanish Embargo would have us believe. It makes us a partner to the invading armies in Spain. If we would abide by international law, we should sell arms to the Spanish Republic to help them defeat the outlawed rebels.

The people of Spain are fighting for their homes and their own democratic form of government against the invading fascists. They are deserving of all the moral and material aid other democracies can give.

The majority of the people in the United States believe Congress should lift the Spanish embargo. The recent Gallup poll, expressing the opinion of the American people, showed 76 per cent in favor of the loyalists and only 24 per cent for the rebels.

The embargo must be lifted!

Neutrality Or "Partiality?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If we are to be consistent and fair-minded, the embargo against Spain must be lifted.

At the beginning of the struggle in Spain the air was filled with conflicting rumors about the civil strife and our own policy leaned strongly toward the isolationist point of view. Since then the atmophere has been cleared regarding both issues. We know now that loyalist Spain is fighting for a democratic form of government against the combined Fascist and Nazi forces in Spain and the rest of Europe.

We are also convinced that the preponderance of the American people, as well as the present Administration, is actively and outspokenly against the dictatorial powers. This feeling against the dictatorial governments is manifested from official and unofficial speeches by high-ranking members of the Administration, by voluntary economic boycotts and by an unmistakable display of disapproval in theaters and lecture halls all over the land.

It must be stated that in democratic countries there is no unanimity on most issues. Even in a totalitarian state like Germany, der Fuehrer allegedly received only 99 per cent support from the voters. Those people and groups in this country who clamor for keeping the embargo and are desirous of crushing loyalist Spain constitute more than 1 per cent; yet they are a small and befuddled minority.

Unfortunately, they are strong financially and organizationally, since they are linked with sacred and hierarchal orders of church and wealth. It is actually sickening to think that there are people in these United States who fail, or who do not wish, to see that loyalist Spain is fighting for what we have won at the very beginning of our history as a Nation, namely, separation of church and state and a democratic form of government. We can't get away from the fact that the church in Spain has kept bad company for a long time, and it was inevitable that some of its leaders were classed with the enemies of the people.

To keep the embargo now is utter hypocrisy or downright stupidity. The consequences of our policy of credulity with regard to aggressor nations are tragic, but the procedure seems quite humorous. Tokyo declared that the war in China was merely an "incident" and we agreed with her; while Franco, on the other hand, said that there was a real war going on in Spain and demanded belligerent rights. We, very obligingly, agreed with Franco. We should either openly declare that the neutrality act is actually a partiality act, favoring fascism, or lift it immediately, in accordance with the wishes of the American people, as a tangible manifestation of our displeasure of fascism abroad and at home. "Democracy's Fight"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad." This is commended to ecclesiastics opposed to the freedom of the people of Spain.

The Republic of Spain is established to a large extent upon the same principles as those of our own Government. This, too, regardless of what is being said to the contrary by enemies of democracy. The loyalists of Spain are fighting to save the life of democracy in Europe, and in no small degree to save democracy in our own land.

This is a crisis concerning which the liberty-loving people of the United States cannot be indifferent if they wish to preserve their freedom against fascism's deadly attacks. There should be no delay in lifting the embargo on the friendly republic of Spain.

The "Fascist Guinea Pig"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A storm of discussion has arisen concerning the advisability of this country continuing its embargo on shipments to loyalist Spain. It seems to me that if Americans are to cease being hypocrites and paying mouth homage to democracy, they will lift the embargo. The President has that power. Instead of making so many splendid speeches telling the lofty virtues we stand for, the President could do more in five minutes by signing a declartion lifting the arms embargo against democratic Spain.

There is no use shedding crocodile tears about the "poor Jews" being persecuted in Germany and Austria (that was), Catholics or other minority groups being mistreated while we actively aid and abet the aggressor nations by our embargo on Spain.

If Italy wins the war against loyalist Spain, which is a democracy, then France will be an easy prey to Fascist forces. After France comes England, in spite of British "appeasements.' After England comes South America. Then the United States.

In the World War, if your memory runs that far back, we in the United States were urged to go "over there" to whip the Germans to prevent them coming over here. The same argument today applies to Spain, with this difference: Spain is not asking us to come over there, but is merely asking that she be allowed the means of self-defense against an invading army of Italians and Germans.

We are selling arms and ammunition and scrap iron to Japan, with a good, clear Christian business conscience, to murder Chinese women and babies. Why cannot we be as charitable to people in Spain who are being made a Fascist guinea pig?

Bernanos' Book Cited

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On the heels of your editorial, "Barcelona's Strength," come the uncalled-for blasts from Catholic archbishops against loyalist Spain and Ambassador de los Rios.

Might I suggest that these learned apostles of a totalitarian brand of Christianity read M. Georges Bernanos' "A Diary of My Times." This book, by a Catholic and royalist, shows that nine-tenths of the Spaniards, including the army, are anticlerical; it also asserts that his excellency the Archbishop of Majorca sprinkled holy water on a shipment of Italian machine guns. No friend of democracy, but less a friend of the foreign invaders. M. Bernanos asserts that 3,000 men, women and children were assassinated by the Italian-directed Falange.

Thank You

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I want to congratulate The Post on its current version of "New Faces in Congress." The composite information showing photograph, State, and district, and the short sketch of the Congressman's life is not only informative but makes a ready reference for one's files. This is much more valuable it seems to me than the caricatures formerly carried in The Post. I hope you continue this series.

Hour At Mount Vernon

BUT FOR OUR Scottish guest we never would have gone. It took a brother-in-law from Richmond to get us into the Smithsonian, and a girl from Bushey Heath, Herts, to show us the interior of the Capitol. Not that we aren't interested, you understand, but the commonplace about New Yorkers and the Empire State Building is no less true when applied to Virginians and Mount Vernon.

It took two days, at that. The first afternoon we arrived at 4, to find stragglers honing before an iron grill. We honed a little ourselves and went home, rebuffed by hospitality that ended at sundown. The next morning we dragged ourselves out of bed an hour earlier.

The day was not a good one. A snow haze had covered the sun, and the cold had begun to bite. Nevertheless there were cars from Michigan, North Carolina, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Ohio, New Jersey, Maryland and Montana as well as the inevitable dozen or so from the District. Ours was the only Virginia license.

We paid our quarter and dropped our tickets. A comfortable dirt road lay ahead. We trod it. A breeze curled down the lane and we turned up coat collars.

"If George were at home," I said, "he would offer us a noggin of rum." At that moment we came to a sign that ordered:

NO SMOKING

The Mount Vernon Ladies Association thus reminded us that it was in full charge. Not that you can blame them for apprehension, when you think of what an habitual butt-dropper could do to 200 years of history in a few minutes. But it's hard to pretend to yourself that Gen. Washington is going to meet you at the door when you keep coming to bulletins like that. The next one was more inviting. It announced:

THIS WAY

Which was an encouraging suggestion, because we still hadn't any idea where Mount Vernon was. The road was pleasant; it curved and dipped gracefully, as if worn smooth by the wheels of many coaches. We followed the fence line and after a while there was the friendly manor house. Small groups were wandering along the paths.

"If George were here," I ventured . . .

"You said that before," my wife remarked.

Inside, the population thickened. In a big room with a fluted ceiling, ropes restrained pale and reverent New Englanders with their overstuffed wives, professorial Midwesterners understanding it all in an analytical way, truculent plainsmen moving their feet with care, schoolmarms in No. 9 shoes, and sultry beauties from the Northwest supplementing their mass education with a little culture. They were all talking in whispers, so we whispered, too.

"Look at those mirrors, John!" one woman exclaimed. John grunted.

"This was the banquet hall," said a guard suddenly, and we moved on through to the front yard. The well-trodden lawn was stuck with a set of oversized croquet wickets.

"You could knock anybody out of the game in a hurry here," my wife observed. The river was almost directly below us. Then we saw there was a wall at the edge of the bluff. We went inside again and upstairs.

"Look here, Hulda," called a man who looked like a Montana farmer. "This was Nellie Curtis' room."

"Custis, Henry!"

He turned to a little bedroom that had no sign over the door.

"This wasn't anybody's room," he said. "This was a single room." I could envisage the string of hotels behind him.

I wanted to know where Washington kept his books. I knew he must have had some, and I wondered if the restoration had, as in many places, overlooked the literary side. The completeness of the library startled me so that I asked a guard whether all those books were the general's own.

"They're mostly reproductions," he said. I finally concluded the guard had just got his words mixed up. At the door of the library a small man in a derby hat began objecting violently. So far as we could divine, he did not want to go to the tomb. His wife and daughter, however, were both larger than he was.

"I'll go, I'll go!" he screamed at last, and banged the sacred door behind him so that the walls shook. We saw him several times again as we wandered down to George's wharf, where we found a canoe, and back up the hill. The size of the estate surprised us, as well as the lack of tampering by the restorers. Ancestral box grew in the woods, along the paths. One might suppose that people lived here but for the signs. We rounded a clump of laurel, amid the sycamores, to see:

TOMB OF WASHINGTON.
SILENCE . . . RESPECT

Anthony Eden, we remembered, once had enjoyed his day's first quiet at the tomb. We could not help wondering if there appeared a slight curl at the corner of that urbane mouth, at the thought of a country which had to tell its people when to render homage.

Good Reason To Be

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: At the same time that the President of the United States makes his appeal to Congress for over a billion dollars for preparedness, Thomas Joseph Mooney is to be pardoned for his conviction of the Preparedness Day bombing resulting in the death of 10 and injury to 40 persons.

While Congress is weighing how much should be expended for preparedness, Mooney has been fitted out by his tailor and is preparing extensive celebrations over his victory which will be international in scope.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Decent Restraints

AMONG THOSE who insist that the truth is not in American newspapers the first argument is that their dependence on advertising revenues compels them to serve the interests of those who buy the space.

But the very fact that a paper is a big business, with valuable plant and other assets derived from advertising receipts, serves to promote truth and temperance of expression as well. For proof it is necessary only to turn to the rasping little periodicals of limited circulation, which describe themselves as liberal, progressive or radical, and check their material on points of fact. It will then be found that a bold and raucous style of presentation, a fixed policy of snarling at all persons or groups of opposed opinion, particularly at conservatives, often substitutes for honesty and that their lack of attachable assets, beyond a couple of typewriters and a few office chairs and filing cabinets, relieves them of the decent restraints that control their wealthy contemporaries.

They are judgment-proof, and persons who would be quick to sue a regular daily newspaper for libel by falsehood or malicious ridicule, and reasonably sure to collect substantial damages, simply don't bother to resent dishonest treatment in their columns.

FOR ONE REASON, the circulation of the unfair remarks has been small and a suit would serve to spread them further; for another, a suit might create publicity for an obscure publication, a hope which causes their editors to court legal reprisals, and, finally, the victim of the wrong usually doesn't want to waste his time for no cash return.

The moderation which came with assets and responsibility as the daily press of this country developed a partnership with commerce is a public protection against the scurrilous abuse, the class-interpretation amounting to downright news-poisoning and the sullen incitation to disorder which are characteristic of radical publications. Freedom from responsibility often is interpreted as freedom to libel; and objective reporters as well as commentators who check their material, discarding rumor, sometimes marvel at the effrontery of those who accuse the daily newspapers in publications which are themselves notorious for their disregard of truth, fact and fairness.

THERE WAS the time when certain stalwarts of personal journalism dominated the scene—hilarious rowdies who wrote with little restraint and often less truth—but the very critics who chide the standard press of today for temperate expression would be the first and loudest opponents of any proposal to read the libel laws so as to permit these papers similar freedom. It would be said that they were not interested in truth, but only wanted to be relieved of the penalties for persecuting innocent individuals, particularly radicals of the left or right.

It would be a foul conspiracy by the press and big business to abolish the public's only protection against systematic knifing and hacking of its great liberal leaders. Yet if the daily papers did not have their advertising revenues they would have no financial responsibility and would be as free to distort news and lie about innocent citizens as any communist publication.

IT NEED NOT be argued that of all the libelous irresponsibles the communist papers are the most brutal, although they are also alert to the cry "red-baiter" whenever a responsible paper, after careful inquiry, put the finger on some politico-labor group as a branch of the communist organization.

The American daily press occupies a position similar to that of the democracies beset by communism and Nazi-Fascism. Democracy cannot resort to the weapons of communism and Nazi-Fascism to defend itself from them, and the newspapers must endure attacks by publications and writers unhampered by the bounds of truth and civility which govern ethical journalism.

PWA Allocates $80,000 to Buy Dogwoods Here

An $80,000 PWA allotment to buy and plant 6,000 flowering dogwood trees in Potomac Park was announced yesterday by PWA Administrator Ickes.

C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of National Capital Parks, predicted the display would attract "countless visitors" to the Capital.

The plan calls for relandscaping of the D. C. World War Memorial, near the Tidal Basin, so that it will be framed in dogwood blossoms.

Cross-Examination Of Mr. Hopkins

WHAT IS NEEDED from Congress is not an examination of Mr. Hopkins, but an examination of the whole theory and structure of the WPA. If WPA administrators are blanketed under the civil service, we are in a fair way of making it a permanent institution, and we ought to do some very serious thinking before we decide that we want to do this.

Mr. Hopkins has a certain winsomeness that is disarming.

When he says that he has done all he can to keep petty politics out of relief I am convinced that he speaks the truth. I do not think that his worst enemies could deny that.

It is always extremely refreshing to hear people admit their mistakes. It would not have seemed arguable that a man in Mr. Hopkins' position—as the greatest employer in the United States—should never have attempted by public speeches in any way to influence the outcome of political issues.

MR. HOPKINS now wishes he had not made speeches in connection with elections. He still thinks he had the right publicly to support the President's bill for reorganizing the Supreme Court.

But the radio speech in which he did so was extremely questionable. He certainly created the impression in that speech that failure to support the President in his plan for reorganization of the judiciary might mean that the existences of people on relief rolls would be jeopardized.

Nor is Mr. Hopkins' description of his political views quite ingenuous. Cross-questioned, he said he had supported the Socialist candidate, Morris Hillquit, in New York in 1914, because he was opposed to the war.

When Senator Vandenberg asked him: "Did you ever support Upton Sinclair and say he is one of us?" Mr. Hopkins replied, "I can't answer that."

And he gave the committee the impression he was, like his father, a "Bryan Democrat."

BUT MR. HOPKINS, since he took over the office of relief administrator for the Federal Government, has certainly entertained ideas of organization "production for use"—along lines in no important particular different from those of Upton Sinclair.

When Jacob Baker was in the administration of the FERA, those ideas were openly discussed with anybody who wanted to drop into the offices of the Relief Administration in Washington.

Relief administrators in California in 1935 quite candidly told me that they believed that the organization of relief workers was the beginning of a new economic order altogether.

Mr. Hopkins has the right to change his mind, but he was certainly played with collectivist ideas much more recently than 1914.

THE REAL TROUBLE with WPA is in its essential theory. That theory is that it is the business of the Government to provide work for every conceivable category of unemployed.

Instead of starting with work—finding something which is useful and profitable as a public undertaking and then letting the man who wants work find the job—it starts with the man who wants work—and tries to create a job to suit his particular case and needs, regardless of whether there is any real economic or social justification for the enterprise.

Thereby it introduces a rigidity into the status of the unemployed. They expect the State to find work for them, not to create work possibilities which they can then go and take if they have a mind to.

They therefore enjoy in several particulars a peculiar advantage over every other worker in the United States. For the rest of us have got to find jobs somewhere in the total economic system. But the WPA worker has his found for him.

THIS COLUMN believes in the necessity of Government extending public activities as a means of taking up the slack in employment during periods when pay rolls are being diminished, but it ought to be possible to finish such works as represent more than normal Government activity when, first, the projects themselves, are finished, and when, secondly, the pay rolls of private industry are increasing.

And there ought to be some kind of automatic and continual recording of unemployment. There also ought to be a definition of what is "unemployment." The definition used by the WPA has had nothing to do with employment really. It has been determined by income. There are people who call themselves unemployed who have never been employed for years. They are social cases.

The technique of the WPA has been to create a project because there were specific categories of people who felt that they were competent to carry on such a project. Then, afterward, publicity has been turned loose to proved that the project represented a public asset.

The Federal arts projects are beautiful examples of this. Nobody in his right mind would suggest that if the state had wished to go into the arts, with subsidized theaters, symphonies, and the decoration and embellishment of public buildings, it would have gone about it in the manner of the WPA.

State support for the arts is nothing new; every nation of a high culture has given it. But then the state has attempted to create standards, to attract the very first talent, to attach honor and prestige to collaboration with it and to give the public the finest possible artistic product. That has been the justification of the state's activities.

The WPA, however, did not start its projects because the public wanted art, but because there were unemployed artists, and all one can say is that it is amazing that the product has sometimes been as good as it was.

But it must also be added that the Federal Government has persuaded a lot of people who might conceivably be good kitchen maids or chauffeurs that they are painters, actors and writers, and it's going to be difficult ever to unpersuade them.

It has also created under WPA completely different work conditions than those obtaining in private industries. It must make different work conditions if it starts with the person instead of starting with the job.

In the economic field these conditions are below the level in private industry, except in certain areas.

So we are in serious danger of creating a permanent class of subsistence workers totally unintegrated with the rest of the economic system.

THERE IS NOTHING in the idea of Government work which necessitates this. Our municipalities, counties and States have built bridges and roads and schoolhouses, laid out streets and sewers and water systems and employed school teachers and bookkeepers and all sorts of workers always.

But they have never before hired them because they were poor. They have hired them because the things needed to be done. Unfortunately, the particular workers needed very often have been chosen because they were Republicans or Democrats or because they had friends in the inner circle, but there are ways of getting away from that. There has never been anything inherent in the structure of such work that made it impossible to reform the selection of personnel.

But there is such a structural fault in WPA. It was hastily conceived, hastily set up, and its whole theory has never been thoroughly analyzed by Congressional authorities.

It was described as an emergency measure, and before it is made permanent it will be well for Congress to take a thorough look at it.

Sirovich Bill Asks D.C. Be Made State

The fourth and last of the hold-over bills designed to give Washingtonians the vote was thrown into the House hopper yesterday by Representative Sirovich (Democrat), of New York.

It proposes a constitutional amendment to convert the District into the forty-ninth State with all suffrage rights for local citizens.

Yugoslavia And Her Neighbors

Belgrade.

IN THESE perilous hours many statesmen in eastern Europe are wishing their countries had developed on some South Sea island. Neighbors today are more frequently a danger than an asset, particularly if they chance to be either of the two fascist powers.

Yugoslavia has not only both Germany and Italy, but five smaller states as well (Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Greece and Albania) all touching her frontiers. Not all are potential enemies, but enough are so to make Yugoslavia's position extremely difficult.

Italy, despite its pact with Yugoslavia in March, 1937, must always be watched. That pact did for Italian-Yugoslav relations what the German-Polish pact did for relations between Berlin and Warsaw, and certainly the latter is now hardly worth the paper on which it was written. For years Rome could not forget its ambitions in Dalmatia, claimed for Italy on the basis of the secret treaty of London during the World War. Probably she still does not forget, but "friendship" with Yugoslavia is momentarily a necessity, for it keeps Italy's back door closed against a possible enemy should she become embroiled elsewhere. If her present ambitions in the Mediterranean are blocked, Mussolini may again turn his interest to Yugoslavia, at the risk of running up against Hitler, as recently he did over sub-Carpathian Ruthenia.

But the traditional danger from Italy has taken second place now that a new neighbor has recently moved next door. Germany is not keeping out of the field just because Rome is interested, although Italy's jealousy, no doubt, is hampering. Actually Hitler is already at work through economic penetration, through minorities, etc., but more of that later.

WHAT OF Yugoslavia's other neighbors? Hungary still remembers that she lost territory to Yugoslavia; but probably owing to influence from Rome, little has been heard of her claims recently. Budapest now depends so much on Italy and more and more on Berlin, that it too needs watching. Presumably the Hungarian minority in Yugoslavia could be made to follow the lead of the German minority, just as in the recent elections the Magyar minority voted, as did the Germans, for the government.

Bulgaria, although it nurses a grievance over Macedonia, is racially very close to Yugoslavia. In January, 1937, the two countries signed their pact of eternal friendship, which capped efforts to bring understanding after years of frontier troubles. Gradually, Sofia has tried, it seems, to liberate itself from Italian political influence; economically it is under the thumb of Germany.

To the South are Greece and Albania. Athens looks economically and ideologically toward Berlin, while Albania is subservient to Italy and guided by Rome's policy toward Belgrade. In the recent Yugoslav elections the Albanian minority voted with the other minorities in favor of Stoyadinovitch. That leaves only Rumania—now at last evidently intent on challenging the Fascist movement at home for fear of Nazi ambitions from abroad.

ALTOGETHER not an enviable environment for any country, particularly one which by tradition has been pro-democratic and pro-French, and which is now rich in materials but terribly poor for lack of development.

On the ground of expediency, Stoyadinovitch maintained that his policy of fostering friendship with the fascist countries was the only sane one. His election campaign movie showed the enemies of Yugoslavia's frontiers miraculously becoming friends—Italians and Bulgars alike. But the government's small majority (about 54 per cent) in a fight where the foreign policy was one of the chief issues, shows how little impression this argument made.

If, as used to be said in Belgrade, Stoyadinovitch wanted to imitate Foreign Minister Beck's policy of making friends for Poland then, now he risks the same defeat. For "friendship" with Germany is proving no safeguard against Nazi aims.

In the economic field Yugoslavia has fallen in line with the German program. During the last year, owing to the Anschluss, the Sudetan annexations and to increased investment in the Yugoslav mining industry, Germany's investment stake in this country has risen from fourteenth place to a probable third. From January to September, 1938, Greater Germany took 40 per cent of Yugoslavia's exports, which as they form only 2 per cent of Germany's imports, put Belgrade at Berlin's mercy. Yugoslavia is trying to resist further dependence, but the fight is hard.

ALTHOUGH Berlin is on good terms with Belgrade, although the German minority voted en bloc for Stoyadinovitch on December 11, still the Nazis prompt and promote the typical German minority aspirations. In Yugoslavia their minority numbers, on official count, about 500,000 or 3.6 per cent of the population (German figures vary anywhere from 600,000 to 750,000). These are quite scattered in Slovenia, Croatia and the Voivodine, but the majority live in this last district close by the Danube. There are not, as in the case of Czecho-Slovakia, any compact frontier groups, which could be used in a claim for modification of the frontier.

Nevertheless, the minority has not lacked for propaganda, even couched in such organizations as the "Rapids" Football Association and a male voice society (Schlaraffia Marpurghia) of Maribor. But chief of all the minority organizations is the Schwaebisch-deutscher Kulturbund with headquarters at Novi Sad. Originally founded in 1920 as a society to prevent denationalization, it has recently undergone nazification.

In 1934 when the Kulturbund was still fairly conservative in its aims, a young set broke away from it, under the leadership of Branimir Altgayer (first name since changed to Siegfried); and they formed the Kultur und Wohlfahrtsvereinigung der Deutschen Slawonians (K. W. V. D.) which followed the footsteps of the Henleinist movement. While professing loyalty it advanced a program comparable to the Karlsbad demands—including recognition of the minority's national individuality, its right to organize the community after their own national ideology; grant of a special status as a national community, and recognition of the chiefs of that community as sole representatives for the minority. This program was adopted by many other groups besides the K. W. V. D. as a platform for the creation of a united German national front.

RECENTLY, in November, 1938, Altgayer's K. W. V. D. rejoined the Kulturbund which is now the representative of the German minority and is definitely Nazified. Its libraries have been purged and furnished with Nazi reading material and all its traveling lecturers are reported to have taken courses for leaders in Germany designed for Nazi agents abroad.

Through the Kulturbund, together with other channels of propaganda, minority newspapers, certain Nazi priests and clergy, tourists and, of course, the German Travel Agency, Nazi propaganda is trying to worm its way into Yugoslavia.

But there are other methods. Because the Germans are in scattered groups, the Nazis have tried to develop a land-purchase policy—known to them as a condensation policy. Perhaps they hope to create still another Sudetenland. From an official source I have heard Germans have been buying up tracts running from Radgona southeast and in the northern part of the Voiodine. Figures show considerable purchases in the neighborhood of Ossick. This movement became noticeable about three years ago. The government became so alarmed that it decreed no land may be purchased by a foreigner within 50 kilometers (about 30 miles, of the frontier without special permission from the ministry of interior and of war.

ACCORDING to good authority a German letter of instructions was recently circulated in several districts, including Valpovo and Virivotitza, advising Germans to buy land by preference along the Danube, Drava and Sava rivers. This report coincides in part with a version of the German aims heard in Creatia, that the Reich wants to push down along the Danube, toward Trieste, dominating the Slovenes, and along the Drava toward Ossick.

In the absence of enough minorities to make penetration plausible on a nationalistic basis, Hitler might resurrent a claim as heir of the former Austro-Hungarian empire! None of these plans would please Italy, and there are persistent rumors that Rome hopes to form a bloc of Poland, Hungary and Croatia (possibly Yugoslavia, as a unity against Hitler.

Croatia itself might be used as a tool by Hitler, although the Croatians seem aware of, and very opposed to, the German menace. Feeling between the Croats and the German minority is strained. At present Germany prefers to work with Belgrade, where there is a friendly government. But it is conceivable that Hitler might foster discord between Zagreb and the government.

I asked Dr. Matchek, leader of the strong opposition and president of the Croat Peasant' Party, whether he thought this likely. "It is not excluded," he answered, "that Germany is fomenting such a state of affairs in order to be able to come in at the most convenient and opportune moment as a saviour. It is fatal today that democratic powers have let Hitler become the defender of the principle of nationality."

Kiwanis to Mark Founding Jan. 15

Washington Kiwanians will join with 101,000 others the week of January 15 to 21 throughout the United States and Canada in celebration of the founding of Kiwanis International, Edward S. Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett

Socialist Success Story

"Whenever I hear people, particularly young folks, say 'I can't do that,' I feel like shaking them," says Jim Maurer, of Reading, Pa., and he calls his autobiography "It Can Be Done" (Rand School Press, $3). "If a thing is worth doing"—these are the last words of his book—"it can be done."

The record does not wholly sustain such extravagant optimism, but it explains it. Jim Maurer is the two-fisted veteran of Pennsylvania's labor and socialist movement; he is 75 years old now, and he has seen a lot of apparently impossible things happen—including an all-Socialist city council in his home town of Reading, Pa., where he himself had been blacklisted in his trade and barred from public speaking, and some pretty good labor laws in what was once Boies Penrose's tight little Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

HE SAW the Easton Grays fire on the railroad strikers and their families back in 1877. (Jim was 13 that year, and was sitting on top of the awning pole in front of Breneiser's cigar store at Seventh and Penn streets when the trouble began.) But that wasn't his first lesson in the class struggle. Jim was not yet 12, and earning $1 a week at piecework in Harbster's hinge factory when the boss introduced some new machines which drilled four holes as quickly as the old ones drilled one. Jim naively believed he would thereafter earn four times as much money. He didn't; he got just the same pay. When he protested, the boss said: "Well, Jimmie, if you don't like it, why don't you quit?" Jimmie then and there became a labor organizer; when a strike proved impossible, the boys developed a simple system of "scientific sabotage." But they had never heard those polysyllabic words.

Jim was born to be a leader. He was a leader in the Bingaman street gang, and when one Harry Pyle, later to become famous as a pitcher in the National League, proved that he could lick Jim, Jim went to a Negro professional named Butler and offered $5 for enough boxing lessons to beat Mr. Pyle. But after the battle in which Maurer downed Pyle, Butler refused the morey; he said he'd often paid more money to see worse fights. Pyle became one of Jim Maurer's cronies. He was one of the little army which Maurer took to Adamstown, 10 miles out of Reading, to encourage free speech in that factory-ridden town. Pyle had two ribs broken and Maurer a fractured jaw after that fight, but it established the right of the Knights of Labor to hold public meetings in Adamstown.

Maurer had joined the Knights of Labor as soon as he could read the literature of that predecessor of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. By 1893 he was a Populist; soon thereafter he becams a Single Taxer; he turned Socialist, like many other old Yankee radicals, at the turn of the century. He was a good steamfitter, but those were pre-Wagner act days. Jim and his brother had the largest steamfittting business in Reading in 1893, but they were informed by a committee of "business leaders" that they must quit stump speaking or go out of business. They went out of business. Soon Maurer was blacklisted throughout eastern Pennsylvania. Even in Philadelphia he couldn't get a job. All the hiring bosses knew his name. That did not make Jim Maurer any more conservative.

Nevertheless, he picked up odd jobs, and kept talking. In 1904 he went to the Socialist National Convention in Chicago; the party paid his railway fare and gave him $6 for a week's board and lodging. In 1906 he was his party's nominee for Governor, and polled 26,000 votes. In 1910 he was elected to the State Assembly, and proceeded to make himself felt. In 1912 he became president of the State Federation of Labor, and he was re-elected to that post for 16 consecutive terms; workingmen's compensation and child labor laws came to Pennsylvania in large part because of his efforts. Most of his campaign of those days seem mild progressivism today, but he won a harvest of hate for them.

COMEDY MINGLED with tragedy in those days, when a kind of fascism, though the word had not yet beeen coined, was a reality in America. In Boston a mob sacked the Socialist headquarters. (This was in 1920, just after the war.) Maurer, true to his guns, went direct to the office and found a gang of sailors still smashing everything in sight. On the walls, however, two pictures hung, untouched. One was of Lincoln; one of Karl Marx. "Why don't you smash those, too?" asked Maurer. "You damned foreigner," a "patriotic" sailor retorted, "don't you know that's Abraham Lincoln?" "But the other?" Maurer persisted. "Go on back to Russia," said the sage "patriot." "That's Lincoln's father."

The fighting record is full of such stories. The latter part of the book, with its methodical record of Socialist municipal victories in Reaidng, and of mere good government, seems tame in comparison. But it's all a part, and a vital part, of American history. To Jim Maurer it still proves that anything worth doing, in America, can be done.

Practical Politics

By Ernest K. Lindley

Senator Bailey's Code

SENATOR JOSIAH BAILEY, of North Carolina, put on his celebrated ice-cream manner for the hazing of Harry Hopkins. In his cold, smooth way, he suggested all the correct attitudes about politics in WPA. He spoke of relief money, raised partly by taxation and partly by borrowing, as a great public trust. Perhaps it was only in the imagination of this correspondent that he seemed to be a bit more interested in Mr. Hopkins' role in the so-called "purge" and during the Supreme Court fight of 1937 than in whether WPA workers were free to choose as they pleased between Republicans and Democrats.

But on one point during the first session of the examination of Mr. Hopkins, Senator Bailey revealed that, something like a surprise omelet in reverse, he has a warm center. That was when he brought up the fact that Mr. Hopkins, if confirmed as Secretary of Commerce, will appoint the census takers in 1940. Senator Bailey did not speak of the Federal money appropriated to hire an army of census takers as a great public trust. On the contrary, he volunteered the observation that this was a matter involving practical politics. And as he did so, he smiled most graciously at his witness, as if inviting assurance that he would get his share of the pie. Mr. Hopkins noncommittally sank his chin in the palm of his hand.

BY SENATOR BAILEY'S code, as he expressed or implied it, there is nothing wrong about political speech-making by the Postmaster-General, who operates a vast business enterprise, or by the Secretary of Commerce, who will appoint a vast flock of temporary job-holders during the next Presidential year. Nor presumably is it wrong for the Secretary of the Treasury, who collects money with the aid of a corps of political job-holders, to make political speeches. It would be wrong, of course, for any of them to make many political appointments without consulting Democratic Senators or Representatives.

Why the money spent by the Post Office Department or any other regular department of the Government is any less of a public trust than the money spent by WPA is a question which Senator Bailey did not answer. If there is a distinction it is partly one of custom and partly one of size. Certain public jobs, well below the level of the policy-making positions which should be manned by the victors have been reserved by custom as party patronage. Four substantial as well as sentimental reasons the general public objects to the introduction of partisan patronage into the Federal relief program. One big reason is enough, without enumerating others, that the sums of money and the number of people involved are too great.

THE ACCEPTED WAY of taking an administrative arm of the Government "out of politics" is to put it under the competitive civil service. When that is done, the appointees in the policy-making positions at the top become free to make partisan speeches and otherwise perform their duties as members of "the President's team" (to use Mr. Hopkins' phrase). Even in the case of an enterprise so vast as WPA there would have been little or no criticism of Mr. Hopkins' political speeches if the public had been convinced that a firm non-political layer of administrative employes stood between him and the regular WPA workers.

However, amid the outcry about WPA in politics, the House subcommittee on deficiency appropriations has proposed to nullify the President's order putting the WPA administrative employes under the classified civil service. It is true that this order would blanket in the present administrative workers. And it can be argued that the extension of the civil service would imply permanency for WPA as an institution. Nevertheless, the President's order would make all WPA administrative employes subject to the strict civil service rules and penalties for political activities.

ALTHOUGH THE Roosevelt Administration does not lack practical politicians, there has been far heavier pressure in behalf of the merit system from the Administration than from Congress. Politics did not make much headway in the Federal works-relief program under Harry Hopkins, until the Senate insisted upon the right to confirm the State WPA directors. Mr. Hopkins erred, as he has now acknowledged, in making five or six partisan speeches and in indorsing a candidate in the Iowa senatorial primary. For that error he has been lambasted publicly. But, as he ruefully remarked, he has taken private lambasting — undoubtedly much more severe—for refusing to put WPA behind Democratic candidates in almost all parts of the country. He ought to get profound spiritual relief from passing out in 1940 some jobs which are acknowledged to be legitimate political patronage by all righteous men of public affairs, including Senator Bailey.

"Mystery Yachting," My Eye!

"Federal agents are investigating two mystery trips of the Coster yacht to Gloucester. The fact that Mr. Coster did not return on the yacht, but came back by car, is regarded as significant."—News item.

Bunk, if you ask this department. Every trip of every yacht these days of softer seamanship is more or less a mystery trip; the businessman-owner seldom knows where he is going; it all depends on weather, mood and fuel consumption. And as for there being any obvious significance in an owner not finishing the trip by yacht, phooey! You'd be surprised how many owners get fed up on it all and come back by land.

Speaking of the Coster yacht, it is amusing to see it referred to as a $500,000 yacht. There are not a dozen yachts afloat that will bring that kind of money these days, and the bigger they are the lower the quotation. We'll bet you can go up to Bedell's on the Housatonic right now and get the Carolita for less than $35,000.

Candidates for West Point Take Exams Here

More than a score of youths are taking mental and physical tests this week for the one appointment to West Point from the District. Yesterday was the second day of mental tests and the candidates appeared relaxed.

Speed Urged By First Lady On Lynch Ban

Also Favors Equality For Colored Youths In Military Schools

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt favors early enactment of a Federal anti-lynching law to be applied to all forms of mob violence in all sections, she told the National Conference on Negro Youth yesterday.

Almost simultaneously, on Capitol Hill Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas, leader of the filibuster which killed anti-lynching legislation last session, said he understood it would be introduced again and opponents would "discuss it at length."

Replying to a question from the floor, Mrs. Roosevelt said, "I doubt very much if a law will actually stop lynching, but I would like to see it passed because it puts us, as a whole, against something which we should all be against." She made it plain she was speaking for herself and not "as a representative of the governmental administration."

Urges Equality

Mrs. Roosevelt told nearly 1,000 colored youths, assembled by the National Youth Administration, she favored these measures affecting colored people:

Equal opportunity and equal treatment in naval and military schools.

Equal opportunity in civil service, dependent upon their abilities and positions in which they would not find themselves affected by local prejudices.

"Your remedy," she told her audience, "lies in better organization and in organizations which know no color line. Thus you can get proper treatment and give proper service."

Asked what colored employes should do to hold private jobs where the employer is unwilling to pay a minimum wage in keeping with local living costs, she said, "You labor under the same difficulties as women. A woman, to hold her job, must do it twice as well as a man would have to do it. Imagine a Negro worker has to do his job twice as well if he is to get the same pay."

"The right to work should know no color line."

Straus Speaks

At the night session, Nathan Straus, United States Housing Administrator, said the housing program involves "problems of racial differences." He has recommended, he said, that in communities where the colored slum population is large, at least one member of the housing commission should be colored.

"Our largest problem," he said, "is that of displacement. There is a gap of 18 to 24 months on tearing down the slums and putting up new structures. We cannot displace people who have no place to go. There must be intelligent co-operation to take care of the families which are displaced."

By next summer, Straus said, 5,000 families will be moved each month out of slums into Federally constructed areas. "Our plan," he added, "is modeled on successful European experiments."

Dr. Warren F. Draper, executive officer of the United States Public Health Service, offered five recommendations:

Extension of administration as now conducted by local and State health departments.

Extension of hospital facilities by 360,000 beds in all parts of the country for those who need them most, Federal, State and local governments co-operating.

Adequate medical care for those with incomes under $800, to be furnished by private physicians rather than by Federal, State or local health services.

Medical care for the self-supporting who require special service for which they are unable to pay, but not through "compulsory" health service.

Medical care for those who lose their wages through sickness.

Aubrey Williams, National Youth Administrator, declared necessary the spread and strengthening of democracy. He said this Nation gained in 1938 through the opportunity to witness assults on democracy aboard.

Evaluation reports were submitted to the conference on "Health and Housing," Dr. Median C. Bousfield; "Civil Liberties," Walter A. White; "Employment and Economic Security," Lester B. Granger; "Education," Dr. John W. Davis.

on running,' and then he fired his third shot."

The third shot struck Mordoff in the head and killed him.

As McGrath ran on down the hall, the killer shouted after him: "It's all right, I just wanted Mordoff."

Nearly four years ago Mordoff, an osteopath, tried unsuccessfully to retain custody of 3-year-old "Sonny Boy" Mann. He had reared the child as his own and had named him Gordon E. Mordoff 3d.

Miss Margaret Mann claimed the child and said Mrs Mordoff had obtained him from an orphanage. Mrs. Mordoff died shortly before the case went to court. Dr. Mordoff said his wife had gone to Minneapolis for the birth of the baby and insisted that she had never indicated that "Sonny Boy" was not his own son.

Miss Mann said the Mordoff child was dead at birth and that her own baby had been substituted. She won her case.

RIVIERA ROSE—A blend of Congressional reception guests and the cast of the National Theater's "Set to Music" were combined in the colorful crowd that greeted Rosita Rio's first appearance at the Lounge Riviera last evening (Thursday).

Little Rosita is a Latin firecracker, if there ever was one. She bounds out thumping her Spanish guitar in startling style, sings "Raccho Grande" (classic Mexican cowboy song) with a splendid swing, handles the maracas as though she were born in Havana. But Rosita is neither Cuban, Spanish nor Mexican. She's a bona fide Puerto Rican, has made Spanish films for RKO, recently pleased the critical audiences of Manhattan's Ritz-Carlton and the Sert Room of the Waldorf. She received a fine homeland welcome from the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Valdez, of Puerto Rico, who now live at 2400 Sixteenth street.

Competing with Rosita for attention were Toni Sorel, Helen Bennett and Laurie Douglas, nationally known models appearing with "Set to Music." These famed beauties were accompanied by their husbands, much to the discontent of local esquires.

YOUNG VISITORS: Helene de Sibour, aged 11, and her slightly younger brother, Henri de Sibour, jr., are looking forward eagerly to a dinner party at Pall Mall this evening (Friday) when they will have their first chance to hear their pretty mother, Mary de Sibour, sing professionally. It will probably be the thrill of their juvenile lives when the chattering crowd stills to that attentive silence that Mary de Sibour's songs command, later breaks into encore-demanding applause.

SWITCH SIGNAL: Jackie Burroughs is going to leave the Hour Glass and go up to the King Cole Room to canary her sweet-swing personalities. And Evelyn (Honey) Knight is going to desert the King Cole Room for the Hour Glass, where she will perch on the piano and dispense fancy melody in conjunction with Tommy and Bill.

Another Hour Glass switch: Owner-Operator Vincent Gallegher, back in town with a fresh Florida tan, has decided not to have any style revue of winter sports togs (unless there's a blizzard). Next H. G. style show, it's been practically decided, will be of swim suits and cruise wear.

IRISH CHRISTENING—The eight-pound bundle of joy recently delivered to Leo Lisee, Mayfair's good-time boy, and Mrs. Lisee, is going to be christened Barry. The little lad, we're told, has red hair, blue eyes and looks (and sounds) like Mickey Rooney. Your column drank Baby Barry's health appropriately (meaning in a milk shake) and agreed with Mayfair's singer Louanna that something will really have to be done about Papa Leo who's burst all the buttons off his vest and been completely up in the stratosphere ever since the great event.

THE REDCOATS ARE COMING! Those Red Jackets, led by Duane Hogle, will take Hi Hat by storm on Monday afternoon. Their weapons will be their own voices, plus bass, accordion, flute and guitar. Advance information is that the town is going to surrender to the Red Jackets—and like it.

Remember—just tonight and tomorrow to say hail, farewell and happy days to Hi Hat's Three M's.

BROWN DERBY'S A TOPPER! For a topping time try the Brown Derby. Al Simmonds' slogan is "Anything can happen at the Brown Derby." He should add, "and does." Al and Pianist George Berg lead the Screwball revels.

HISTORIC HALLS: When your grandpop had a good time (which you can bet the old rafter did), he probably went down to Hall's, feasted on ale and oysters, came home singing such hot ragtime as "My Gal's a High Born Lady."

Hall's is still in the same spot at Seventh and K streets southwest, has the same fine old bar, has never been out of business (except for that prohibition interlude), still serves sea food cooked according to time-honored recipes used in the reign of Queen Victoria and Theodore the First (Roosevelt).

EYE-FULLS: Louise Martel (singing with the Biltmore Boys Orchestra at Shar-Zad) a peppery little Texan, twice as fresh as a daisy, looking four years younger than her 19 years.

Peggy Townsend (Cafe Caprice), incarnation of the "glamour girl" as envisioned in the press and magazines. We're told that Peggy will be featured as Washington's "glamour debutante of the year" in a new magazine.

Princess Irlandia (that Irlandia is the Latin version of her real royal name) as Hedy La Marr in the Shoreham Blue Room show.

LOOKING BACKWARD: Matt Windsor, who plays the piano and accordion so fervently in the Anchor Room, got his first taste of the amusement business when he helped in the motion picture houses his father operated in the Ukraine.

Emcee "Tiny" Meeker of the Lotus, who hefts around 325 pounds, won a Charleston contest in his high school days.

Those splendid broadcasts of dance music coming from Paul Kain's orchestra in Wardman's Metronome Room are a reminder that Lew Berman, star singer in the Hamilton Rainbow Room, was one of the boys participating in the first broadcast from Wardman over the old WCAP.

Huey Liang, operator of Bamboo Gardens, is a Major Bowes graduate.

Howard Topham, pianist in the Uptown cocktail lounge, used to be a Don Dickerman Pirate in the Pirates' Den at Miami. He's looking forward to visiting with Cap'n Dickerman when the new Washington Pirates' Den opens late this month.

Safes Defy Yeggs At Two Groceries

The Sanitary Grocery store at 520 Minnesota avenue northeast, was broken into early yesterday and a dozen cartons of cigarettes stolen. The thieves attempted to break the safe with a meat cleaver, but were unsuccessful.

Two nights ago the Sanitary store at 745 Fifteenth street northeast was entered in the same manner, the dial hammered off the safe, the job then abandoned and cigarettes and milk stolen.

ChamberSeries Finds Quartet In Fine Mettle

Coolidge Four Carry Difficult Program to Thrilling Climax

The Coolidge Quartet, continuing the current series of chamber concerts in the Library of Congress, had several perilous peaks to scale last night. They crossed them all, coming out to take their bows at the end altogether unscathed.

The program looked innocent enough. It announced a quartet by the always charming Cherubini, a tryptyque by the modern, but not too modern, composer, Alexandre Tansman, and a quartet by the romantically melodic Schubert. But the going, once the playing started, turned out not to be smooth.

Cherubini Work Charming

The Cherubini work, Quartet No. 5, in F major, was charming, but the Coolidge musicians found much more in it than formal grace. Playing allegro and scherzo passages trippingly on the bow they made a lively program opener out of a piece that might have been just nice music.

The men were well warmed by the time they hit the first steep climb—Tansman's composition. It isn't the dizzy heights (because the Triptyque is neither long nor arduous), but the treacherous path that besets unsuspecting travelers. The surefootedness of last night's performers, led by Violinist William Kroll, provided one of the thrills of the recital. They fairly bounded over tricky rhythms and the strange harmonies achieving a perfect score for safe landings.

Schubert Proves Climax

The climax of the evening, however, came with the performance of the Schubert Quartet in G minor. Here the quartet wasn't only agile and technically keen; it was on fire. Fire activated the whole group, but the spark sprang from the bow of its leader. It's not considered good etiquette to single out individual players in a string quartet for praise or blame—it's an all for-for-one game—but there is no use refraining from saying what everyone who hears the Coolidge Quartet knows: William Kroll, the first violinist, is an inspired lleader.

And if that is breaking the rules further, the fault is Schubert's. He wrote a quartet with a whirlwind finish for the first fiddle. Maybe Mr. Kroll shouldn't play it so sensationally well—he being a quartet member in good standing. But he does. And was the audience last night glad!

Sprinkle of Nutmeg Wins First Prize for Eggnog Entered in Winter Beverages Recipe Contest

Alcoholic Drinks Vie With Fruit Punches, Tomato Cocktails And Consommes

By Alice Clayton,
The Post Food Editor.

SOCIETY PUNCH, Florida mint punch, steaming-hot eggnog and mulled grape juice were but a few of the seasonable offerings submitted in last week's recipe contest. Even the judges, who reveled in their chance to arbitrate between the exhilarating virtues of peach brandy and hot claret punch, were amazed at the number of unusual ways of dressing up winter beverages.

One Southern-styled Tom and Jerry recipe amused and enlightened the judges. It was prefaced by a warning from the author, Mrs. John D. Swisher, Hagerstown, Md., who wrote: "Beware! A sudden jolt of Southern Tom and Jerry has been known to stop a victim's watch, snap both his suspenders and crack his glass eye straight across, all in the same motion." Less violent, but equally invigorating were entries for spiced cider, cider cup cranberry punch, peach brandy, spiced nut milk, wassail bowl and several identical recipes for a lemon and clove tinged ginger cup.

Not all winter drinks in this holiday beverage contest were for fruit or wine mixtures, however. Celery juice and hot or cold tomato juice cocktails vied with Russian tea and Mexican chocolate drinks. Clam bisque and chicken and oyster consomme were highly regarded by the judges, while German vegetable soup, jellied tomato consomme and a spicy black bean soup of Latin origin were found delicious.

Wins by a Sprinkle

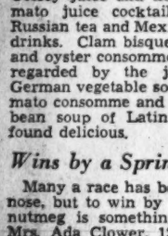
Many a race has been won by a nose, but to win by a sprinkle of nutmeg is something else again. Mrs. Ada Clower, 1215 Sixteenth street northwest, however, accomplished the seemingly impossible, and because of her generous use of nutmeg spray over her eggnog entry she has been awarded first prize of $3. Although such tempting rival ideas as Kentucky eggnog, orange milknog, chocolate, pineapple and lemon nogs and several frozen eggnogs were submitted, the judges considered Mrs. Clower's blend of flavors superior. Here it is:

Holiday Eggnog

Beat 1 dozen strictly fresh eggs well. Sprinkle in a little nutmeg. Add 1 pound of sugar. Sprinkle in a little nutmeg. Add 1 quart of good quality whisky. Sprinkle in at little nutmeg. Add ½ pint of good rum. Sprinkle in a little nutmeg. Add 2 quarts of rich milk. Sprinkle in a little nutmeg. Add 1 pint of cream. Sprinkle in a little nutmeg. Stir and whip well and serve at once in an ice chilled bowl. Sprinkle in a little nutmeg.

Hawaii Calls

The beckoning of South Sea isles cannot be answered by average mortals, so Miss Sylvia Klein, 1417 Parkwood place northwest, has brought part of their tropical charm to us. She submitted a Honolulu tea as her winter beverage. The judges awarded her a second prize of $2 for the fragrance and delicate flavor of this inexpensive drink. Miss Klein suggests that variations of this tea may be made by using grapefruit or limes, in season, or adding a "stick" of Jamaica rum.



Miss S. Klein

Honolulu Tea

To 2 quarts of strong cold tea add the juice of 6 lemons, 2 cups of crushed pineapple, mixed with its own syrup, and 1 cup of maraschino cherries, with their syrup. Cook an additional syrup by boiling together 2 cups of sugar and 1 cup of water for 5 minutes. Half sherry of Madeira wine may be substituted for all water. Chill and serve with cracked ice. Garnish glasses with sprig of mint if desired. This serves about 20 persons and may be stored on pantry shelves in covered jars, or cans, for unexpected guests.

For Long Winter Nights

Apple toddy, the very name and thought of it, suggests long winter evenings before an open fire. A wise home builder and cook is Mrs. J. H. King, 1623 Thirty-fifth street northwest, for she stores her $1 prize winning toddy in great stone crocks, so as never to be at a loss for January hospitality. The judges considered her cheery picture of baked apples, bobbing about in their bowl of brandy and orange mixture, both jolly and palatable.

Mrs. J. King

Apple Toddy

Place 12 apples, peeled, cored and baked, in a 3-gallon stone crock. Add 2 oranges, washed and cut in eighths, a few cloves and 12 lumps of sugar. A stick of cinnamon or a dash of nutmeg may be added to this basic mixture. Pour 2 quarts of good quality apple brandy and 2 quarts of boiling water over this mixture. Cover and store until ready to use. To serve, place apples in large punch bowl and pour strained brandy over the apples.

Continental Champion

So little known to the American housewife, and yet so beloved by European epicures is this entry of waterless soup, that the contest judges made mental notes to sample its fine flavor at once. A $1 prize has been awarded Mrs. Gwyn Griffiths, 2131 P street northwest, for her deliciously flavored double consomme, which proves itself both an appetizing cup beverage and a healthful food for invalids. Well known to its native Paris, where it is prized by gourmets, it is also a favorite of English stage folk.

Mrs. Griffiths

Double Consumme or Waterless Soup

Use a good-sized preserving jar with a hermetically sealed top for the following ingredients: 2 pounds of rare beef, all fat removed, 1 pound of peeled onions, 1 pound of washed carrots, 1 pound of washed celery, ½ pound of thoroughly washed spinach and 2 pounds of fresh tomatoes. Add salt, pepper, thyme and herbs to taste. Place these ingredients in jar and seal tightly. Place this jar in a preserving kettle, or in the oven with water in a pan. Allow to slowly cook for three or four hours, at which time the juice will have become extracted and filled with nourishing vitamins. This consomme is so healthful that it is often used in operative cases of the aged and very young. Its strained left-overs may be used in soup in the ordinary fashion.

Tart and Tingling

Abstainers will approve this spicy prize-winning recipe, submitted by Mrs. Mary Duffy, 409 Park avenue, Baltimore, Md. Although containing no alcohol, this currant mint punch manages to be bracing and as tartly delicious as many a stronger drink. The use of citrus fruits and mint with the biting flavor of currants creates a novel compound. The judges approved Mrs. Duffy's recipe on this count as well as for its quick and inexpensive qualities.

Mrs. M. Duffy

Currant Mint Punch

Thoroughly whip 1 medium-sized glass of tart currant jelly. Pour 2 quarts of boiling water over 1 cup of sugar and the jelly. Cool. For additional tartness, ½ amount of grape juice may be substituted for all water. Add and mix in the juice of 6 lemons and 2 oranges. Slice 2 more oranges very thin. Add these to a chilled punch bowl and add about 4 cups of shaved ice. Pour in chilled mixture and serve with sprigs of mint. Serves 20.

Recipe Judges

The three judges for this week's roll contest have been selected for their cooking prowess and knowledge of baking. Each juror is an expert in this realm. Mr. Jim B. Luttes, 3718 Garfield street northwest, has consented to take time off from his executive duties in one of Washington's largest bakeries and serve as roll arbiter tomorrow. Another judge is Mrs. Emory E. Samson, Great Falls road, Va., whose ability as a baker of dainty rolls is celebrated among her friends. The third judge is Miss Myrtle McVey, 412 Eleventh street northeast, whose official capacities with a smart hotel gives her intimate experience with good baking and service.

Sauerkraut to Be Contest Motif For Next Week

One of the most substantial and economical of vegetables will serve as contest theme for The Post's new recipe contest. Spicy, palate tingling sauerkraut will be the subject at the request of Mrs. A. Hoffman, of Arlington, Va., who is enthusiastic in her loyalty to this humble, but appetizing food. She writes: "As a busy homemaker my time is limited but I enjo the recipe contests very much. May I suggest sauerkraut recipes for next week? My family is very fond of 'kraut,' and I should be grateful for learning new ways of preparing it."

To fulfill Mr. Hoffman's culinary desires, enter any home-tested recipe for sauerkraut which possesses flavor and originality. Your choice may be a garlic or apple-tinted dish. It may comprise a sausage or bacon and sauerkraut casserole. Whatever your choice, mail your carefully written recipe at once to Alice Clayton, The Post food editor. Closing date is January 21. Prizes include, first award of $1, second of $2 and three additional prizes of $1 each.

Contest Runners-Up

Miss Jeanette Rosenberg, 431 Hume avenue, Potomac, Va.—Black bean soup and chocolate eggnog.

Mrs. Arthur Rhoads, 520 Elm street, Frederick, Md.—Tom and Jerry.

Mrs. Mary Graham Ireland, 719 Third street northeast — Celery juice cocktail.

Miss Cecilia S. Abdo, 510 F street northeast—Clam bisque.

Miss Dorothy R. Smith, P. O. Box 225, Purcellville, Va.—Hot spiced tomato juice.

Mrs. Charles A. Lee, 404 Virginia avenue, Harrisonburg, Va.—Chocolate sundae.

Mrs. Harriet S. Bowers, 348 Fairfield drive, Bethesda, Md.—Delicious winter drink.

Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 I street northwest.—Tropical punch.

Mrs. Mary E. Cole, 113 East Church street, Frederick, Md.—Kentucky eggnog.

Miss Maria Wiesbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest—Cranberry punch.

Mrs. Rosa Lee Cox, Box 1, R. F. D. 2, Purcellville, Va.—Eggnog.

Miss Ruth Clark, Box 103, La Plata, Md.—A perfect eggnog.

Mrs. Pauline Crow, 320 North Carolina avenue southeast—Mulled cider.

Miss Carolyn Bennett, Leonardtown, Md.—Mulled grape juice.

Fruit Appetizers Good in Winter

Hot fruit hors d'oeuvres are the latest addition to the appetizer platter to meet with success. They are especially popular served before dinner during the winter months. For a special treat serve hot gem appetizers. They are as delicious as they are unusual and so easy to prepare.

Wrap canned Hawaiian pineapple gems—spoon size pieces cut from the juiciest part of the fruit—which have been drained and dried on absorbent paper in narrow strips of bacon or dried beef, spread with pimiento cheese, and fasten with hors d'oeuvre sticks. Broil and serve piping hot.

To Test Eggs.

Place an egg in a pan of water. If fresh it will lie on its side. If a few days old it will tilt upwards. If stale, it will stand on end. If very old, it will float.

Advice on Food

Economical Sandwiches Made From Baked Bean Leftovers

WOULD YOU believe that an inexpensive and thoroughly delectable sandwich could be made from the humble baked beans? Would you like the recipe for this economical way of utilizing your little leftover scraps of last nights' baked bean pot? Would you enjoy sampling, for the first time, the unforgetable flavor of a Polish fish soup, contributed by a fellow Food Page reader? If so, read on. There are other unique cooking ideas and time-saving household hints published from week to week in this Consumers' Counsel. All contributions come from the readers, as do their queries which are answered in this open forum. Mail all inquiries to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor.

Brotherly Love

From the Quaker City comes an ingenious recipe for the use of baked beans. Mrs. Wilmer Alice Loftin, 1238 South Forty-fifth street, Philadelphia, is the originator of this sandwich and her generosity in sharing it locally helps prove the reputed good fellowship of "The City of Brotherly Love."

Bean Paste Sandwich Spread

Mash the contents of one medium sized can of good quality baked beans, extract all tomato sauce, or if home baking beans, omit tomato flavoring altogether. Use a potato masher for softening beans into a fine paste. Add a few chopped chives. A few pimientos and olives, cut fine, may also be added or substituted for the chives. Add a very little finely minced parsley and onion, if additional color and flavor are desired. Place mixture in jar and keep in refrigerator. When ready to serve, spread on lightly buttered rye, whole wheat bread or Boston brown bread. Makes 20 sandwiches.

Foreign Fare

Too few Polish dishes are heard of in this country. One of Poland's most satisfying and typical national foods is this fish soup, submitted by Mrs. Florence Hoover, of 918 Philadelphia avenue, Silver Spring, Md.:

Polish Fish Soup

Use the less edible portions of any variety of white fish. Clean and cut enough small pieces for 2 cupfuls. Place in a saucepan. Add 2½ cups of cold water, 1 medium-sized sliced onion, 1 bay leaf, 4 allspice berries and 1 teaspoon of salt. Bring to a boil, then simmer for 30 minutes. Strain and return stock to saucepan. This should make about 2 full cups of stock. Add 1½ cups of fresh buttermilk. Bring to a boil, blend in 4 tablespoons of butter and 4 of flour. Add this to the soup, stir and add ½ cup of thick, sour cream. Cool. Reheat but do not boil. When serving, garnish with very thin slices of hard-cooked egg, sprinkled with minced parsley.

Temper-Saving Tips

From one of the most loyal of Counsel contributors comes the following homemaking time and temper savers. Mrs. Sara Lee Orange, 2025 I street northwest, is the donor:

To Cut Beef Without Grief

To cut nice, thin slices from a standing roast of beef, use a cup (in place of a fork) in the left hand. The cup should be placed right side up. It holds the meat more firmly than does a fork, and if the knife should slip, there is no danger of hurting one's hand.

Sewing On Dress Buttons

Instead of attaching buttons on fabric with safety pins, sew one part of a snap fastener tightly to the button itself and the other part of the fastener to the material. Then when the dress is to be laundered or dry cleaned, the button can be taken off easily. This practice not only saves the buttons from damage, but saves the time it takes to keep sewing loose buttons on, over and over again.

Shoes Into Stockings

When stockings are past the mending stage they can be made into attractive and serviceable shoe bags. Merely cut off about 15 inches from the top of the hose. Stitch the raw edges together closely. One shoe will fit nicely into each stocking top. These bags are especially efficient for keeping white shoes clean and unscuffed from one season to another. Good for keeping evening shoes fresh and for packing precious slippers in a suitcase.

Your Figure

Stretching Is One Of Best Movements; Lack of Vitality May Be Factor

By Ida Jean Kain.

A YOUTHFUL figure depends upon well toned muscles and this is especially true of the muscles which support the bust. Unless these muscles are in tone, the line of the bust is lower than it should be. Normally, the bust should be five-ninths, or a little more than half, the distance from the shoulder line to the waist, and this position is necessary for a youthful contour.

You can check the ratio of the two measurements by placing one end of a tape measure at the middle of the shoulder line and letting it fall directly across the center of the breast and down to the waist, and then comparing the distance from the shoulder line to the bust with the distance to the waistline. If the bust is more than five-ninths the entire distance, it is too low.

Helena Rubinstein's Plan

The following plan for determining the exact position of the bust measurement is suggested by Helena Rubenstein, along with an exercise for correcting a sagging contour:

Sit on the floor with legs together and straight out in front, and hold a large ball over the head, elbows out at the sides. Stretch the arms up as high as possible, then reach over and touch the toes with the ball. Repeat ten times. If you haven't a ball, use a book or vase.

Another exercise which brings good results is this one: Stand erect with feet parallel but slightly apart, arms hanging at the sides. Begin the exercise by drawing the shoulder blades tightly together and turn the hands out at the sides—the Egyptians had the idea! Then, moving the arms only at the shoulder sockets, turn them slowly around so that the under part of the arms is on top and gradually begin to raise the arms overhead until the palms are touching. Separate the hands and bring the arms slowly down to the sides and relax.

Vitality Needed

When the bust contour has been pulled down by excessive weight, or when the sagging is caused by a lack of vitality in the underweight, the first step is to bring the weight and vitality to normal. For the overweight, naturally, this means reducing. For the underweight it means a nourishing diet, with particular stress on whole milk.

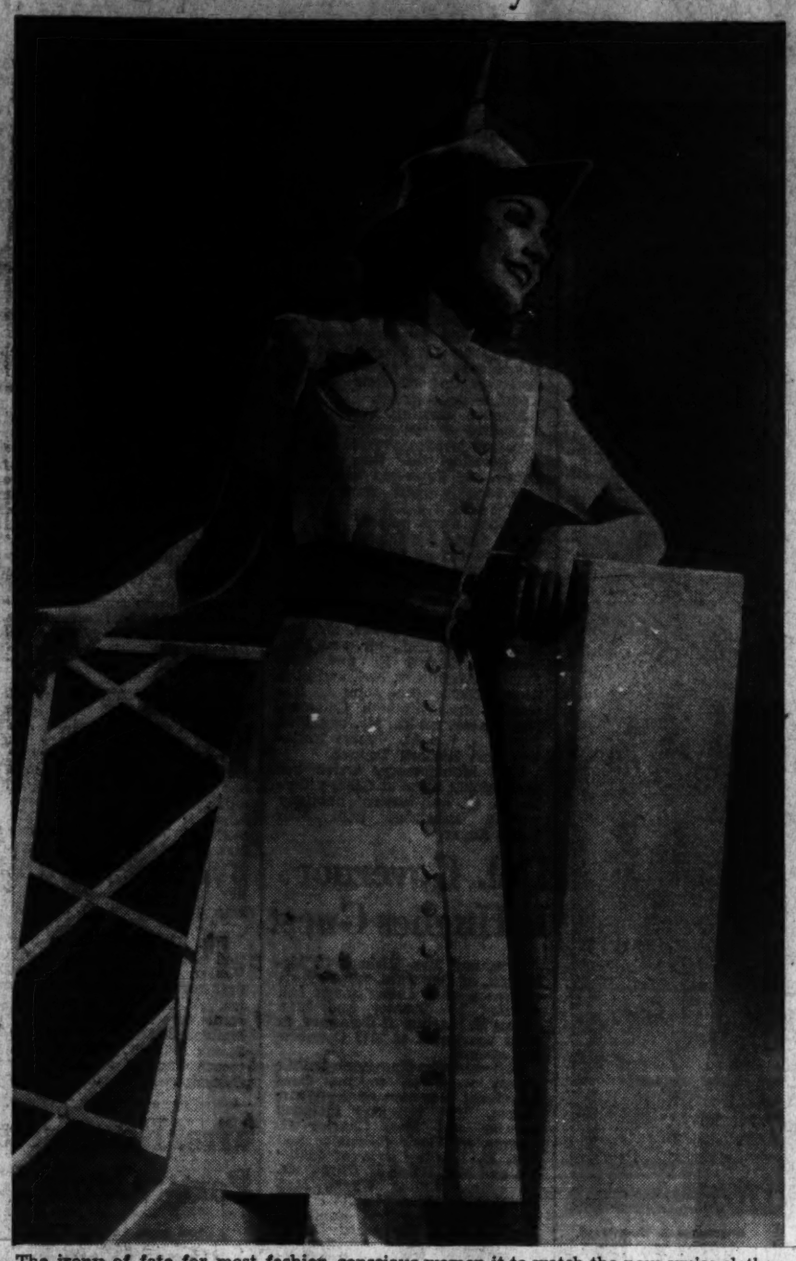
Cruise Classic for Early Summer



The irony of fate for most fashion-conscious women it to watch the new cruise clothes arrive in local stores and not be able to walk right out with them on their backs. Many a judicious girl, however, discovers her "one and only" dress during January and gobbles it up for immediate wear as soon as warmer days arrive. Such a simple and becoming spectator frock is the cruise classic, above. Its tri-colored belt and pearl buttons are the only foil for the fabric, which is called koat-a-kool. It is made from spun silk and acetate rayon, which means an ever fresh, cool and uncrushable appearance

Opening the Can

"George, I wish you'd see if you can make this new can opener work."

"Where is it? . . . Oh, that thing! That's not a can opener."

"This is a new kind. The man said it was lots better—no, that's not the way it goes. Wait, let me show you!"

"Let me alone a minute. I know how it works."

"Wait—you're doing it the wrong way——"

"Say, let me alone, will you? Now it's all in getting the hang of these things."

"I just wanted to show you the way the man did it."

"Now, just a minute . . . just a minute . . . and I'll have it working."

"I tell you you've got it upside down. If you'd just let me have it a second, I'd show you how he did it——"

"All right then, if you know so much."

"Now, this piece is supposed to go under the edge of the can——"

"No, that won't work. Here, give it to me."

"If you'd just let me finish——"

"No, I know exactly what to do. Now, what on earth is this little piece for here?"

"Wait, George! You'll cut yourself. Give it to me."

"I can take care of myself . . . if you'll just let me alone. Dog-gone this thing anyway. I can't see why they want to make 'em so elaborate——"

"Well, the man said it was very simple. He said a baby could work it."

"Oh, he did! Well, why didn't he show you how to work it then?"

"He did . . . if you'd just give it to me a minute——"

"All right, then. Just show me."

"Now he caught this piece in under the edge of the can someway—no it must have been some other piece——"

"You don't know anything about it. Give it here!"

"No, wait, let me try just one more thang——"

"Well, if you know how it's done, why do you ask me?"

"I know in general . . . now, if I could just figure out what that little wheel was for——"

"Hand it here. I've got an idea. I'm going to make this thing work if it's the last thing I ever——"

"Wait! You're going to cut yourself."

"Let me alone. I'd just like to meet the man once who invented this thing——"

"No, it doesn't go that way. Here, let me show you how the man did it. Now you hold the can steady——"

"That won't work. Bring me the hammer!"

"You're not going to——"

"I'm going to get this can open, I tell you! All right now, I'll make this blade go in or else——"

"Wait! You'll cut yourself!—Oh there, I told you!"

"Of all the——! Say, throw that thing out the window! I wouldn't have it in my house."

New Draperies Need No Washing

New household draperies resemble in every way printed linens or cotton, but are made of a new printed cellulose materials, the base from which rayon and cellanese rayon are made. The material is so constructed that dust and dirt merely lie on the surface. No cleaning or washing is necessary for the draperies: the housewife merely brushes off her draperies with a damp cloth or soft brush. When they become definitely soiled after several months of use, the nominal cost makes it simple to replace them with a new design and color scheme.

Steam and spray from the kitchen or bathroom does not affect the new fabric, except to make it more pliable.

Three-Ounce Galoshes Carried in Handbag

And now galoshes have been added to the numerous items which today's woman carries in her handbag.

A 3-ounce pair of galoshes and a 1-ounce toe rubber, both neatly packaged in tiny envelopes which may be tucked in the corner of a purse on stormy days, are the newest items recently shown in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago. They may be included in the "ready for any occasion" necessities in the purses used by women. The new item, offering as much protection as the old-fashioned heavy, clumsy pair of galoshes, is made of a pliable, light-weight lastex, to fit snugly over the shoe and well over the ankle.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is It Commendable in Woman to Give Loyal Devotion To Man Whose Behavior Is Offensively Brutish?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The question about which I write is not actually in the nature of a problem, but I shall appreciate very much a discussion of your views on it. I am concerned with the question of whether or not it denotes a commendable trait to lavish time, attention and love on one who is in no way deserving of consideration. I give this example to illustrate my point:

A very lovely friend of mine has, for about three years, been "going with" a man quite a number of years her senior. The girl is 25; the man is nearly 40. In the year I have known this man, he has done nothing to merit admiration or respect. He very rarely shows even the slightest consideration for the girl. He embarrasses her continually by staging drunken scenes in the presence of her friends, and his profanity and obscenity are unsurpassable. Real kindliness of nature covers a multitude of sins, but this man is almost brutally cruel in his neglect and lack of consideration for this girl.

As a result of complications connected with his divorce from his wife, he says he doesn't know when he will be free to marry this girl, and further says that he has told her that she should get rid of him, but that she can't see it that way. (My private opinion is that he hasn't really made much effort to take himself out of her life.) I won't go into a discussion of his legal difficulties here, but there are so many discrepancies in his stories that it should be evident to any reasonably intelligent person that he has no real desire to free himself and marry this girl.

I am genuinely fond of her. I have really gone out of my way to be nice to her, because there have been times when she was almost pathetically eager for companionship. As a matter of fact, I can truly say that there have been a number of instances when my beau and I have exerted ourselves to do more things for her than this man has—although he professes to be very deeply in love with her.

Now, my beau says he is rapidly coming to have little regard for her, because she tolerates this man. I have always contended that, because she loves him, she shuts her eyes to the things she does not want to see. But recently, the thought has occurred several times that perhaps her willingness to excuse his shortcomings is more indicative of a kind of blind clinging weakness, than it is indicative of strength of character. She must realize the man cannot bring happiness to her or to anyone else.

It may sound well in poetry and fiction for women to "stand by" their men to the bitter end, but in a real-life instance such as this, one questions whether the girl is to be lauded for so doing. (Incidentally, I might add that we have maintained a strictly hands-off policy in the matter. We have never in any way tried to discourage her friendship with this man.) A few of us who know the situation have always tried to be particularly nice to her when he was treating her badly. But are we (are the friends of any person so involved) obligated in any way to exert ourselves in her behalf, when she does positively nothing to remedy the situation? As I said before, I really like her very much, but I can't help thinking of her, more and more often, as being rather spineless about the whole affair. L. A. H.

Emotional Enslavement

DEAR L. A. H.: When a woman is seen lavishing time, attention and love on some brutal, sadistic man whose behavior shows him to be a person deserving of no consideration, you may depend upon it that she is enslaved by the ignominious bond of a strictly physical infatuation. Her spirit has been demoniacally possessed and subdued by a sort of evil, elemental force in the man's nature, so that—as you say of this girl—she clings to him with a sort of blind weakness.

The more sensitive, complex and civilized the essential nature of the woman who involves herself in such an alliance, the more devastating to her personality is the association apt to be. And while she is deserving of profound compassion, on the part of those who discern and fathom her predicament, her conduct is not to be construed as admirable, from any point of view. The greatest service that could possibly be rendered her, by those in a position or possessing the authority, to act in her best interests, would be that of taking the man by the back of the neck—literally or figuratively speaking—and dumping him overboard out of her life. But whether she would appreciate the validity of that contribution is open to question.

Perhaps there is no saving those who have no will to be saved. Perhaps it's the old story of leading a horse from a burning barn. Unless you stay him by force, he heads straight back into the destroying conflagration. And perhaps the only way to rouse this girl's will to be saved is to acquaint her, by indirection, with the social penalty she perforce must pay if she continues to link her life with this man's. This could only be done, I suppose, by all of her tried-and-true friends rejecting the man as a matter of principle; by presenting a united front in refusing further to tolerate him, unless and until he subscribes to a socially acceptable pattern of behavior. In that event, she would be forced to choose between the one and the many; between those who are willing to make an open-handed, unasking and substantial contribution to her happiness, and the man who is willing to drag her through hell, to divest her of every personal intangible.

So long as those who genuinely care for her are willing to pick her up, to pull her through, to save her face; to conspire tacitly to condone the man's behavior and more or less endorse her luckless infatuation—she probably will continue to take the count of nine, round after round. But if she can be made to realize the vulgarity of the spectacle; how it is cheapening her; how she is selfishly abusing the indulgence of her friends—she may bring herself up short and ask: "Where am I drifting? What is this costing me? What ought to be done?" Once such questions are forced into the open, where she must face them—in the privacy of her own thoughts or in conference with trusted friends—some ground will have been gained. But as I see the picture, she is slipping down hill, just now, at a terrific rate of speed. And in my opinion, at least, it is asking too much to expect her friends to sit in, with politely masked countenances, while the sordid tragedy unfolds. They have no obligation whatever to falsely imply approval of an objectionable performance that need not, and should not, continue. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Jan. 12.

IN SPITE of all efforts by us ancient crusaders, the swing mania shows little sign of abatement here. The sainted Bennah Goodman and his crey of symphonic artists has been operating on the stage of a great Broadway picture cathedral, and the hollering and screaming of his adolescent worshippers has practically brought back to silent movie. That is to say that it is impossible to hear the voices of Miss Claudette Colbert and Mr. Herbert Marshall in "Zaza," and these devoted actors seem to be performing in pantomime while the Goodmaniacs jump up and down and yell in the aisles. At first showing no local picture critic could discover whether the picture was any good or not.

Having given in for the moment, I have isolated the only living Chinese swing singer, by name Miss Mei Toy. She is 18, very pretty, lives an almost cloistered life and much prefers a dish of tea to a saucer of champagne. She was born right in our Chinatown, the daughter of an old-time vaudeville juggler named Jue Ming. In fact, he is now in an act with his own daughter in a current local attempt to bring back vaudeville, under the general title of "Vaudeville Marches On." Men in the audience say that Miss Toy has a great deal of oomph—a subject on which I cannot speak with authority. In addition to her vocal talents Miss Toy tells me that she not only does her own laundry but that of the rest of the family, which certainly proves that there is some virtue in performers who emit this odd music. On one subject only is this pretty girl adamant—she will not have dates with boys unless some of her family is along. Considering her beauty and this quaint idiosyncasy, you can well understand that sadness reigns at the stage door where she is performing.

Tallulah Bankhead was in Washington just long enough to see her father, the Speaker of the House, start Congress going—then she rushed back to New York to start rehearsals of "Little Foxes," the new play by Lillian Hellman, author of "The Children's Hour." The other half of Talloo's family, the handsome John Emery, has signed to appear in the new play, "Five Kings."

If you are wondering whether purples and cerises will still be in style next spring, the answer is yes. The only difference is that purple will be given a fancy name like Amaranth, and cerise will be called Tyria. This is just to make life harder for us all. In the matter of hats, insanity will continue, even in certain features of the doll hat—thus giving the boys a chance to keep making fun of us.

Congressmen White House Guests, But Mr. Farley 'Steals the Show'

Listeners Ring Attorney General Four Deep As Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt Receive; Almost A Thousand at Unusually Brilliant Party

By Hope Ridings Miller

The Post Society Editor.

Senators and Representatives were guests of honor when President and Mrs. Roosevelt entertained last evening at their third state reception this season, but Postmaster General James A. Farley stole the show.

Making one of his rare appearances at a function of that type, "Genial Jim" centered the spotlight from the minute he arrived until he tore himself away two hours later. As members of Congress came through the Red Room on their way to the State Dining Room, they saw him; and before you knew it, Mr. Farley was in the dining room himself, holding a court of his own that rapidly resolved itself into a fou-deep affair.

HOPE R. MILLER.

The cloud of gloom that occasionally has settled on the Postmaster General's smooth brow was missing entirely, as he chatted with old friends, made new ones, and declared he was having the time of his life.

As a rule, the annual White House reception for members of Congress and their families chalks up no special honors as a brilliant affair. The one last night broke no records, either in size or in glamour; but it moved along pleasantly from first to last, and was a bit less formal than the other state receptions thus far this season.

But there was the same scarlet-coated arine Band Orchestra playing "Hail to the Chief" and a flock of other familiar tunes; there was the same ceremonious interlude in which the President and Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the Cabinet proceeded from the State Dining Room into the Red Room and the host and hostess moved on from there to the Blue Room to greet their guests before a bank of palms and ferns, and there were almost a thousand men and women to be received.

Five members of the Cabinet were in the procession that made its way into the Red Room shortly before the receiving line started from the East Room on its way to the State Dining Room. Leading the line were the President on the arm of Col. Edwin Watson, and Mrs. Roosevelt escorted by an aide. She was gowned in white and silver lame, fashioned on flowing lines with a train and trimmed with rhinestones edging the neckline and ornamenting the belt.

Hulls Greeted On All Sides

Very popular members of the group were Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, attending their first White House reception since their return from Lima. Mrs. Hull was gowned in emerald green crepe with long fringe falling over the shoulders and giving a cape-like effect to the ensemble, which was further embellished with rhinestones at the neckline.

Secretary of War and Mrs. Woodring were there, she wearing a trim frock of pale-blue crepe, accented with an olive-green belt and touches of fuschia. Mrs. Claude A. Swanson in rose and gold lame walked into the Red Room on the arm of the new Attorney General, Frank Murphy, who, in contrast to his late arrival at his first White House reception this season, was there in plenty of time last evening. Walking with the Attorney General was Mrs. Henry a Wallace, in gold lame, while the Secretary of Agriculture brought up the rear with Secretary of Labor Perkins, who was gowned in black.

Leading the line of guests through the Green Room and on into the Blue Room, where the President and Mrs. Roosevelt stood for an hour to receive, were the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead, the latter wearing a frock of violet crepe, threaded with silver and gold.

Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman were next in the line, she gowned in blue satin trimmed in black lace; and then along came Senator and Mrs. John H. Bankhead, Senator Lister Hill, and still another group which included Mrs. William H. Smathers, wife of the Senator from New Jersey. One of the most attractive women there, she was gowned in a foamy frock of white tulle, fashioned with a full skirt over a hoop, a fitted bodice and a scarf of the same material looped over her shoulders.

Roosevelts Give A Small Dinner Before Reception

President and Mrs. Roosevelt gave a small dinner last evening prior to the Congressional reception.

Their guests were the Ambassador to Mexico and Mrs. Josephus Daniels, the Ambassador to Germany, Hugh R. Wilson; Assistant Attorney General Sam Whitaker, and Mrs. Whitaker; the Third Assistant Postmaster General and Mrs. Ramsey S. Black; the Assistant Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Harry L. Brown; Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, and Mr. and Mrs. John Ihlder.

The table was decorated with pink roses, white buddleia, and maidenhair fern.

Scores of Notables Glimpsed in Crowd

Also deserving special mention was Mrs. Claude Pepper, who accompanied Senator Pepper and looked as if she had stepped out of a bandbox. Her white satin gown had hoops at the hipline and a fitted jacket embroidered in pastel shades.

Senator William H. King was in the first group coming through; as were also Senator Alexander Wiley, of Wisconsin, who was accompanied by Mrs. Wyle; Senator Josh Lee, Senator and Mrs. Joseph C. O'Mahony, the latter gowned in pink crepe; Douglas Hall, Mrs. Swanson's son; Representative Kent Keller, Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, who was a stunning figure in black velvet, trimmed in ermine; Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen; Representative and Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin, the latter gowned in white sharkskin trimmed in crystal; Representative and Mrs. Ralph Church, she wearing a bouffant frock of lavender lace.

SEEN IN THE state dining room: As the crowd mildly eddied through the state dining room, swirling first toward the long table, where light refreshments were served, and then moving on in a steady flow to the hall on their way to the East Room, I saw scores of old and new "faces" from Capitol Hill. For instance, there was Senator Arthur Capper, attending his twentieth consecutive Congressional reception; there were the newly elected Senator from IIdaho, D. Worth Clark and Mrs. Clark, who looked lovely in a salmon-colored satin frock trimmed with matching tulle, and there was pretty Miss Reba Doughton, daughter of the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, who was trimly turned out in a white marquisette gown, set off with a jacket of crystal bugle beads and an orchid corsage.

Others glimpsed there: Senator Ernest Willard Gibson, accompanied by his daughter, Miss Doris Gibson; Representative and Mrs. Wright Patman, the latter gowned in black velvet and lace; Mrs. Martin Dies, wearing a frock of lipstick red crepe, with an accordion pleated skirt and gold and crystal ornaments on the front of the fitted bodice. Since Representative Dies is out of town, Mrs. Dies was accompanied by her son, Martin, jr.

IN THE RED ROOM: Representative Jessie Sumner, sporting an upswept hair-do and wearing a frock of white crepe, encrusted with gold beads and rhinestones; Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, she in powder blue crepe trimmed in crystal, coming in shortly before the President retired; former Senator Gladys Pyle, seeming to know everybody there; Representative and Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, the latter in white brocaded satin, moving swiftly through the crowd; Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton, she wearing a smart frock of black lace, making the rounds and greeting friends on all sides.

IN THE GREEN ROOM: Representative Caroline O'Day, chatting with Mrs. James M. Helm; Representative Mary T. Norton, gowned in gold brocaded satin, moving in the line toward the Blue Room; Representative and Mrs. Harry B. Coffee coming along with the late arrivals; Representative and Mrs. H. Jerry Voorhis and Representative Ed Gossett greeting the President and Mrs. Roosevelt after everyone else had been received.

Still others there were Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, gowned in Lincoln green satin with an emerald and diamond necklace and bracelets to match; Representative and Mrs. Jesse P. Wolcott, who were accompanied by their nieces, Miss Fanchon Aldrich and Miss Virginia Gibson. Mrs. Wolcott was gowned in black lace; Miss Aldrich had chosen a bouffant frock of pale blue lame, and Miss Gibson was in white net. Representative and Mrs. Harry L. Englebright were there; also, Representative and Mrs. Richard M. Duncan; Mrs. John E. Rankin, who was accompanied by her daughter, Miss Annie Laurie Rankin; Representative and Mrs. Joseph Byrns, jr.; Representative and Mrs. Nat Patton . . . and so on through the list of Congressional members.

Seigneur and Dame of Serk To Visit Washington Jan. 25

Mrs. Hathaway Will Lecture Before National Geographic Society on British Feudal State

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hathaway, the Seigneur and Dame of the Island of Serk, England, who have been in this country for some time, will arrive in Washington on Wednesday, January 25, and will be here for several days. They will stay at the Mayflower Hotel.

On Friday evening, January 27, the Dame of Serk will lecture before the National Georgraphic Society. Her talk will deal with the Island of Serk, sometimes called, Sark, which lies midway between France and England in the English Channel, and enjoys the distinction of being the last feudal state in the world.

Mrs. Hathaway inherited her title from her father, the late W. F. Collins, Seigneur of Serk. The island was made a feudal state by Queen Elizabeth in 1565 under Seigneur de Carteret and it has remained so to the present day.

Mr. Hathaway, who is a brother of Harrison Hathaway, of Bethesda, Md., was born in New Jersey and is a graduate of Yale. He and his wife have been visiting his mother, Mrs. Charles B. Hathaway, in New York. The Dame of Serk, since her arrival, has delivered several lectures in the East and Middle West and will continue her lecture tour after leaving Washington.

The Seigneur and Dame of Serk have visited in Washington before and have a number of acquaintances here who will entertain for them during their brief visit.

Mrs. Chavez Plans Visit Here Soon

Mrs. Dennis Chavez, wife of Senator Chavez, of New Mexico, is remaining in her new home in Albuquerque for several weeks and will join her husband here later in the season.

The Chavez family moved into their new home, which is in the fashionable new Country Club addition in Albuquerque, during the recent holidays and spent Christmas there.

Mrs. Frances Wick Is Betrothed to Newell Bolton

Of interest to Washington is the announcement by Mr. and Mrs. John Raynard Todd, of Summit, N. J., of the engagement of their daughter, Mrs. Frances Todd Wick, of Greenwich, Conn., to Newell Castle Bolton, of Mentor, Ohio. Mr. Bolton is a brother of Representative Chester Bolton, of Cleveland, who with Mrs. Bolton is prominent in Capital society.

Mrs. Wick, an alumna of Vassar College, is the widow of Myron C. Wick, of Youngstown, who died in 1930. She is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Bolton is commanding general of the Ohio National Guard. He was graduated from Harvard in 1912.

The wedding will take place in April.

Legislators to See Film to End War

Members of the Congressional group will have a chance to see "Grand Illusion," the film to end war. It unreels at the Belasco this evening for a special showing.

Among those expected to attend are Senators Guy M. Gillette, Burton K. Wheeler, Charles O. Andrews, Claude Pepper, Allen Ellender Elbert Thomas, Ernest Lundeen, Pat Harrison and Charles Tobey.

Also Representatives Hamilton Fish, Edith Nourse Rogers, W. F. Norrell, Ed Izak, Robert Allen, Ben Jensen, John Kee, Thomas E. Martin, Matthew J. Merritt and Joseph L. Pfeifer.

The showing had been arranged for members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Senator and Mrs. Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, have as their guests at the Wardman Park Hotel their son, Farley Smith, and his family, who arived here from Lynchburg, S. C., a day or two ago.

Representative and Mrs. James Fitzpatrick, of New York, have as their guest at the Hotel Roosevelt their niece, Miss Winifred M. Stevenson, from New York. Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Miss Stevenson will leave for Florida today for a month's stay.

Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, of Washington, is registered as a guest at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

Judge and Mrs. Michael L. Igee will return today to their home in Chicago. They are at the Shoreham, and came to Washington for the Cummings dinner Wednesday night. Judge Igee is a former member of Congress.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Martin, of Hartsville, Mass., and New York City, are spending a few days in Washington and are at the Shoreham before returning to Hartsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Mathews McMeyer, of Philadelphia, are staying at the Hay-Adams House.

Dr. Hans von Dreyhausen, of New York City, is at the Wardman Park Hotel while visiting here for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. David Baer sailed from New York yesterday on the Quenn of Bermuda for a vacation in Bermuda.

George Gales Honored At Farewell Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Henry and Mr. and Mrs. J. Searcy Nichol entertained at a farewell dinner party last evening in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gale.

Mr. Gale, who is associated with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, has been appointed in charge of the office at Nashville, and he and Mrs. Gale will move to that city soon. Others in last evening's dinner company were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Barringer 3d, and Mr. and Mrs. George B. Stoner.

Gets Part in 'Follies'

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, is the latest recruit to the cast of the forthcoming Junior League Follies. The tall, blonde Cabinet hostess will take part in the fashion show.

Montgomerys Give Party on Anniversary

Unique Invitations Are Issued for Colorful Affair

"Come and bide a wee wi' us
And drink one dock and dorrhus
And tak a peek in our crystal ball
To see how long this tie will haul."

Alexander J. Montgomery, who was born and brought up Scotland and still retains his Scotch burr, issued the above invitations to the party which he and Mrs. Montgomery gave last night in celebration of their fifteenth wedding anniversary.

Similar amusing verses were a feature of the evening. The host had written several rhymes of greeting for the different guests, and these had been made into records which were played over a loud speaker.

Among those present, each of whom found his fancies and foibles the object of good-natured fun on the part of the rhyming host, were Charles Michelson, Mr. and Mrs. James William Bryan, Miss Hazel Edgar, Mrs. Mary McCracken Jones, Mr. and Mrs. William Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Baxter, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Alexander, Maj. and Mrs. Stuart Richardson, John L. Edwards, Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, Mrs. Robert Smith, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Wright, Hubert Hollaway and Richard Tupper.

Mrs. Montgomery, under her professional name of Gladys Taylor, is a well-known publicity woman associated with Miss Hazel Edgar.

Del. Governor Is Hughes Guest

Gov. and Mrs. Richard C. McMullen, of Delaware, were guests of honor at a dinner given last evening by Senator and Mrs. James H. Hughes, of Delaware, in tehir apartment at 2311 Connecticut avenue.

Following the dinner, most of the guests went on to the Congressional reception at the White House. The company included Senator and Mrs. Charles O. Andres, of Florida; Senator and Mrs. D. Worth Clark, of Idaho; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph K. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Neitah King, Miss Marsha Hatch, Mrs. John Snyder, Randolph Hughes, Max Terry, of Dover, Del., who formerly was Senator Hughes' law partner; Randolph Hughes and Dr. and Mrs. John C. Martin, of Dover. Mrs. Martin, daughter of the host and hostess, formerly was Miss Caroline Hughes.

Dorothy Franks, John T. Owens Are Married Here

Epiphany Church was the scene of the wedding yesterday afternoon of Miss Dorothy Cooper Franks, of near Leesburg, Va., and John Talbott Owens, of Toronto, Canada. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Cooper Franks, of Toronto, was unattended. She was gowned in a dark green velvet dress with a long, full circular skirt. Her hat and accessories were of a matching shade and her flowers were white rosebuds.

Before the wedding, Miss Franks entertained at a luncheon at her home, Crestwood. Among those from a distance who attended the luncheon and the wedding were Mrs. Robert W. Saunders, of Garden City, Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Owens, of New Haven, Conn.; Miss Martha M. Owens, of Covington, Ky., and Mrs. James McClure, of Paris, Ky.

Following the ceremony, the couple left on a southern trip. Upon their return, they will reside at Crestwood.

Mrs. William D. Leahy Honored at Luncheon

Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of the Chief of Naval Operations, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Army and Navy Club by Mrs. Albert T. Church.

There were 20 guests, some of whom played bridge afterwards.

Leaves for Florida

Commander Stanley Mitchell, who has been spending several weeks at the Army and Navy Club here, has left for Palm Beach.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

THE DIGNIFIED Metropolitan Club, which has taken on added life since the members unbent a year or so ago and decided to let women share some of the privileges, was the scene of a number of gay dinners last evening. Most of them preceded the illustrated lecture which former Senator Hiram Bingham gave on his explorations in Peru.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mr. Bingham has been so well known for so many years for his activities in politics that not everybody is aware that the erstwhile Senator and former Governor of Connecticut spent practically the entire ten years before the World War making very important explorations and then writing about them. He led the expeditions which discovered a number of Inca ruins, and other of his exploits include the first ascent of Mount Coropuna in the Andes and a trip across Peru on mule back. Some of these adventures he described last night, illustrating with a hundred lantern slides selected from his collection of 12,000 photographs of South American scenes.

CORCORAN THOM, president of the Metropolitan Club; Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Russell Sard, and Clarence Hewes were among the dinner hosts last evening. Mrs. Sard was called out of town unexpectedly, but will return today. Her daughter, Miss Miriam Scott, acted as hostess in her place. Senator and Mrs. Lewis' dinner guests included Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, of Vermont; Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Ralph Snowden Hill and Maj. John Heron, of New York.

MR. BINGHAM has a decoration from the government of Venezuela as the result of his first explorations in South America. At that time he retraced the route across Venezuela and Colombia which had been taken by Simon Bolivar, the early nineteenth century hero who freed Colombia from the Spaniards. Later Mr. Bingham organized the Yale Peruvian expedition which discovered important Inca ruins. On another trip, most of the funds for which were raised by the National Geographic Society, he uncovered the ruins of Machu Picchu, an inaccessible city of white granite which had been lost for generations. He wrote several books on his adventures, among them "Across South America" and "Inca Land." The National Geographic once devoted an entire issue to an article and photographs by the former Senator.

Busy Mr. Bingham is now hard at work on another book, begun a year ago last summer in London, on the life of Elihu Yale.

THIS IS the time of year when you begin to hate all your black silk dresses, tire of parties, and long to get away to ski in the North or sun on a beach in the South. Already a number of people, among them Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, are planning trips. She will leave the end of February with Mr. Finkenstaedt's mother for a stay in Boca Grande, Fla. Miss Caroline Nash, who spends a few months here every year, has gone to Charleston, S. C., where her family originally came from. A devotee of life on the French Riviera when she is not in this country, Miss Nash is a great favorite of King Gustav of Sweden. She gave a large dinner the night before her departure, when among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Lewis, Capt. John Ide, Commander and Mrs. John Magruder, and Mrs. George Crawford, of New York, who used to visit Mrs. Francis Whitten here frequently.

Brief trips nearer home are to be enjoyed over the week-end by Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, all of whom are in New York.

PARTY NOTES: Popular Mrs. Ormond Lawson-Johnston of London was feted at a small cocktail party given yesterday by Ralph Snowden Hill. She will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be held today by Mrs. McCeney Werlich . . . Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean gave a small dinner last night at Friendship . . . And Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor will be hostess today at luncheon.

Mrs. Roosevelt Repeats Party Cards Nontransferable,

At her press conference yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt stressed, once more, that cards issued to receptions at the White House are not transferable and urged that the rule be observed. When it was pointed out by a newspaper woman that members of Congress frequently allow their friends to use their cards, the First Lady reiterated that the rule, as stated on each card of admission, should be observed.

The conference, which is generally held on the second floor of the White House, took place yesterday at the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, and following the brief period of questioning, Mrs. Roosevelt and members of the press went on a tour through several departments of the bureau, including the sections where surveys are being made to standardize sizes in children's clothing; where tests are being carried on to prove the value of natural dyes, and where food experiments and tests are in progress. Conducting the tour was Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the Bureau of Home Economics. Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, also was present.

Mrs. Guider Fetes Beatrice Lillie

Mr. and Mrs. John Guider entertained at a party last evening at the Heigh-Ho in compliment to Beatrice Lillie and Noel Coward. Several members of the cast of "Set to Music" were in the company. Miss Lillie and Mrs. Guider have been friends for a number of years.

This evening, Miss Lillie and Mr. Coward will be guests of honor at a supper party given by the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. H. H. Sims in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Entertains at Tea

Mrs. Claude E. Brigham, wife of Maj. Gen. Brigham, retired, entertained at tea at her apartment in the Dresden, yesterday afternoon. Assisting at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. A. H. Sunderland, Mrs. Haig Shekerjian and Mrs. Robert Fletcher.

Paraguayan Envoy Host at Dinner To Diplomats

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios, and the Ambassador of Ecuador, Capt. Colon Eloy Alfaro, were ranking guests at the dinner given by the Minister of Paraguay, Gen. Jose Felix Estigarribia, last evening in the Shoreham Blue Room.

Others in the company were Dr. Homero Viteri, chief of the Ecuadorean boundary delegation, and Senora de Viteri; the Commercial Secretary of the Ecuadorean Le and Senora de Campbell, the First Secretary of the Ecuadorian Legation and Senora de Crespo, the Counselor of the Legation of Paraguay and Senora de Instran; Senor and Senora Antonio Maura and their daughter, Senorita Maura, of Madrid, Spain, who recently arrived here from Buenos Aires and are leaving today for Miami; Mrs. Marion Davis, and Senorita Rosita Viteri.

Sicilianos Returns From Greek Vacation

The Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, returned to New York yesterday on the Rex after a vacation of several months in his homeland. He will come to Washington on Sunday accompanied by Nicholas Lely, Consul General in New York and former Counselor of the legation here.

They will attend Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's concert on Monday morning when Helen Dosia will sing.

Dinner Dance Planned

Mrs. French Myers will give a small dinner dance on February 11 at the 1925 F Street Club. The party will honor her daughter, Miss Emily French Myers.

International Head Surprises Quota Club

Mrs. William E. Dick Is Guest of Honor at Monthly Dinner; Mrs. Knight Presides at First Meeting

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. William E. Dick, of Buffalo, president of Quota International, was guest of honor last night at the regular dinner meeting of the local club, held at the Women's City Club. Mrs. Dick is here conferring at international headquarters with Miss Gwyadys Jones, executive secretary, on plans for the convention to be held next summer in New Orleans, but her visit to Washington had been unannounced in order to have her attendance at the dinner last night a surprise to local members.

Miss Jones attended with her and the occasion was also the first on which the newly-elected president, Mrs. Blanche Knight, had presided. Mrs. Knight was elected last week to succeed Miss Mary Jane Winfree.

Mrs. Dick was introduced by Mrs. Knight and spoke on "The Meaning of Membership in an International Organization." She has been a member of the Quota Club for 17 years and belongs to the "mother club" in Baltimore which was formed 20 years ago. Her election as president took place last July at the international convention in Banff, Canada.

G. O. P. Women Hold Luncheon

The League of Republican Women yesterday inaugurated a series of luncheons to be held through the winter season at its clubhouse, 1301 Seventeenth street. These affairs will supplement the weekly open house silver teas which have been held ever since the league headquarters was opened more than a year ago.

Mme. Cantacuzene, past president and now chairman of the advisory committee of the organization, presented new dishes to the league for yesterday's luncheon and similar functions to be held in the future.

The luncheon was served from a buffet table, arranged in the sunny bay window of the dining room, with a centerpiece of jonquils. Mrs. William S. Culbertson, chairman of the hostess committee, was in charge, assisted by Mrs. William Theophilus, Mrs. Arthur H. Tirrell, Mrs. Carl D. Loos and Mrs. Jules G. Korner.

The next large social event on the league callendar will be the card party for which Mrs. James Wentz is opening her home next Friday afternoon.

Sorority Girls Guests at Party For Miss Hampton

MISS JANE HAMPTON

Members of Zeta Chapter of Sigma Kappa Sorority at George Washington University were guests last night at a dinner given at the Army and Navy Club by Dr. Clyde M. Gearhart in honor of Miss Jane Hampton on her eighteenth birthday. Miss Hampton is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Hampton, 1752 Irving street.

After the dinner the guests played bridge in the ladies lounge of the club.

Annual Session Of E. O. S. Opens

The forty-third annual session of the Grand Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, of the District of Columbia, was called to order last night at the Willard Hotel by Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, past grand matron, who received the grand matron, Mrs. Helen D. Robbins; the grand patron, Harry J. Schmidt, and other grand officers.

After the opening ceremonies, Mrs. Robbins took the gavel and welcomed the distinguished guests, who included Mrs. Minnie E. Keyes, right worthy grand secretary of the General Grand Chapter. The grand representatives of the general grand jurisdictions of the United States and Canada were welcomed by Mrs. Ruth B. Cromelin, associate grand matron, who is in line for the office of grand matron at tonight's election.

The features of the evening were the addresses of the retiring grand matron and patron. There was also music by the O. E. S. choral unit directed by Mrs. Leonor Ebert Reed; a soprano solo by Miss Mathilde Heuser, accompanied by Miss Hazel Schrode, and incidental music by C. H. Hutchison, violinist, Ludwig E. Manoly, cellist and Miss Schrode.

Ernest Thompson, grand master of Masons of the District of Columbia, was presented in a short ceremony and pages, selected from among the matrons of 1938 for the constituent chapters, also were presented by Mrs. Minnie Burdine, grand conductress. The customary flag ceremony included the presentation of the United States Flag by Jack Seal, past patron, and of the Eastern Star flag by R. LeRoy Morris, past patron, and tributes were given by Mrs. Julia N. Streater and Mrs. Grace E. Kimmel, past grand matrons.

Among the many distinguished guests present were Mrs. Kate Davis, grand matron of Tennessee; Ed Hilleary, grand patron of Maryland, and Mrs. Virginia Thompson, of Maryland, supreme guardian of the Order of Job's Daughters.

This evening election of officers will take place and reports of grand chapter committees will be given.

Madame Chairman

NEEDS for a new building for the House of Detention and a new Women's Bureau there were stressed in a recent talk given by Capt. Rhoda Milliken of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police Department. She spoke before the Department of Government and the Legal Status of Women of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters.

The proposed $15,000 would improve the building only temporarily, she said, and a larger one would soon be needed. There is at present no way of securing medical services for women in detention, except by taking them to Gallinger Hospital. She expressed hope that they may have the services of a woman doctor on the premises. The jail also needs additional medical service for the women held there, she said, and suggested they might share a doctor with the House of Detention.

The result of her talk was a motion, unanimously passed at the meeting, to advocate "the purchase of additional land, for the erection of suitable building for the detention quarters and office room for the preventive protective services of the "Women's Bureau."

MISS MAE MURRAY, sponsor of Delta Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi sorority, will entertain the members at tea at her home, 6314 Second street, Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6.

THE BOARD OF MANAGERS of Florence Crittenton Home will meet this morning at 11 at the home, with Mrs. F. G. Mitchell, the president presiding. Luncheon will be served by the girls and the proceeds will go to their reserve fund.

Mrs. Thornton Owen was elected president of the Chevy Chase Florence Crittenton Circle Monday at its luncheon meeting with Mrs. M. J. McInernay. Mrs. Nathan Robertson was elected vice president; Mrs. Paul Loehler, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Stanley Titus, secretary, and Mrs. Edgar Poe Allen, treasurer.

EARL HAGUE, who recently opened the dramatic department of the Washington Musical Institute, last night spoke at the Arts Club on "The Dramatic Impulse in Art and People."

FAY L. DES PORTES, of Winnsboro, S. C., United States Minister to Guatemala, and John Bernard Faust, of Denmark, S. C., United States Consul General to Chile, both of whom are in Washington for a short time, will be among the distinguished guests at the South Carolina State Society Congressional Reception tonight at 8 at the Shoreham Hotel. The event has been arranged to welcome South Carolina's Congressional delegation.

The Washington Alumnae of Alpha Phi International Fraternity on Saturday, will have a luncheon meeting at 1 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. Reservations are in charge of Mrs. Donald Russell.

THE WASHINGTON CHAPTER of the Segovia Society will give a reception Sunday evening in honor of Gaspar Cassado, the cellist who will play at Mrs. Townsend's concert Monday morning. The society was organized two years ago in honor of the great Spanish guitarist, Andre Segovia.

Senator Burke's Wife to Head Congress Club

Nominating Committee Slate Adopted at Annual Meeting

Mrs. Edward R. Burke, wife of Senator Burke, of Nebraska, will be the next president of the Congressional Club. She headed the slate of officers presented by the nominating committee and unanimously adopted at the annual meeting just held, and the entire ticket is expected to be elected without opposition Wednesday.

Mrs. Burke will succeed Mrs. Daniel A. Reed, wife of Representative Reed, of New York, who has headed the club for the past two years.

Other officers named include: First vice president, Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, wife of Representative Hancock of New York; second vice president, Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, wife of Representative Doughton, of North Carolina; third vice president, Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, wife of Senator Lundeen, of Minnesota; fourth vice president, Mrs. R. Ewing Thomason, wife of Representative Thomason of Texas; fifth vice president, Mrs. Richard J. Welch, of California; recording secretary, Mrs. John R. Murdock, wife of Representative Murdock, of Arizona; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Robert F. Rich, wife of Representative Rich, of Pennsylvania; treasurer, Mrs. Clyde H. Smith, wife of Representative Smith, of Maine.

Mrs. Clarence F. Lea, of California, was chairman of the nominating committee. This season, as in the past, the officers will represent all sections of the country, from Maine to California.

The club's membership is composed of the wives of members of Congress and its season, opening each year with a New Year's tea dance, continues until near the end of the Congressional session.

The first of the club's weekly teas with program, will be held today at the clubhouse, New Hampshire avenue and U street, with Mrs. Georgette Ross Howard as the speaker.

Mrs. Roosevelt Is Honored at Speaking Class

Mrs. Roosevelt was guest of honor yesterday morning at the opening of Mrs. Hugh Butler's fourth Congress women's class in public speaking. The First Lady also was the first speaker on the "off-the-record" program, held at All Souls Unitarian Church.

Others who talked were members of last year's class who related "speaking" experiences of the past six months—some of them in their husband's campaigns preceding the November elections. About 150 attended the meeting for which invitations went out to all the wives of members of Congress.

Mrs. Harry Englebright, wife of Representative Englebright, of California, presided, and Mrs. Jed Johnson, wife of Representative Johnson, of Oklahoma, introduced Mrs. Roosevelt. Mrs. Johnson won last season's prize in the final speaking contest.

Pan-Hellenic Group Extends Bids for Tea

Members of the nonacademic Pan-Hellenic Association have issued invitations to a reception and tea to be held Sunday from 4 to 7 at the Wardman Park Hotel, for those sororities which they are inviting to join their organization. The association is composed of a group of national societies, and at the time of its organization there were eight charter members. At present, however, the two actively interested are Phi Beta Psi and Sigma Phi Gamma.

Teachers to Fete De Saint-Quentin

The Washington Chapter of the American Association of Teachers of French is planning a dinner in honor of the French Ambassador, Count Doynel de Saint-Quentin, to be held at the Sulgrave Club, Wednesday evening.

The program arranged by the president of the local chapter, Miss Elizabeth Reynolds, will include a brief talk by the Ambassador. The national president, Edmond Meras, of New York, also will speak and Felian Garzia will be in charge of the music.

Board Moves To Simplify Sick Benefits

Amendments Drafted To Save Employers From Complicated Compensation Items

Elimination of the "burdensome detailed reporting" required of employers under the District Unemployment Compensation Act has been recommended to the Commissioners in the form of amendments to the original act, it was learned yesterday.

Fifteen sectional amendments in all were submitted by John Marshall, director of the Compensation Board.

The commissioners are expected to favor the amendments in the form of a bill to be transmitted to the Budget Bureau. They will discuss the amendments today.

It is proposed to determine the benefit payments by merely taking one-thirteenth of an individual's total wages in the highest quarter (13 weeks) of his base period. The present act requires the board to know exactly what an individual has earned and the number of hours worked by him in each week that he has been employed in the 104 weeks prior to the week he was last engaged in employment.

Definitions Confusing

Numerous definitions in the present act were termed as "confusing and ambiguous" by the board and have been revised in the proposed amendments.

Under the proposed amendments each eligible individual who is totally unemployed in any week would be paid weekly benefits equal to 50 per cent of his full-time weekly wage. A proviso is attached stating that in no case shall the amount paid exceed $15. In the present act the unemployed person receives 50 per cent of his weekly wage, plus 10 per cent if he has a dependent wife, plus an additional 5 per cent for each dependent relative.

The entire method for computing the payments, as prescribed in the present act, would be eliminated by new amendments. The board said, in this regard, "we found this necessary as the method of computing benefits under the present act is cumbersome and, in many instances, is extremely difficult to carry out with any degree of certainty and assurance that an error will not be committed."

The present act has a provision for extended benefits which makes charge-backs on second and third claims almost impossible to determine, the board added.

Other Objectives

Other objectives of the revised act are:

Requires less detailed reporting by the employers.

Completely eliminates the troublesome, unsound and inequitable provisions contained in the present act for dependents.

Computation of a claim is made much simpler and greatly reduces the possibility of error.

The method of figuring partial benefits is simplified and in most cases the claimant will receive slightly more money as he will be allowed to deduct $3 from his earnings if the earnings are received from odd jobs.

Wrestling Fan Asks $25,000 for 'Kick in Teeth'

Mrs. Dorothy Hohensee, of 425 Raymond street, Chevy Chase, complained to District Court yesterday that she was kicked in the teeth $25,000 worth when all she bargained for was to see a wrestling match.

Her complaint, filed by Attorney Raymond Gittelman, blamed her misfortune on Joseph Turner, sports promoter of 1341 W street northwest, or Robert Wheatley, a wrestler known to fame as the "Golden Terror."

It was January 5, Mrs. Hohensee said, that Turner and/or Wheatley invited her and the public to "witness and view a wrestling match between Wheatley and a person unknown to your plaintiff other than as Chief Chewacki."

Although she did her part to keep out of harm's way, Mrs. Hohensee said, the Golden Terror, "notwithstanding his duty in the premises," kicked or struck Mrs. Hohensee about her chest, chin and mouth. Result: she lost one tooth, broke three others, and was abundantly bruised.

According to others who saw the match, Chief Chewacki tossed the Golden Terror out of the ring and he landed on the plaintiff.

Vacation Funds Sought for Needy

A campaign to raise $6,500 to give 80 underprivileged children of the District a summer vacation away from city streets was launched last night by the board of directors of the Merrick Boys Club Camp. John A. Reilly was named chairman of the committee, at a dinner meeting at the Columbia Country Club.

Among speakers at the dinner were the Rev. Arthur O'Leary, president of Georgetown University; John Saul, former president of the Washington Board of Trade, and James Nolan, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association.

WPA Workers Oppose Civil Service Rating

WPA Lodge No. 65, American Federation of Government Employes, last night voted to oppose absorption of 31,000 WPA administrative employes February 1 into Civil Service under the President's order of June 24. This step, the lodge held, would likely prevent others being absorbed into Civil Service, since the average annual rate of absorption is 20,000.

Board of Trade Report Condemns D. C. School Budgetary Procedure

District "be rid of this unusual situation."

"It requires a good part of each year for school officials to appear before the Commissioners, the budget bureau and subcommittees of the House and Senate appropriations committees to explain and justify their estimates," Keneipp said.

"The combination of local and Federal scrutiny almost always results in rigorous reduction in school estimates, and there is a question as to whether or not this reduction is compatible with the welfare of the schools. Should not the board of education have exclusive control over the allocation of funds to specific expenditures within the limitation of the total amount of the budget, possibly excepting expenditures for large capital outlays? Could not the whole budgetary procedure be greatly simplified?"

Board's Estimates Cut

For the past five fiscal years, he pointed out, the original estimates of the Board of Education have been sharply cut by the time they evolved into appropriations.

The Board of Education, Keneipp said, asked for $6,289,400 for 1940 for capital outlay items, but the Budget Bureau, following a "customary practice," slashed this to $1,500,000.

"Your committee," Keneipp said, will carefully consider whether or not it is a penny-wise and pound-foolish policy to almost continually put off its approval for capital outlay items.

"No well planned program for the acquisition of land for school purposes such as is now followed by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission has been approved."

Per Capita Cost High

Discussing the charge that the per capita cost of Washington's schools is excessive, compared to the cost elsewhere, Keneipp said that several factors had to be considered. One, he said, was the dual school system, under which Washington maintains separate but excellent school facilities for the colored population. Another, he said, was the high cost of operating the many old school buildings here, many of them small. Costs would be greatly reduced, he said, if there were fewer and larger buildings, with subsequent reduction in the cost of supervision, wages of custodial employes, expenditures for water, fuel and the like.

U. S. Would Cancel Citizenship of Man 'Happy' in Greece'

The Government yesterday asked District Court to cancel the American citizenship of George Anastasion Valkances, who went back to his native Greece only two years after he swore allegiance on December 8, 1933.

Apparently, District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorney Caldwell told the court, Valkances is happy and is going to stay in the village of Hranoi, Arcadia, managing his father's farm. Besides his job on the farm, said the lawyers, Valkances has acquired a Greek wife, a baby and $2,000 in the Hranoi bank.

Valkances lived in Washington at 855 Fourteenth street northwest.

Woman, 67, Hit by Car In Northwest Street

Mrs. Florida Robinson, 67, 3143 Dumbarton avenue northwest, suffered head injuries last night when she was struck by a car at Dumbarton and Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Mrs. Robinson was treated at Georgetown Hospital for a deep gash in her scalp, and possible fracture of the skull.

Frankfurter Held Unlikely 'Stuffed Shirt'

Powell, of Harvard, Talks Here of New Associate Justice

Belief that Felix Frankfurter, nominee for the Supreme Court bench, will never "really get to be a stuffed shirt," was advanced here last night by Prof. Thomas R. Powell, of the Harvard Law School.

Powell, speaking before 400 members of the Washington branch of the National Lawyers Guild, also observed: "I wonder if he'll get to court on time. He seldom came to class on time," and "I've asked him if he is going to call McReynolds 'Jim' or 'Mac.'"

In a more serious vein Powell, speaking for the law faculty at Harvard, said. "We are sorry to lose Felix Frankfurter, but we are glad for him and we are glad for the country. The saddest thing about the appointment," he said, "is those commendations from conservatives."

Scheduled to speak on "Recent Trends in Constitutional Law," Powell devoted most of his talk to the appointment of Frankfurter and a friendly criticism of Associate Justice Hugo Black.

Of Justice Black, he said that while he had the highest regard for his ideals, while "his mind is as sharp as those of most of his colleagues," and while "his ability to write opinions compares favorably with that of Justice McReynolds," he strongly criticized him, "from the standpoint of teamwork," for being so "individualistic" in his opinions.

Commenting later on Frankfurter's declaration of support of the Constiution before the Senate Judiciary Committee, he said: "One reason for supporting the Constitution is that it needs it so." "Constitutional law is evolutionary. It doesn't come from the Constitution —it comes from the judges," he said.

SEC to Consider Arthur Hays Case

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday arranged for a hearing here January 23 to determine whether to revoke the registration of Arthur Hays & Co., Inc., 521 Colorado Building, as a broker and dealer.

The commission stated Arthur B. Hays, president and director of the concern, was convicted in November, in a Manchester (N. H.) court, on a charge involving the purchase and sale of securities.

Citizens Laud 11th Precinct Police Work

Congress Heights Group To Write Thanks to Maj. Brown, Capt. Groves

Tribute to the efficiency of the Eleventh Precinct officers and patrolmen was voiced last night by the Congress Heights Citizens Association.

Members voted to send a letter of appreciation to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Capt. Hugh H. Groves, commanding the Eleventh Precinct.

The association adopted a resolution commending Dr. Benjamin Streiner for "efficient service" at his postal sub-station.

Opposition was voted to Representative Lemke's bill against compulsory vaccination.

Members reported they expected quick and favorable action on their request for a bus line on Alabama avenue southeast, running from Nichols avenue to Twelfth street.

American University

Prizes were awarded for Christmas decorations at the meeting of the American University Park Citizens Association last night to the following members: First prize, James Coker, 4429 Brandywine street northwest; second prize, Roland M. Brown, 4535 Van Ness street northwest; third prize, John W. Fisher, 4118 Forty-ninth street northwest. It was reported that 250 members of the community had decorated their houses at Christmas.

Arrangements were made for a get-acquainted dinner to be held at the Brighton Hotel, Connecticut and California avenues, February 15.

Cathedral Heights

Culver Chamberlain was elected president of the Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association last night at St. Albans Guild Hall.

Other officers named were Arthur Clarendon Smith, vice president; Warren T. Faircloth, treasurer; Mrs. Olive G. Faircloth, secretary; Owen B. French and S. G. Lindholm, delegates to the federation.

The association authorized appointment of a committee to work with the Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association to seek a branch library.

The "deplorable condition" of vacant lots, alleys and the parking strips between curb and sidewalks in the area was criticized. Officers said the problem would be taken up with District officials. New members elected were Mrs. Frank J. Keenan and J. Nelson Anderson.

Jury May Get Sanford Death Case Today

Mistrial Refused for 3 Accused of Killing Companion in Robbery

Three men accused of killing their accomplice in a robbery here August 13 may see their case go to a District court jury late today. The Government opened prosecution of Leroy Evans, George Molloy and James D. Posey yesterday.

Slain was George E. Sanford, 20, whose body was left at Children's Hospital about dawn by two men, who fled without identifying themselves. Detective Sergt. John W. Wise testified one of the defendants told him they thought of running away "because they all had records."

Defense Counsel James A. Shea asked for a mistrial, which Justice Adkins refused, although he directed the jury to ignore the remark.

Assistant District Attorney Krouse told the court the four men picked up Thomas Giles, colored, in an automobile, and started to rob him. They fought in the speeding automobile, he said, and Giles was beaten badly. He added that as the car passed through the 1300 block of Buchanan street northwest, a shot was fired, which fatally wounded Sanford.

Krouse said that while the companions may not have intended to kill Sanford, the fact that they were engaged in a crime made their offense second degree murder.

Other defense counsel are F. Joseph Donohue and William J. and E. Russell Kelly.

Army Style Show To Display New Uniforms in Md.

The Army will hold its first "group style show" of its new slate blue uniform tomorrow morning at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

The exhibition will be made by Company E, of the Thirty-fourth Infantry, as movie cameramen and news photographers take pictures of the slightly more than 100 men of the company going through drill evolutions. Photographs have been taken at Fort Sheridan, Ill., of smaller groups wearing the new uniform, but these will be first views of a whole company in the new garb.

Adopted because they are less visible in the field, the new uniforms have fitted, open-neck shirts and baggy pants. They are more comfortable than the conventional olive drab shirts, black ties and tight trousers of the present uniform. The new caps are unstiffened and more easily manufactured than those now in use.

Jacobs Meets 65, Then Calls Each By Name Correctly

Granville B. Jacobs, who makes a business of training business men and women, astounded 65 Cosmopolitans and their guests at the Carlton Hotel yesterday by correctly calling each by name after meeting them but once.

Standing at the head of the table he took up, without a miss, the men present at each table and identified them.

Edmund O. Carl presided as president of the club for the first time after his installation last week. The attendance prize for the day was won by Dr. J. Rozier Biggs, being donated by Dr. George Albert Smith. President Carl, Arthur W. Defenderfer and Ed A. Rule were awarded prizes for the best attendance during the year.

Latvian Describes Solo Killing Of 28 Jaguars With Spear

Hunting of jaguars of the South American jungles with bow and arrow and spear was described last night by Sasha Siemel, bearded 49-year-old Latvian hunter and photographer, in an illustrated lecture before the International Student Society and the Baltic-American Society at a joint meeting in the School of Government Building, George Washington University.

Siemel, who claims he has never been hurt, has killed 140 jaguars without using a gun, 28 in single-handed spear fight. These animals, found in the Xarayes marshes of the Matto Grosso region of Brazil, weigh up to 350 pounds, nearly twice the size of the jaguars of the coastal regions and the north. Hunting them with a spear is more thrilling than a gun, he said, and safer at close quarters when the animal is in cover. Hounds are used to track the jaguar just as in fox hunting, and the spear is not thrown until the quarry has taken cover.

After a short introduction describing how he had taken up this sport after seeing an Indian do it in Brazil and deciding that he was at least as strong as the Indian, Siemel showed moving pictures of big game taken during his last visit to South America. Siemel hunts all wild animals with his camera, but kills only jaguars, which prey upon the Brazilian natives and their livestock.

Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of the National University Law School, is to speak before the Baltic-American Society on Sunday at 3 p. m. on "The Aftermath of Munich," in the International Student House at 1708 New Hampshire avenue. The society is now sponsoring an exhibit of photographs of Hollywood celebrities by the Esthonian photographer, Arthur Ermates.

Farewell Party Given for Bates By Co-Workers

James L. Bates, head engineer of the Bureau of Construction and Repair, Navy Department, was the guest of honor at dinner last night of the civilian technical staff of his organization.

The testimonial banquet, held at the Dodge Hotel, was given in recognition of Bates' 35 years' service with the Navy and as a farewell party since he has accepted a commission with the Maritime Commission.

A native of New York State and a graduate in naval architecture at at Cornell University, he was appointed a member of the staff of the New York Navy Yard in 1903 while the battleship Connecticut was under construction. Three years later he was transferred to the Navy Department here and since has been engaged in the preparation of basic designs for naval vessels.

Bates, a member of the Society of Naval Architects and Marine Engineers, lives at 23 Bryant street northwest. J. C. Nedermair was toastmaster of the function.

Gen. Schley Speaks On Beach Work

Federal and State officials joined local engineers yesterday in urging co-operation to protect the Nation's coast line at the annual meeting of the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association in the Carlton Hotel. Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, Chief of the Army Engineer Corps, spoke briefly.

Officers of the group were reelected. They are J. Spencer Smith, chairman of the New Jersey State Board of Commerce and Navigation, president; George Hjelte, superintendent of the Los Angeles Department of Playgrounds and Recreation, vice president, and Frank D. Holmes, jr., assistant to Smith, secretary-treasurer.

5 Added to Senate Sub-Committee on District Funds

Four Democrats and one Republican were added yesterday to the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations, which will be headed by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana.

The Democratic additions are Senators Bankhead, of Alabama; O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; Maloney, of Connecticut, and Chavez, of New Mexico. The Republican is Senator Holman, of Oregon, who earlier this week was named to the Senate District Committee.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who was chairman of the sub-committee last year, will retain his membership. Ex-officio members will be the same as last year. They, all members of the Senate District Committee, are Senators King (Democrat), Utah; Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, and Capper (Republican), Kansas.

Levinthal to Speak

Dedicated to the National Conference on Palestine here tomorrow and Sunday, the services tonight at Adas Israel Congregation will be addressed by Justice Louis E. Levinthal, of Philadelphia, who will discuss Jewish refugee problems.

Sales Tax Yield Seen Falling Short

McGehee Points To Record in South In Pessimistic Report On Local Prospects

A prediction that the proposed District sales tax will fail to produce anticipated revenue with the present exemptions was made yesterday by Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, as the experts prepared the District revenue report for submission to the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation and to Congress on Monday.

McGehee, a member of the House District Committee and one of the original proponents of the local business privilege tax, said that several Southern States, including his own, had found from experience that exemptions on food and medicines cut sharply into the revenue.

Experts said the exemptions suggested for the District would cut the revenue potentialities of the 2 per cent sales tax about 60 per cent or approximately $3,000,000.

$5,500,000 Expected

Even with the exemptions on food, medicines, and all articles selling for less than a quarter, however, the levy is expected to return $5,500,000 or more.

Proponents of the dual income-sales tax plan contend that the tax program is designed to ease the burden on the low-income groups and that with the exemptions on food and medicines the annual tax paid by a family of $1,000 income will be $20 or less.

With the exemption deleted, however, they said this tax would be increased substantially due to the large share of income that goes to food.

McGehee said that if the District tax bill were reported to the House District Committee with the exemptions intact he would move to have them stricken.

Committee Thanked

Meanwhile the District Commissioners voiced their appreciation to the tax experts and the Advisory Committee for the proposed tax program and said they hoped it would be adopted.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said:

"It may seem tough to have to pay a tax on a 25-cent meal in a restaurant; but I'll go along with the recommendations of our Advisory Committee. I believe the group has done a good job. They made a careful study and, although the results may not be completely satisfactory to every one, the recommendations represent a sound compromise between advocates of a sales tax as against an outright income levy."

Reciprocity Club to Buy 1,000 Pairs of Glasses For Children Whose Parents Are Needy

ARTHUR DEZENDORF, club president — THEODORE GRAPE, first vice president — DR. GEORGE RUHLAND, Health Department director

Discussing final details of project to provide eyeglasses for needy children at the Reciprocity Club dinner at Mayflower

Free eyeglasses for all Washington school children with defective sight whose parents are unable to provide them is the object of a scheme launched by the Reciprocity Club at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

The club has arranged to devote its entire welfare fund to the purchase of glasses, Theodore S. Grape, first vice president of the society and chairman of its welfare committee, told the gathering. It also has enlisted the aid of all the local hospitals, the school board, the District Health Department and the Guild of Prescription Opticians in selecting children and distributing the glasses.

Although the city's free clinics have been examining school children's eyes and issuing prescriptions for some time, it has been impossible for the poorer children to buy the glasses prescribed. The Reciprocity Club plans to fill this need, and through the co-operation of Dr. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the Bureau of Maternal Child Welfare, and Miss Jennie A. Murchison, director of the Social Health Department, a system has been devised whereby the hospital social service workers will examine applicants as to medical and financial need.

At present the club has undertaken to supply glasses only to children between kindergarten and the sixth grade, expecting to supply over 1,000 pairs of glasses a year at a cost of between $2,500 and $3,000. It is hoped that with more funds, to be raised from members' dues and the profits of club entertainments, the service may later be extended to children up to the eighth grade.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, director of the District of Columbia Health Department, congratulated the club and emphasized the need of correcting defective eyesight in early childhood.

Dr. Oppenheimer and Miss Murchison emphasized the importance of the co-operation of the hospitals, on which, they said, the success of the scheme depended.

'The Cowboy and the Lady' Gives Cooper Fine Role

New Film at Palace Revives Familiar Theme; 'Grand Illusion' Attracts Congress' Interest; Brief Jottings of Current Amusements

"THE COWBOY AND THE LADY." Samuel Goldwyn picturization for United Artists of an original story by Leo McCarey and Frank R. Adams, adapted to the screen by S. N. Behrman and Sonya Levien, co-starring Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon, with Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Fuzzy Knight, Mabel Todd, Henry Kolker, Emma Dunn, Henry Davenport, Walter Walker, Berton Churchill, Charles Richman, Frederick Vogeding, Arthur Hoyt and Mabel Colcord. Directed by H. C. Potter. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At the Palace Theater.

IT IS, first and foremost, Gary Cooper's picture. A born and bred Montanan rancher, the attenuated and monosyllabic Mr. Cooper has undertaken this sort of thing frequently before. He is playing on his home grounds when he does. You will recall, for example, that it was he, on the screen, who impersonated the role created on the stage by the late Dustin Farnum in the film version of Owen Wister's dramatized novel of "The Virginian." There was an overtone of the same sort of appealing, homespun Americanism in his performance in the chief male role, with Claudette Colbert as co-star, in Ernst Lubitsch's "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." All of this simmers down to the fact that Mr. Cooper is at the top of his form in Samuel Goldwyn's production for United Artists of "The Cowboy and the Lady." As I have said, it is Mr. Cooper's picture, the svelte and ingratiating Merle Oberon in the second half of the title, notwithstanding.

BELL

Recollection seems to lay a little emphasis on the fact that Mr. Goldwyn encountered extreme difficulty in getting a satisfactory script for this film play. A long line of distinguished writing men and women had a hand in the thing before it finally emerged as the adaptational work of S. N. Behrman and Sonya Levien. The original story upon which they based their efforts was done by Leo McCarey and Frank R. Adams. The whole basic idea of the story—a rich young woman's conquest of the heart of a simple plainsman—of course, dates back to the Clyde Fitch stage play in which Nat Goodwin and Maxine Elliott starred away back yonder before the turn of the century. This, however, is getting away from the fact that the present opus, while it has much to commend it, still leaves much to be desired as an authentic document that might reasonably be relied upon to create the impression that here is a play that has something to say about authenticity and fidelity to character.

It seems to me that "The Cowboy and the Lady" is just another picture. Made on a pretentious scale, to be sure, and revelatory of many of the aspects of film production that point their fingers toward greatness, but still lacking something of the fundamental soundness to leave a lasting impression, "The Cowboy and the Lady" falls a little short of its finest potentialities.

The Usual Impediments Can't Stop 'Em

Miss Oberon is cast as an heiress whose father has aspirations to political eminence. The Presidential nomination is his next goal in sight—or almost. She is caught in a raid on a gambling house and is promptly exiled to a palatial retreat in Florida, where she encounters the young rodeo star who later is to become the chief concern in her life. It is a thoroughly conventional treatment of a time-worn theme that is revealed in the development of this ear-marked story. You know that despite all social, monetary and romantic impediments, the thing is coming out right side up in the end. And it does. This is due primarily to some uncommonly fine playing by Gary Cooper, some stereotyped romanticism on the part of Miss Oberon and a considerable contribution of comedy by Patsy Kelly, Fuzzy Knight, Walter Brennan and Mabel Todd.

There are others, of course, in the cast, who do their full shares in making as much as can be made, pictorially, of a slightly frayed plot. They include Henry Kolker, Henry Davenport, whose impersonation of the judge in "You Can't Take It With You" will long continue a gracious memory; Emma Dunn, Walter Walker, Charles Richman, Arthur Hoyt and Mabel Colcord.

There are some extremely humorous episodes in "The Cowboy and the Lady"—with locales that skip blithely from New York to Florida, to a steamship, to a Montana ranch and more or less all over the place—foremost among them being the imaginary furnishing of his ranch house by the love-bitten "Stretch" (that would be Mr. Cooper) and the earlier masquerade of Miss Oberon as a lady's maid, when she herself, as a matter of fact, is the lady. But altogether, I should say that the enterprise does not quite jell.

As usual, the Palace has surrounded its major feature for the new week with an interesting group of supplementary subjects. Foremost among these, perhaps, is Pete Smith's "Man's Greatest Friend," in which the dog is allied with such pioneers of science as Louis Pasteur, as an outstanding human benefactor. Then there is the advance glimpse of new fashions, in Technicolor; the M-G-M short-reel of "Power" and an especially complete and informative release of the "News of the Day," in which President Roosevelt's speech to Congress is given extensive footage, as it so richly deserves. Secretary Hull's return from Lima, Tom Mooney's pardon, the major "bowl" football games and many other items of concern likewise are accorded longer reelage than usual.

Belasco Observes 'Congressional Night'

Tonight has been designated "Congressional Night" at the Belasco Theater. Many members of both houses of Congress are expected to attend the showing of "Grand Illusion," one of the cinema's more penetrating exposition of the utter futility, hopelessness and tragedy of war.

Among the members of Congress who are expected to attend the Congressional screening are Senators Key Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Pat Harrison, Walter F. George, Robert F. Wagner, Tom Connally, J. Hamilton Lewis, Elbert D. Thomas, Frederick van Nuys, Lewis B. Schwellenbach, Claude Pepper, Theodore F. Green, Alben W. Barkley, William E. Borah, Hiram Johnson, Arthur Capper, Robert M. La Follette, jr., Arthur H. Vandenburg, Wallace H. White, Henrik Shipstead, Joseph Guffey, Robert R. Reynolds and Guy M. Gillette.

Also Congressmen Sam D. McReynolds, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Sol Bloom, Luther A. Johnson, Hamilton Fish, George Holden Tinkham, Edith Nourse Rogers, Ed V. Izac, James P. Richards, Thomas C. Hennings, jr., Charles A. Eaton, and Leo E. Allen.

This column also received one. Here it is: "Dear Mr. Bell—Please accept my thanks for the nice things you said about my son, Bronson, of the 'Bea' Lillie show. The boy is making his dancing debut in 'Set to Music.' I'm sure he'll treasure that paragraph you gave him. Cordially, (Signed) BIDE DUDLEY."

Bide Dudley, as no one needs to be reminded, for years was one of the most astute critics and commentators on theatrical affairs whose writings found their way into New York prints. He now is a radio commentator of equal eminence. It was nice to see his son make his dancing debut. As has been said here two or three times before, Bronson should be spotted all through "Set to Music," instead of only near the end of the last act. Noel Coward, Beatrice Lillie, Richard Haydn, et al, please note.

'Horror' Film Brings Monster Back to Life

'Son of Frankenstein,' At RKO-Keith's, Has Familiar Star Cast

"SON OF FRANKENSTEIN." Universal picturization of an original screenplay by Willis Cooper suggested by a story by Mary Wollstonecroft Shelley, featuring Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi, Lionel Atwill and Josephine Hutchinson with Emma Dunn, Donnie Dunagan and Edgar Norton. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Reviewed Thursday afternoon. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

Beelzebub and Hitler are just about the only bogey-men lacking from "Son of Frankenstein," in which Basil Rathbone, Boris Karloff, Bela Lugosi and Lionel Atwill gloomily deport themselves at RKO-Keith's this week.

This, the third film based on the jittery adventures of Mrs. Shelley's celebrated monster, again presents Karloff as the gruesome creature, but also introduces a thoroughly uncouth old mahout named Igor. Vile is his squalor, unkempt his beard and broken is his neck. His head is cocked off on his right shoulder and the broken part of his neck sticks up under his leathery skin.

Bela Lugosi makes him a pretty ghastly figure. Lionel Atwill's arm had been chunked off in his youth by the powerful monster and with his military career limited to a village constabulary, his outlook on life is understandably bitter. Rathbone has inherited his scientific father's fanatical mind, becoming unbalanced in moments of excitement. If one of these chilly companions is not in evidence, Director Lee sees to it that some others of the icy quartet are carrying on their own particular hymn of hate.

It seems that, although he was shot in the heart several times and pretty thoroughly trounced about at the end of his last adventure, Mr Karloff's Monster is only a pretty sick fellow with something of a hangover. He lies on his stony couch and groans whatever it is monsters groan when they want a dash of bromo or a grain or two of aspirin. He has a gory valet de chambre, none other than the above-described Igor, whose predeliction for dead bodies some years before had prompted the village council to have him hung. Igor's hanging party must have been as unsuccessful as the gory monster's creation, for after he was pronounced dead he startled the villagers by coming back to life—if that is the word for his subsequent suspended animation. But, as he explains later to scientist Frankenstein, he likes the monster because the burly beast gets him things. What things they are depend on the depth of your own depravity, but the fact remains that the crazed Igor is considered as dead by the villagers who loathe and ignore him.

To these dismal surroundings comes Rathbone, a pleasant and cultivated scientist, to claim the estate left him by his father, creator of the hated monster. With him he brings his wife and son, hardly expecting the cold reception the villagers give to the son of the man to whom they ascribe all their recent woes. But at heart he, too, is a scientist and when his father's papers come into his hands, his curiosity is aroused. After he pokes around his father's forbidding laboratory, he comes across the unique Igor who leads him past his father's tomb to the cadaverous hulk of the Monster. The scientist wheels into activity, exciting the anxiety of the village and its constable. His work enlivens not only the monster but the plot as well.

To take the children or not, depends entirely upon the child in question. Some will treat the film as the slightly spoofing imaginative tale that it is; others might be taken in by it. As a helpful shock-absorber, Keith's is holding over for a third week, Walt Disney's latest adventure of the Three Little Pigs, "The Practical Pig."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 12.

THE FRONT PAGES Tuesday featured stories of the mysterious noise which alarmed residents of the Park Slope section of Brooklyn . . . The Coast Guard and the U. S. Navy Yard checked, but could find no explanation . . . Dr. James H. Kimball, the weather man, was unable to offer any solution . . . The seismologist at Fordham University and even Tiffany Thayer, in his capacity of secretary to the Fortean Society—which investigates the recordings of scientific phenomena—couldn't pierce the mystery . . . If all these various agencies had checked at the offices of the United Artists Corporation, the mystery would have been solved . . . It was a publicity stunt for the movie which opened at the Music Hall—the movie, "Trade Winds."

EXCERPTS from some of Fritz Kuhn's actual speeches form part of the script of "The American Way," the new Kaufman & Hart show . . . The Sixth Avenue El won't be scrapped in its entirety. Portions of it will go to the Museum of the City of New York . . . Dr. Frederick B. Robinson, who just resigned as president of C. C. N. Y., has signed to deliver a series of lectures in the fall at the Frisco Fair . . . The members of the swanky Elbow Room, which now has been converted into a public restaurant, each received $3.60 as their share of the membership assessments they had paid. The newest members, however, are receiving full payment from their colleagues who had induced them to join.

LAST WEEK the papers announced the surprising fact that Yaltah Menuhin, sister of Yehudi Menuhin, had been separated from her groom, William Stix, after only a few months of marriage . . . Their friends are providing this clue to the reason for this estrangement: Whenever the 16-year-old Yaltah and her husband were invited to attend social functions, Stix would decline and explain: "Sorry—but my wife is too young to go out."

LEW LESLIE, finding it difficult to secure backing for the production of his new "Blackbirds" revue, is negotiating with Billy Rose to present the show at the Casa Manana . . . Sam Goldwyn, who never employed a receptionist at his N. Y. office, finally hired one—on the day before James Roosevelt reported for work here . . . The Cotton Club will donate 10 per cent of its gross receipts for the week of January 23 to the fund for refugees . . . Gabriel Pascal, who induced George Bernard Shaw to allow him to make a screen version of "Pygmalion," will screen Shaw's "Doctor's Dilemma" in June. Sir Cedric Hardwicke will be starred.

OFFICIALS of the Securities and Exchange Commission, investigating the McKesson, Robbins-Coster fiasco, have composed this nursery rhyme regarding the episode . . . "Old Mother Hubbard . . . went to the cupboard . . . to get her poor dog a bone . . . But when she got there . . . the cupboard was bare . . . and, by golly—was Price, Waterhouse & Co. surprised!"

LOWELL THOMAS has become an editor-owner of the Connecticut Nutmeg . . . Bob Benchley's son, Nathaniel, left the Nutmeg to work for the Herald Tribune. He's being replaced by Joan Woollcott, niece of Alec . . . Next week Claire Trevor will broadcast for Kate Smith. The announcements will read that the script was written by "Bennie Wemlinger." As a matter of fact, the script was written by Miss Trevor's husband, Clark Andrews—who produces the "Big Town" radio series which stars Edward G. Robinson. "Bennie Wemlinger" is the real name of Claire Trevor's mother . . . Max Schmeling cabled Yule greetings to Joe Jacobs, and told him that he plans to return to America, if he wins the two fights he's scheduled in Berlin.

THE NEXT ISSUE of Life magazine will have an unusual front cover. It will be a photo of Lucius Beebe wearing a white high hat, morning coat, white gloves and white linen weskit . . . The photographer who took the picture was fired the very next day.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, JR., has solved the mystery of the fire which destroyed his home in Charlottesville. He and his family now are living in a three-room apartment there.

AMBASSADOR JOE KENNEDY, in telling the President about the publicity regarding German aviation, also stressed the fact that the Nazi newspapers have made no mention of the frequent accidents involving untrained pilots there . . . Just before he sailed from this country secretly on Friday, Ed Wynn—whose private corporations were dissolved by the Tax Department—patted his tummy and sighed: "They took away all my corporations—except this one."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Jan. 12.—After Secretary Harold Ickes' speech denouncing Hitler, a lot of our folks here thought that it was Ickes who was backing Charlie Chaplin in his dictator picture. Now our Hollywood spy reports that it's someone much closer to the German situation. I'm told it's none other than Prof. Einstein. You'll remember they're great friends—friendship started way back in 1935, when they met aboard a boat coming to California. Charley entertained Einstein and took him to the opening of "City Lights," where they had to get out the riot squad and several people were very badly injured. But not, as Hollywood supposed, because they wanted to look at the movie stars, but to get closer to Mr. Einstein.

HEDDA HOPPER

Did you know that Orsen Welles is coming to Paramount to do "The Monster" with Henry Travers, who originated the Lionel Barrymore part in "You Can't Take It With You" and Louise Campbell who did so well in "Men With Wings?" Paramount's smart to take advantage of Welles' buildup when he scared America out of its wits with his Mars broadcast. That had such an ironic twist. The papers have been pretty jealous of the invasion by radio, but they themselves put Orsen Welles on every front page in the country which gave him one of the biggest programs on the air. And now he's handed one of the best parts of the year, written by Hecht and MacArthur.

Several years ago it was against our law to use Joe Von Sternberg's name with Marlene Dietrich. After discovering her and making some of her best pictures, they no longer spoke as they passed by. But time marches on, and don't be too surprised if Metro teams them again. They figure if they can do it once, they can do it again.

If Hollywood thinks it's annoyed by tourists here's a tourist who's howling.

"What can you see here?" he wants to know. "We've looked at all your movies back home months ago. I have to take my family to the races to see the stars, and then they don't show up." He's got a complaint!

Ray Bolger, Rita Johnson and Broderick Crawford swiped all the match boxes from the House of Murphy, and filled them with sugar for the horses at Santa Anita. They even sent me a box, too. Now I ask you—do I look like a horse? Ray, who boasts of his culinary ability, was asked how he prepared his goldfish.

"Well," he said, "you wrap carefully in oiled paper, cover with fine herbs and spices, then put it gently back into the fish bowl and open a can of sardines."

Poor Wayne Morris got time off to be married, but had to come back to the studio to finish his picture before his honeymoon. Just like Kid Galahad's luck!

That Doug, jr., certainly gets around. He even got in on Brenda Frazier's publicity at her debut. Doug sat at the head table.

Erroll Flynn takes Lili by the hand and heads for New York, Florida and the West Indies, as soon as "Dodge City" is sealed in the can.

Our town seems to be pretty upset that while Gary Cooper was in Germany he met Herman Goering. Well, now, isn't that dreadful? Nobody thought it a crime when former President Hoover paid him a visit last summer, but then I forgot he's not a motion picture star.

Wouldn't it be funny if Gilbert Roland, now that he's done such a swell job in "Juarez" and is wanted for "Beau Geste," should become a bigger star than Connie Bennett? Well, no one would be happier than Connie.

Bucky Harris

By Shirley Povich

Chapter Six

ON A SUNDAY LATE IN AUGUST, 1919, at Buffalo, Clark Griffith walked into the life of Bucky Harris. Young Bucky didn't recognize the heavy-browed little bantam of a man who sauntered into a box seat at the Buffalo park as the manager of the Washington Senators. But Buffalo Manager George Wiltse whispered to Bucky:

"He's here."

And Harris knew whom Wiltse meant. For days he was aware that Griffith was en route to Buffalo to scout him. This was the afternoon that might be the beginning of a major league career. Buffalo was playing a double-header with Reading. The impression that Bucky made on the little man in the stands who managed and owned the Washington Club would foretell much.

Harris scarcely dared to look at Griffith. The glances he did cast in the latter's direction he stole. He did not want to appear too excited or too blase. He merely hoped, and prayed, and vowed that this day he would act like a big leaguer.

It was no coincidence that Griffith was in the stands. The owner of the Senators had been told about the little second baseman with the Buffalo Club. Joe Judge, who had played with Harris on the Baltimore Drydocks team in war time, had gained Griffith's ear with praise for Bucky. Eddie Ainsmith, another of Harris' Baltimore teammates, had also spoken glowingly of the 22-year-old second baseman with Buffalo.

INTRIGUED, GRIFFITH HAD SENT Scout Joe Engel to Buffalo to make a preliminary report on Harris. Engel had arrived in Buffalo the preceding week. Bucky knew of his presence and he was dismayed. A day before, a line drive had crippled the third finger of Bucky's right hand. It was an ugly-looking injury, with the finger swollen to twice its normal size.

Harris had been ordered out of the Buffalo line-up, but he pleaded with Wiltse to stay in. This was the chance he didn't want to miss—being scouted by a big league club. Somehow, he'd make out. Perhaps he'd be lucky and get no hard fielding chances. Anyway, he didn't want to be out of the line-up with Engel in the stands. Wiltse remonstrated that he wasn't being fair to himself and then consented.

Five games Harris played with his finger so stiff and swollen it was utterly useless either in throwing a ball or gripping a bat. But he was determined to stay in the line-up until Griffith put in an appearance. The Senators' manager, he had learned, would stop off at Buffalo en route to Washington from the West if he received a favorable report from Engel.

Something about Harris apparently had impressed the Washington scout. That was evident when Griffith walked into the park that Sunday afternoon. Bucky's finger by now was a hospital case. The pain was severe and it had been broken in three places. To ease the throbbing and to conceal his handicap from Griffith, he strapped the injured finger to his little finger.

EIGHT TIMES BUCKY HARRIS went to bat in that double-header with Griffith watching intently. No ball player on the spot ever made a more sensational bid before the eyes of a big league scout. That day Bucky Harris made three hits in each game. Once he was hit by a pitched ball and another time he walked. That day Bucky Harris batted 1.000.

Unknown to Harris, Griffith had come to Buffalo in an exceedingly skeptical mood. Engel's report had not been too favorable nor had it dismissed Bucky as "impossible." And from the lips of the late Jack Dunn, manager of the Orioles, Griffith had heard that "That little second baseman at Buffalo will never hit well enough to be a big leaguer."

But the six hits Bucky collected in that double-header gave him reason to hope he had impressed Griffith. And he was not surprised when Griffith walked into the dressing room after the game to speak to him. He found Bucky removing the tape from his finger and gasped.

"Lemme look at that finger, son," said Griffith. "It looks nasty. You can't play ball with a finger like that. Better get it X-rayed. Ten to one it's broken."

Griffith said no more, left the locker room. He left Harris wondering. "Ten to one it's broken," mused Harris, who already knew that his finger was fractured in three places. He did not know how to regard Griffith.

That evening Bucky received a call from Manager Wiltse.

"You're on your way up, Bucky," Wiltse told him. "Griffith likes you. He's balking at the $5,000 we're asking, but he'll pay it. He liked the way you made those hits and he likes the idea of you sticking in there with that nasty finger. Says you're a game kid and he likes your kind."

At the realization that a big league club would pay $5,000 for him, Harris' head swam. He didn't hear anything else that Wiltse had to say, as the Buffalo manager, with a hand draped paternally across his shoulder, continued to talk.

"SNAP OUT OF IT BUCKY," finally shouted Wiltse. "I'm not through. Listen:

"Washington isn't the only club that wants to buy you. The Giants will take you for $5,000. So will Connie Mack. I want to know what club you'd rather be with. You can take your choice."

In amazement Bucky listened. Three big league clubs wanted him—Bucky Harris? It was bewildering. So he hadn't flopped that day in his tryout with the Giants. And when did Connie Mack scout him? It was enough to turn his young head.

Quickly Harris began to reflect. Washington, the Giants or the Athletics. Where to go? Shrewdly he began to appraise the situation. Who were the second basemen with those clubs? With the Giants, it was Larry Doyle. And Frankie Frisch, who they were saying was better than Doyle, was coming up. The Athletics' second baseman? He couldn't remember, but it didn't make any difference. The A's had finished in the cellar for four straight years and were again in eighth place. As long as he could choose, he didn't want to hook up with that kind of a ball club.

Washington? They were a better team. Had finished third in 1918 and he wouldn't have to bat against Walter Johnson. Their second baseman? He knew. It was Hal Janvrin. Never much of a hitter and Janvrin was an old-timer who was slipping in the field.

All these things Bucky mulled while Wiltse waited. Then he said:

"Gee, Mr. Wiltse, lemme go to Washington."

The Erudite Mushky Jackson Suggests Joe Louis 'Advocate'

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—Fresh from an extra serving of gefulte fish, Mushky Jackson, handyman extraordinary to Mike Jacobs and one of the fight racket's blown-in-the-bottle seers, materialized out of the ether.

"The boxing industry is in a repression," said Mushky sadly.

"The heavyweight champion is a hell of a fighter, that's why," said Mushky, so loudly a small crowd gathered, expecting a speech. "If the heavyweight champion is a bum, then you can get him a lot of fights. Louis is no bum; in fact, I figure he is further from bein' a bum than anyone I can think of. You'd be surprised who I can think of.

"So what happens? First we got Nova. A kid. Too young. Then we got Farr. No good. Then we got Galento. We don't know if he's good or not. Most guys he fights got calluses on their shoulders from lyin' on the canvas. But he is fat and out of shape. If Louis gets in there with him it will be another case for silk lining and silver handles."

Mushky murmured an old Slavic curse, crossed his fingers and spat loudly.

"Better we should give the business back to the Indians or to Jimmy Johnston, than to have that Baer runnin' around. At that I hears there are some nice Indians, like Chief What-Chu'mu-Call-It, the Wrassler. But that Baer. He's a clown. He knocks Farr all around, but howda ya know what he'll do the next time he fights. Sometimes he's a killer. The next time he ain't got the stren'th or the moxie to hoit a baby."

Speaking of babies, the youngest Baer reputedly is responsible for Max's comeback.

"Once a clown, allus a clown," said Mushky. "I don't care if he's got six Dionne quintuplets. He'll be foolin' and dancin' around in the ring. He gets in there and fools with that Louis and he'll land in his kid's nursery on the foist bounce."

In the opinion of the erudite Mr. Jackson there didn't seem to be anyone around capable of pushing the champion, then?

"No on I can see with my bare peepers," said Mushky in a resigned tone of voice. "If we don't get some one for him he'll have to pull a King Eddie and advocate his title. The guys talk about this young Conn from Pittsboig and Nova and some Irishman named Comiskey over in Joisey. Joe would moider them the same night.

"Ah-h," sighed Mushky. "I wisht I was 20 years younger, 40 pounds heavier 'n 8 inches taller. I'd be in there makin' myself a million bucks."

He thought a mome..t. "Two million bucks. Long as I'm wishin' I don't want to be no piker." And with a righ the little man passed into the night.

G. W. AGAIN BOWS TO ROANOKE, 47-33

Preliminary Model of Proposed Stadium and Sports Center Here

Plans for New D. C. Stadium

The design for the proposed stadium and sports center that would make Washington eligible for the Army-Navy game, Olympics, Davis Cup matches and other sporting events is on view in the new Interior Building. The location is the end of East Capitol street, between the Pennsylvania Avenue and Benning Bridge, on the Anacostia River. Eastern High School and Gallinger Hospital are shown in the top, and top left of the model. The entire plot covers 120 acres, and progress in the last year had included the filling in of 1,000,000 cubic yards of earth. The land is reclaimed Anacostia River flats, and a majority of the proposed site is in the property of the United States Government.

The diagram for the proposed project shows (A) National Guard Armory, for which an appropriation will be asked of the present Congress. (B) is the field house, for skating, hockey, basketball, boxing, wrestling, and other indoor sports. (C) is the parade field, where most of the filling in has taken place.

The plot is 40 acres, and the stands will seat 40,000 for parades, pageants, etc., and in necessity the seating capacity could be greatly enlarged.

(D) is the stadium, major project of the entire program. It would be modeled after the famed Yale Bowl, with modern improvements, and seat between 80,000 and 100,000 persons. (E) is the swimming pool, with stands for 10,000 and (F) tennis courts, with stands seating between 10,000 and 15,000. (G) is a part of the river, that would be used for boat races, etc.

Railroad tracks to the left of the parade grounds would ease the transportation difficulties. Ample parking space would be available around the bowl. The project is under the National Park and Planning Commission and National Parks Service, with Frederic A. Delano as chairman and its most enthusiastic backer. The model was made in the laboratories at Fort Hunt, Va.

With the proper financial backing, it may become a reality in five or ten years.

Sabin Beats Doeg In Orlando Play

Orlando, Fla., Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Wayne Sabin, of Los Angeles, today defeated John Doeg, 6—0, 6—1, in quarter-finals of the Florida State tennis tournament and put the brakes on the comeback campaign of the left-handed Orange, N. J., player who was national singles champion in 1930.

Sabin easily overpowered Doeg, who won only seven points in the first and 21 in the second. The match was Doeg's real test since he had resumed competition this winter.

In semifinals Saturday, Sabin meets Elwood Cooke, Portland, Oreg., and Gene Mako, Los Angeles, top-seeded, plays Hal Surface, Kansas City.

Cooke today downed Jack Tidball, Los Angeles, 6—4, 3—6, 6—0; Mako defeated John Shostrom, big ten titleholder from Chicago, 6—1, 6—2, and Surface trounced Mercer Henry, Orlando, 6—2, 6—2.

Central, Wilson Meet In Swimming Pool

Central and Wilson High School swimmers will churn the water of Central High pool this afternoon as the first dual meet ever held between the two schools gets under way at 3:30 o'clock.

Terror Wins; Davis Dives Into Post

Loser Is Injured as Capacity Crowd Sees Battle; Others Hurt

Two wrestlers and a referee were injured before the largest crowd to see a mat match this season at the arena last night.

The Golden Terror continued his winning ways, thanks to a self-inflicted injury suffered by Karl (The Killer) Davis when he dove head-on into one of the ring posts. Davis was examined in the dressing room and was said to have a fractured vertebra.

The night's hospital list also included Nick Campofreda, former Western Mayland football player and boxer, who broke his right collarbone, and Referee Cyclone Burns, who suffered a possible fracture of his right shoulder blade. The three casualties will have X-rays taken to determine the extent of their injuries.

With 2,200 crowded into the arena and several hundred turned away, the Golden Terror was awarded his seventh victory in eight starts here as Referee Benny Bortnick counted out the prostrate Davis.

The start of the feature was held up for several minutes until, at the insistence of Davis, the Terror's masked second was removed from the ringside. The two rivals belted away at each other for four minutes with their fists at the start of the match. The struggle was about even until Davis began a series of flying tackles. He made good on several, but finally missed the Terror and struck his head. The end came after 21 minutes.

Referee Burns was the victim of

Mayer, Movie Producer, Makes Unusual Bid; Sire Is Now 22; Price Would Be Highest in History of Turf

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—Samuel D. Riddle, owner of Man o' War, today revealed at the annual meeting of the Jockey Club he had turned down an offer, made last week, of $1,000,000 cash for his great racer and sire, according to the New York Herald Tribune.

The paper says offer came from Louis B. Mayer, motion picture producer, and was flatly refused by the owner of Glen Riddle Farms, who also owns Man o' War's 5-year-old son, War Admiral.

The reported offer was a surprising one. Man o' War will be 22 years old in March and his stud value has been reduced. Mayer, a recent addition to the turf world, has gone into horse racing with real interest, however, and the Herald Tribune believes the offer was sincere.

Mayer originally made the offer to the general manger of the Glen Riddle Farm, outside Lexington Ky. He was advised to see Riddle and the motion picture producer traveled to Pennsylvania to make the offer to Riddle.

He was told the horse was not for sale and that arrangements had just been completed for a trust fund for the horse with a Kentucky trust company.

Under the rules of this fund, Man o' War is to be taken care of it Riddle and Mrs. Riddle die before he does. When he dies Man o' War is to be buried on Joseph E. Widener's estate, near his present home, in the same plot with his sire and dam, Fair Play and Mahubah.

Mayer has taken a tremendous interest in horse racing, particularly from the breeding angle, for the past three years. Included in his stable are Perifox, Magic Hour, Quick Devil and Ossabaw, all purchases.

Man o' War is of course the best known of American equine stars. Starting as a 2-year-old in 1919 he won 20 of 21 races—losing only to Upset—and won a total of $249,465. Had he raced in the era of large purses in pre-depression days, his winnings would have been enormous.

Since retiring as a 3-year-old he has been one of the most successful sires in history. Man o' War sired such redoubtable flat racers as Crusader, winner of $203,621; War Admiral and Clyde Van Dusen, Kentucky Derby winners in 1937 and 1929, respectively; Bateau, Scapa Flow, American Flag and others. Battleship, a son, took the Grand National at Aintree, England, last year, and Blockade, another son, captured the Maryland Hunt Cup.

The greatest horse of his time was bought by Riddle from the late Augustus Belmont in 1918 at the Saratoga sales for $5,000. Thus, quite outside of the enormous stud fees he has commanded and his track earnings, Man o' War would have given Riddle a clear profit of $950,000 alone had the sale been made.

The proposed price would have far exceeded the highest amount ever paid for a horse. The top price on record is $265,000 which the Argentine breeder, Unzue, acting for a syndicate in 1920, paid for August Belmont's Tracery.

Cardinal Five Is Defeated By Elon, 35-32

Visitors Overcome Early Lead to Win In Hard Battle

Catholic University suffered its fifth straight loss of the season last night at the hands of Elon College, 35 to 32, in the Cardinals' gym after a gruelling battle.

The Cardinals staged a last minute rally, and were within one point of tying the score when Joe Carrig dropped in a two-pointer from the side of the court, and followed it a few seconds later with an overhand shot which rimmed the basket and bounced out, thus cutting short the Cardinals' last chance to pull the game out of fire.

With Lloyd Whitley and Jack Gardner leading the attack, Elon was in front most the game, save for a short while in the first period when Carmin Pirro and Gene Daly found the cords to put Catholic University in front, 4-0.

The Cardinals' lead was shortlived as Whitley, aided by the fine floor work of Capt. Ike Fesmire, scored two successive goals to knot the count and then John Henry Pearce added another to forge Elon into the lead, which they never relinquished.

Joe Carrig's all-around play kept the Cardinals in the game, but their inability to penetrate the visitors' zone defense hampered their chances. The Cards were forced to long shots, five of which were scored by Whitey Ambrose, C. U. captain. The fast-breaking play of the North Carolinians' two forwards found the ball in play near the Cardinals' basket most of the game.

In the preliminary, Y. M. C. A. defeated Catholic University frosh, 49 to 35.

Virginians Always Lead; Use No Subs

Zone Defense Fails Colonials; Rice and Sheffield Are Stars; 2,000 See Action

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Coach Bill Reinhart watched his George Washington five accept its worst defeat on a home court in his four years as head mentor last night in Tech gym as a flashy Roanoke College five completely outclassed the Colonials, 47 to 33, before nearly 2,000 fans.

It was only George Washington's third defeat before a Washington audience in four years, the others being to Loyola and Long Island, but it was by far their poorest showing as the Virginians were in command the entire 40 minutes of play.

Roanoke, runner-up in the National Intercollegiate Championship last year, and winner of eight straight this season since a loss to Villanova, pulled an iron man stunt as the starting players, dubbed the "five smart boys" played the entire game without substitution.

Zone Defense Fails

The Colonials used a zone defense for the first time, and it proved a boomerang, as the Maroons worked play after play, with Paul Rice and 6-foot-5 Bob Sheffield as the aces, under the basket to boost their total.

The closest the locals ever came to a tie score after Wagner's foul shot opened the point-making was 3 to 2, when Butterworth's basket followed Studebaker's shot that sent the Maroons ahead, 3 to 0. With the first period nearly half over, Roanoke led, 12 to 2, with Wagner, Studebaker, Lieb and Rice figuring in the scoring.

George Washington rallied momentarily, on scores by Osborne and Garber, to close the gap to 12 to 8, but Sheffield, Lieb and Rice ran the Roanoke count to 19 to 8 before Borden's basket broke their streak. Rice dropped a pot shot from midcourt, and Auerbach scored from midcourt as the half ended, 21 to 12.

The second half was a duplication of the first with Roanoke always in command. The Colonials rallied with four-point spurts on three occasions, but the Maroons would take time out and when play was resumed G. W. was cold again. Bill Reinhart changed seats with Trainer George Lentz at half time, to no avail.

Sheffield carried the brunt of the Roanoke scoring in the early part of the second half, then Lieb, who accounted for six foul shots, took over the duties and they all worked together to keep G. W. well back until the final gun.

It was the second victory in five days for the Virginians over Reinhart's five, as they won 47-41 last Saturday.

"Iron Man" Stunt

In performing their "iron man" stunt, of playing without substitution, the visitors presented one of the finest collegiate court fives seen here in some time. They all worked together and have a fine chance of going a long way toward their goal as National champions.

Paul Rice, who scored 19 points in his last two games, tied Big Bob Sheffield for scoring honors with 11 points each, with Gene Studebaker next, with 10, three baskets of the sensational variety; Bob Lieb with eight and Johnnie Wagner, seven. Garner and Borden led the locals, with nine and eight, respectively.

The G. W. second stringers, Comer, Borden, Auerbach and Veltri, played nearly half the game each, as the Colonials' mentor tried in vain to hit on a winning combination.

F. B. I. swamped the G. W. Frosh in the preliminary, 55-20.

Davis Cup Chances Hinge on Choice of Youngsters, Says Grant

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Jan. 12.—Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, "Mighty Atom" of American tennis, concluded today the United States has a better-than-even chance to retain the Davis Cup—providing Wayne Sabin isn't overlooked.

A veteran of big-time tennis at 28 years but prepared to carry on as long as his legs last, Grant agreed the loss of Don Budge was a blow, yet insisted the United States has a "wonderful" opportunity.

"We have two fine players on our side right now, who, I believe, could team together and retain the cup unaided," said the 120-pound gazelle of the courts. "One is Bobby Riggs and—this will be a surprise to a lot of people—the other is Wayne Sabin."

"You can say for me that Sabin is the 'key man,'" he continued. "He is a fine singles player, probably second only to Riggs, and in my opinion is the best doubles player in the game today. I think he could pair with either Riggs or Gene Mako and win easily."

BRYAN GRANT

The Atlanta ace has paired with Sabin, unranked in the national list for 1938 performance, in two tournaments this year. Each time they lost in the finals to Mako and Jack Tidball, Los Angeles veterans.

Riggs Important Cog After Loss of Budge Avers Atlanta Star

"If they don't put Sabin in there with either Mako or Riggs, I think the committee will be making a very foolish mistake," Grant said emphatically. "The Mako-Tidball team is good, but that line-up couldn't stack up against one with Sabin in there."

Grant had little to say of his own chances, but admitted he was "gonna try to slip into the line-up." He thinks the squad will be made up of Mako, Riggs, Sabin, Joe Hunt and either himself or Frankie Parker.

Bitsy was encouraged by the probability Australia will be the team that gains the challenge round since he has yet to lose a match to an Australian, having beaten Jack Bromwich, Adrian Quist, Jack Crawford and Vivian McGrath, the latter twice.

Grant still relies mainly on phenomenal retrieving but acknowledged he was going to the net a bit more to cut short rallies "because I am getting too old to keep on running down the long ones."

Turfmen Move To Hold Purses Of Doped Horses

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 12.—The National Association of State Racing Commissioners recommended today that the owners of stimulated horses be deprived of purses won.

Acting on a proposal by Herbert Bayard Swope, New York Commission chairman, who was unable to attend the sixth annual convention, they suggested an amendment to corrupt practice rules which already provide for suspension of persons tampering with horses.

Under present regulations the money is paid, although handlers of the horses are ruled off for drugging.

The association, which closed the convention today, also recommended the engagements of claimed horses not be passed on to new owners, emphatically recommended better living conditions for stable help at all tracks, and suggested physical examinations for jockeys at regular intervals.

Don Meade and Trainer Odom Again Take Feature at Hialeah Park

Sir Damion Near Record In Victory

Arcaro, Uninjured In Spill, Returns to Ride Second Winner; Dalamac Pays $196

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 12.—Jockey Donald Meade and Trainer George Odom, opening day heroes when the long shot Early Delivery won the Inaugural Handicap, came right back here today with another feature race success, Trainer Odom had Marshall Field's Sir Damion in first class condition after a long layoff and the 5-year-old son of Sir Gallahad 3d, under Meade's hustling ride, easily defeated 11 other veterans in the Everglades Purse of seven furlongs.

Sir Damion, which showed much promise early in his career before going wrong, had not been to the post since he was beaten off in War Admiral's 1937 Kentucky Derby. However, he was well liked by his stable today and ran accordingly, stepping the distance in 1:22 4/5, just one-fifth of a second slower than Sweep Like's track record. The field representative paid $8.90 for $2.

Two lengths behind the winner came Smith and Homan's Don Creole to earn second money, a head before Larch Hill Stable's Tropical Park star, Histrionic.

Son of War Wins

Dalamac, a 5-year-old mare owned by H. S. Wilson and ridden by Albert Schmidl, who excels on long shots, gave the crowd a thrill when she won the turf course event to pay $196.50 for $2, a mark that may not be topped here all season. The mare, which had shown some fair efforts on occasions, found the soft grassy going much to her liking, for she raced forwardly from the start, gained command around the last bend and held on to score by a length. Hi-Tide, also a forward factor all the way, took second money by two lengths, with Mistralkin third.

Ninety-one $2 straight tickets were sold on Dalamac.

Son of War, ridden by Eddie Arcaro and carrying A. T. Winmill's silks, was backed down to $5.40 for $2 and clicked by two lengths, in 0:34 3-5, in the "baby race." The son of War Whoop bore out and interfered with horses just after the start, then went on to beat the well-liked Wabaunsee with ease. Maescend finished resolutely and missed the place by a scant head. Earl Steffen was unseated by Maescend after the finish, but he was not injured.

Warren Yarberry, after receiving a slight kick while Spirit Queen was being unsaddled following the second race, canceled the mount on St. Moritz, favorite for the third race.

Meade Takes Another

Eddie Arcaro, considered by many America's best rider, and the capable apprentice, Nunzio Pariso, had a narrow call when both fell with their mounts near the three-eighths pole during the fourth race. Arcaro, who was riding Coil Spring, was first to go down when his mount got caught in a jam. Then Faust, which had been trailing, fell over Coil Spring with Master Pariso. The two riders were shaken up.

This event saw Don Meade, hero of opening day, piloting Mansco to a 4-length victory at odds of $11.70 for $2.

None the worse for his fall, Arcaro came back to keep pace with Don Meade for the day by scoring a "double" astride Knight Gallant in the mile and three-sixteenths of the last race. The winner, which paid $6.70, clipped one-fifth of a second from Momo's track record.

Girls and Boys Play on Same Teams at Eliot

Director Points to Many Colleges For Precedent

While the powers that be at many public schools go to great lengths to keep their boy and girl athletes at opposite extremities of the playground, one director spends her spare time trying to reverse the time-dusty order of things. The rebel is Mrs. Ruth Bartilson, girls' director at Eliot Junior High.

Says Mrs. Bartilson: "It's the healthiest way to run things. As one of my apt students put it, 'we have to live together later on, why not play together now.' That's the way I feel. And you'll find without a great deal of troubl that numerous other institutions look at it the same way."

As her first example, Mrs. Bartilson points a prideful finger at Vassar College, which has lately taken up the policy of allowing its girl students to bring dates to athletic events. The dates do not sit idly and watch proceedings, but take an active part in the co-educational sport. Penn State is also mentioned for the combination male-female classes it holds in many branches of athletics, including, of all things, fishing.

Mrs. Bartilson came to the District eight years ago when Eliot was opened for the first time. She says that her biggest surprise when she took over the girls' gym classes was a game played, and still played, with a volley ball. It is called "schlog," though no one knows why. In "schlog" the action starts off something like baseball, a lass standing up to the "plate" and waiting for the pitch. A rival hurls a volley ball down the groove, the batter smacking at it with her hand. At this point all semblance of baseball leaves the game. Somebody picks up the batted ball and slings it at the head, torso or legs of the batter, who is dashinging toward a base and back home again. Hilarity, in all its variations, is the customary result.

Boys do not join with the girls of Eliot at "schlog," but they do at volleyball, the main sport at present. Though a hearty exponent of co-educational athletics, Mrs. Batilson looks with no little disdain on games between teams of boys and teams of girls. "That," she says, "tends to give the boys an exaggerated sense of superiority."

'Home and Home' Officials Sugested

Lawrence, Kans., Jan. 12 (AP).—Dr. F. C. Allen, University of Kansas coach, suggested today each team in an intersectional basketball game name an official from its home area in an effort to promote uniformity of rules interpretation.

Allen offered the suggestion after reading comments of Bill Chandler, Marquette coach, who brought his squad to New York City for a game, in which the Midwestern mentor classified Eastern officials as "strict," those on the Pacific Coast as a "little less rigid" and arbiters in his own sector as the "most liberal."

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Hialeah Park, Jan. 12.

Dear Al,

Thanks to Oak Apple the Bennings forces were not shutout today but I suspect the boys and girls were washed out when Lipton bit the dust. However, I have an alibi besides the fact that he was a 33-1 shot. There was a spill in the race and Lipton had little chance after two horses near him went down. We'll get even on this one. Clocker Mike was still feeling high despite the fact that he dropped $16 bucks on Lipton. He is playing Repeller $4 to win and $3 to place tomorrow. His bankroll is now $329.30. It is funny what a difference a few days make in Mike's finances. Last Monday he asked me for some eating money. I handed him 50 cents and he asked, "Is that all you have?" I told him that I did have another dime and he says, "I'll match you for it." But since he had that $24 to win on Jinx there's no holding him. However, he's gotten smart about horses and is playing only one a day. There is some mystery about Mike, too. Just before today's Lipton race, he disappeared. I'll have to look into that. The War Admiral rooters really got on my neck about that piece defending Charlie Kurtsinger the jockey. The bone of contention was that I said War Admiral was in trouble. If you don't think that a tiring horse running head and head with another is in trouble I'd like to know what it is called. But honest I'm as sick of that Seabiscuit-War Admiral stuff as anybody. Tomorrow's program is dedicated to youth. There are five races for 3-year-olds and one for 2-year-olds on the card. I can't remember one like it. Jockey Noboy Jacobs has arrived so everything is "not so pretty good" on Flagler Street.

BILL.

First race—Cherry Play, a gelded son of Display and Cherry Court, has worked well and will carry the colors of the Foxcatcher Farm in the baby race. Breaks in the clear on the outside, and Peters may get him home. Swift Singer, a son of Haste, may take second money. Gaudy has the benefit of experience opening day.

Second race—Huskie Queen won for us last out, but the stewards disqualified her. She has plenty of speed and if kept out of trouble I look for a victory that will stick. Off Guard improved at the other track and is dangerous. Saxonian to take care of the others.

Third race — Lightning Lady seems the best suited of those gathered for this 7-furlong event. She won at Tropical Park and is as fit as hands make horses. Gaona has worked well and could be better than generally rated. Transday to take care of the show award.

Fourth race — Billabong looks like the right one in this rather open affair. Wayne Wright is scheduled to ride and I'm going to string along. Hunter L. is one I have been trying to chase home. The rail post helps his chances. Rosemain to account for the third money.

Fifth race—Pause was in lots of trouble last out. With clear sailing this filly is capable of taking it all. American Daisy evidently has class and looms as a keen rival for the top one. Buyer Beware is reported ready.

Sixth race—Dnieper appears to have found the right spot in this event. Needs only the right handling. Pastry has a high figure and should take care of the place. Her Reigh, with top weight, seems due for a bit of the purse.

Eighth race—Green Melon, with Arcaro up, looks like the right one in the day's final. Black Gift and Crinoline for the other money positions.

Best bet—Dnieper.

Gonzaga Five Turns Back Wilson High, 36-25, for Third Victory

Rice Leads Scorers; Bags 16 Points

Losers Held to Lone Field Goal in First Period With Some Excellent Guarding

Orrel Mitchell's Gonzaga five evened matters for the season with Tony Kupa's Wilson High courtmen yesterday on the former's floor by a 36 to 25 margin. It was the third victory in five starts for the Prep School lads, whose next tilt is a Catholic League encounter with Georgetown Prep.

The Gonzagans limited the high school lads to a lone field goal in the first quarter as they led 7-2, and retained the 5-point margin at halftime, leading 18-13.

Fred Rice, the game's scoring star with 16 points, and his teammates widened the gap to 10 points at the third quarter, leading 27-17, and were not extended in the final period. The winners doubled the field goal total of the losers, 14 to 7, but made three less foul shots.

Coach Mitchell used 11 players, although only five figured in the scoring. Fugler's 10 points paced the Wilson scorers, while Haycock scored 8, the same amount as Judkins, of the winners.

Tigers Defeat American U. Five, 41 to 31

Weed Leads Visitors With 15 Points; Brown Byham Top Locals

American University cagemen put up a keen battle last night but were forced to accept a 41-31 defeat at the hands of the Hampden-Sydney Tigers. The Virginians, led by Weed, a lanky center, took a lead early in the fray and were never headed although the Eagles managed to cut down their margin in the closing minutes.

Hampden-Sydney held a 21-13 lead at the end of the first half and was ahead, 37-20, at one stage of the final period. With Byham and Brown pacing the attack, the Eagles whittled down some of the advantage and the combination was clicking in good style when the final whistle came.

Weed and Murdock, a guard, each sank six shots from scrimmage during the melee. Byham and Brown turned in four baskets each for the American quintet.

The defeat was the Eagles' fourth straight, their only victory coming in their opening clash with Western Maryland as their victim.

Action Under the Basket as Maroons Trounced G. W.

The Colonials outnumbered Bob Sheffield 2 to 1 in a leap for the ball last night at Tech gym as Roanoke trounced George Washington, 47 to 33. Left to right, Veltri (11), Colonial sub; Sheffield, 6-foot 5-inch center for the visitors (12), and Jack Butterworth (4), center for the locals, all jumped to retrieve the ball

Capital Cagemen:

Bill Reinhart, Colonial Coach, One of Smartest in Business

Pulled a 'Fast One' on Old Rival to Break State Jinx; Has Elevated G. W. Teams

This is the sixth in a series of sketches dealing with college basketball players and coaches in the District.

By Jack Munhall.

A most welcome and a comparatively recent addition to the city's coaching ranks is Bill Reinhart, genial Missourian, who in four years has elevated George Washington basketball to an unprecedented peak.

REIHART

Not fat and forty, a red-faced little man with Irish blue eyes and receding sandy hair, Reinhart hardly would be associated with Oregon's great athlete of the postwar era; a brilliant quarterback who led the Beavers against Harvard in the 1920 Rose Bowl classic, an outstanding baseball infielder and a great basketball player.

Nor to consider his kindly, good-natured countenance and continual bantering would you believe that beneath his innocuous-appearing demeanor works one of the keenest basketball brains in the country.

This ability to deceive the eye, to lull his enemies into a feeling of false security is perhaps the most valuable attribute of this personable and popular Westerner. After graduation from Oregon in 1923, Reinhart wasted little time in pulling a surprise, scored a coup at the expense of one of his closest friends—Slats Gill, Oregon State court mentor.

Taking over basketball at Oregon in 1924, young Bill quickly discovered that the best way to hold the job was to devise a means of ending Oregon State's string of victories over the Beavers. The secret of this domination, Bill learned, was the almost impregnable zone defense that Gill, one of the Northwest's best defensive basketball teachers, had developed to shackle Oregon's most promising teams.

So it was on building an offense to penetrate this zone, or stationary defense that Reinhart concentrated. And so successful was this novice with his strategy to beat the old master that Oregon not only immediately ended the State jinx but finally Gill, in sheer desperation, discarded his pet defense in favor of a man-for-man.

Having perfected a satisfactory offense—which he uses at G. W. now—Reinhart then became and still is a "crank" on defense perfection. Like most Western coaches Reinhart believes in outscoring the opposition. But unlike most Western coaches he does not strive mainly to develop his own offense to a maximum of effectiveness at the expense of neglecting his defense, because he believes the less points you allow your opposition the easier it is on you.

The best guage of the success of Reinhart's methods of coaching, undoubtedly is the record of his George Washington teams. Since taking the reins at the downtown school in 1934, he has led the Colonials to 45 victories as against only 12 losses. More remarkable, perhaps, is his record at Tech Gym, where, as this is written, George Washington has dropped but two games in years, playing a stiff brand of opposition.

Discontinued Dribbles . . . Reinhart is the father of one son, Bill, jr., aged 10 . . . In addition to basketball, coached baseball and assisted such men as Doc Spears and John (Cap) McEwan in football . . . Discovered Joe Gordon, the Yankee star, on an American Legion team in Portland, persuaded him to enroll at Oregon. Later got Gordon a contract with the Yankees after advising him to turn down a better offer from the Red Sox . . . Has for last two summers served as manager of East Potomac Pool here . . . Has wide acquaintanceship with football coaches, and often has scouted Pacific Coast elevens for Southern invaders—Alabama, for instance. Was born in Osborne, Mo., but at age of 7 moved to Eugene, Oreg., site of the State University.

Ben Hogan Shoots 66 to Top Field in $5,000 Oakland Open

By the Associated Press.

Oakland, Calif., Jan. 12.—Ben Hogan, one of the mighty mites of the professional golfing clan, came charging home through evening shadows and a bank of fog today to post a par-shattering 66 for the first-round lead of the 72-hole $5,000 Oakland Open tournament.

The 26-year-old, 138-pound former Texan, now playing out of White Plains, N. Y., started late and finished last, to lop four strokes off par for the short and not overly exacting Sequoyan course. He was out in 32 and home in 34. Par is 35, 35.

Two other dark horses and a seasoned campaigner were close enough to grab the leader's coat tails.

Stationed in the 67 column were Ed Oliver, Wilmington, Del.; Clayton Heafner, Greensboro, N. C., and Sam Snead, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Oliver and Heafner each ganged out nines of 33-34. Snead reversed the figures.

Another tournament veteran, Horton Smith, of Chicago, was close to the pace with a 37-31—68. His four under par second nine was the lowest of the day.

Grouped at 69 were Jim Demaret, Houston, Tex., with 35-34; Dick Metz, Chicago, 35-34; Zell Eaton, Oklahoma City, 37-32; Charles Sheppard, Pleasanton, Calif., 35-34; John Perelli, Tahoe, Calif., 34-35; Amark Fry, Oakland, 35-34, and Amateur Bill Higgins, of Oakland, with 34-35.

Even par was equaled by Willard Hutchinson, Philadelphia, Pa., 36-34; Leonard Dodson, Springfield, Mo., 35-35; Charles Congdon, Tacoma, Wash., 35-35, and Marvin (Bud) Ward, of Olympia, Wash., member of last year's Walker Cup.

St. John's Five And Eastern Clash Today

Four Other Games on Tap for High Teams This Afternoon

St. John's, rapidly becoming the most serious menace on the schoolboy cage horizon, today meets the second of two teams given a good chance to beat it in early season ratings—Eastern. The first, Western, expired with a languid sigh before the sizzling Johnnie attack on Wednesday. Today's game starts at 3:30 at the East Capitol street court.

If St. John's survives the onslaught of Eastern—and there is no reason why it shouldn't, having stopped a four-game winning streak of Western—there should be little in the way of a repetition of last year's undefeated record and the city title that went with it. The speediest improvement of any of the local teams has been shown by the claret-trunked lads who looked like the worst kind of stumblers in their first start, against Anacostia, but since have knocked over competitors with startling regularity.

Eastern also has shown some improvement over its first endeavor, a 23-12 shellacking by George Washington High of Alexandria. Its most recent start was a losing one, though the team functioned as a unit for the first time.

Last year these teams faced on two occasions, St. John's emerging with the upper hand both times. A rivalry that approached the ancient gridiron rivalry between Central and Roosevelt gradually grew up. Now the two schools look forward to the games with more interest than is expended on many games in their own league.

Four other clashes are slated for other parts of the city. Bethesda-Chevy Chase, backed up and trod upon by every interhigh team it has faced, tries again when it meets Anacostia's Indians on the latter's floor. This is a good time for Bethesda, well thought of early in the season, to regain some prestige. Anacostia has a valiant crew, however, and will take a lot of knocks before giving up.

Western's regretful basketeers meet Georgetown Prep at the Western gym. This, as well as the other three games, starts at 3:30 p. m. The only night game is between Montgomery-Blair and Mount Rainier at the latter's gym, starting at 8:15.

a freak accident. A turnbuckle holding the ropes broke and struck him in the shoulder. The match was delayed while he was taped up and he returned to the ring.

Pittsburgh U. Five Is Ready To Quit League

Lack of Rivalry of Teams Is Given as Reason for Action

Pittsburgh, Jan. 12.—A spokesman for the University of Pittsburgh athletic department said today that James J. Hagan, director of athletics, had left for New York "with the intention of offering our resignation from the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball Conference."

The Sun-Telegraph said Pitt's action was motivated because "most of the colleges in the group are not natural or otherwise particularly keen rivals." Nonconference games with Carnegie Tech, West Virginia and Penn State would be continued by the Panthers, the Pitt spokesman said, dropping Georgetown and Temple.

The action would not affect this year's conference schedule.

Eastern League Okays Use of Yellow Ball

New York, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—The Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League decided today that the yellow ball may be used in college games if competing teams agree, although the National League ball shall be the official one.

Virtually the same provision regarding the yellow ball was adopted at last month's major league meetings.

Reynolds Benson, of Columbia University, was re-elected president of the Collegiate Baseball League.

Nine other organizations affiliated with the central office for Eastern intercollegiate athletics also held meetings today at the Hotel Biltmore. Election of officers was the main business conducted at the opening session of the two-day conferences.

Asa S. Bushnell, executive director of the central office, was named secretary-treasurer of each of the units. H. Jamison Swarts, of Pennsylvania U., was re-elected president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League. James Hagen, of Pittsburgh U., was elected president of the Eastern Intercollegiate Golf Association. Wiliam J. Bingham, of Harvard, was re-elected president of the Intercollegiate Ice Hockey Association and president of the Swimming League. Lieut. Commander Ward P. Davis, of Navy, was elected president of the Eastern Association of Rowing Colleges.

Travis and Lewis Sign at Increases, Griffith Announces

The left side of the Nats' infield was under contract for 1939 last night following a visit by Shortstop Cecil Travis and Third Baseman Buddy Lewis to the office of Owner Clark Griffith.

Both players emerged with a smile from their conference with Griffith to substantiate reports that they had received pay increases. Travis, as the fifth leading hitter in the league, with a .335 average, is now one of the highest-paid members of the Nats. Lewis, despite a poor year in the field, cited his leadership on the club in runs scored and his ability to get on base, in successfully demanding a salary boost.

Don Budge Wins, Goes 1 Match Up

Detroit, Jan. 12 (U.P.).—Donald Budge went one-up in his professional tennis series against Ellsworth Vines, his fellow Californian, tonight by taking two of three sets, the third being decided in 24 bitter games.

The red-haired former amateur king won, 6—3, 0—6, 13—11. He now holds a four-to-three match lead over Vines in their barnstorming tour.

Terp Quintet Faces Battle With Duke Five

Conference Rivals Clash Tonight on College Park Court

Maryland's basketball team will strive to better its Southern Conference standing when it meets Duke the loop champion, tonight at College Park in the finale of a double bill.

The Terp frosh, seeking their fourth straight win, will play the Blue Ridge College yearlings in a preliminary at 7 o'clock.

Maryland has won 2 of 3 conference games and Duke has taken 3 out of 5.

The Terps and Blue Devils always have staged hot battles and again appear to be about on an equal basis. Maryland leads in the long series, 7 to 6. Last year the Terps broke even in two regular season tilts, but Duke eliminated Maryland, 35 to 32, in the semifinals of the title tourney at Raleigh.

Maryland will make no change in its starting line-up, Adam Bengoechea and George DeWitt, forwards; Eddie Johnson, center, and George Knepley and Pershing Mondorff, guards, being slated to take the floor at the outset.

Singer Breaks 2 Records at Lucky Strike

Justice, Shugrue Set Season Marks; Raleigh Beats Hecht

Julius Singer cracked two season's records in the National Capital League last night at Lucky Strike, posting a 160 game and 439 set as his team, Wayne Oil, took the odd game from the league-leading Daily News team. Singer started with the 160 game, and followed with 145 and 134 for the 439 set.

Jalapes Restaurant, with a 629 game and 1,795 set, swamped Washington Beef & Provision three straight, led by Ed Nash, 158, and Howard Parsons, 398. Joe Weakley led the losers with 395.

The last-place Tribby Realtors upset the second-place Red Circle team three straight, while the Dome Oil five overtook the runner-up spot with a three-game triumph over the defending Benmacs. Acyr led the winners with 143-369.

AMERICAN LEGION

Bob Spriggs topped the American Legion bowlers at Lucky Strike with a 128 game and 367 set as Bunker Hill shut out Sergeant Jasper. Nick Chaconas had a creditable 366 set for Lincoln Post, while Tom Courtney had high game, 133, for Nash.

A. F. G. E. LEAGUE

Jim Justice, rolling for the Public Health No. 1 team, hit a season's record set of 393, including a 157 game. Internal Revenue No. 2 cut the league leading St. Elizabeths No. 1's lead to three games by taking the odd one.

LADIES PROCUREMENT

Empires tied the season's record game in the Ladies Procurement League at Lucky Strike with a 518 game, while Margaret Smith, of Maullers, topped the individuals with a 128 game and 327 set as Maullers took the odd game from Alleycats.

FEDERAL LADIES

Polly Shugrue posted a season's record set of 386, including a 147 game, in the Federal Ladies League at Arcadia. The Marines, aided by Miss Shugrue's bowling, also set a season's high set, 1,597, and had second high game of the year's play, 553.

WAR DEPARTMMENT

John Denneby, a member of the Estimates team, had individual high game in the War Department Men's League at Arcadia, 156, while Alfred Prevost, of Lithos, had top set for the night, 398. Hydrographics 576 game and Barbettes 1,627 set paced the teams.

CAPITAL TRANSIT

Three teams were deadlocked for the top spot in the Capital Transit League at Takoma, Northern Bus, General Office and Mechanical. Northern Bus won all three from General Office, led by Sam Raven's 138-372, that led to a team game and set of 591 and 1,731.

With a chance to go into the lead, Mechanical lost two to Track and Roadway, leaving the three-way tie. Other results found Central Bus trouncing Western three straight, to go into fourth place, Georgetown winning all three from Northeastern, Southern Bus scoring a shutout over Southeastern, Eastern winning the odd one from Northern Car, and Navy Yard winning two out of three from Brightwood.

SILVER SPRING LADIES

Coffman Realty Co. took the league lead in the Silver Spring Ladies League at Hugh Arbaugh's pin plant, by swamping Edmunds three straight. Thelma Robinson led the winners with 311.

Hendricks Service Station won the odd game from Monument Electric, led by Barbara Livingston's 340, and Victoria Laundry took three from Southern Oxygen.

DEPARTMENT STORES

Jumping from fifth place to second the Raleigh Haberdasher bowling team accomplished this feat by handing the Hecht Co. a three-game lacing in the Department Store League last night at Recreation Alleys. Johnny Anderson rolling 375 led the winning charge. The defeat was a costly one to the Hechtmen which dropped them from the runner-up spot down to fourth place.

The pace-setting Kann's team led by Irwin Simon's 361 boosted their lead to 3½ games by whitewashing the Credit Bureau.

MOUNT RAINIER LEAGUE

Smith's Tavern increased it's lead in the Mount Rainier League last night at the Suburban Alleys by trouncing Bob's Raw Bar three straight. Chet Lilley's 144 game and 399 set were high.

Mayor and Council took the odd game from Whelan's Bar-B-Q.

Outboard Stars Awarded Medals; Remon Presides

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—The council of the American Power Boat Association, holding a motor boat show dinner, tonight, announced the award of record medals to 20 drivers who last year set up new A. P. B. A. speed marks in sanctioned regattas throughout the country.

John A. Remon, of Washington, president of the association, presided at the session, attended by leaders in sport and industry. The 1938 speed merchants who will receive the new medals, designed by Elise Tyson, girl outboard driver of Philadelphia, are:

Count Theo Rossi, of Italy, gold cup champion; J. M. L. Rutherfurd, of Port Washington, N. Y., and Palm Beach, Fla.; Harry Birdsall, Yonkers, N. Y.; Louis Carlisle, Geneva, N. Y.; E. F. Dobson, Baltimore, Md.; Henry Taubert, Waco, Tex.; Paul Wearly, Muncie, Ind.; Gar Wood, jr., Algonac, Mich.; Jack Cooper, Kansas City, Mo.; Clinton Ferguson, Waban, Mass.; Bert Steacie, Framingham, Mass.; Edison Hedges, Atlantic City, N. J.; Frank Vincent, Tulsa, Okla.; Buddy Reuter, St. Louis, Mo.; Mollie Tyson, Chestnut Hill, Pa.; Joseph Monigle, Wilmington, Del.; J. T. Milliken, St. Louis; David Gerli, New York, and Bob Gambrill, Washington, D. C.

New England Star Rolls in Dixie Sweeps

Alice Blugo Due to Invade Silver Spring Alleys on Saturday

Alice Blugo, Bridgeport, Conn., outstanding duckpin star in the North for the past eight years, and twice awarded the No. 1 honorary ranking, will be in the field when the Times Dixie Sweepstakes starts Saturday at 12:30 on the Silver Spring Alleys. The second block will be at Arcadia and third at Rosslyn, with the large field, that may reach 60, rolling in two shifts at each alley.

Lorraine Gulli and Ida Simmons, that have split the title between them six of the seven years, will naturally be in the co-favored roles, although other stars in the metropolitan Washington area, including Georgia Hays, Lucy Rose, Blanche Woten and others, will be threats.

George Isemann, executive secretary of the National Duckpin Bowling Congress, received six additional entries from Baltimore, and several each from Richmond and Norfolk.

Ann Kasserly and Irene Krasnack, also of Bridgeport, were recruited for the event, with Miss Blugo, by Isemann on the trip to the State this week.

First prize is guaranteed to be $100, at least four other cash prizes, in addition to the block awards, will be given.

Farr Favored Over Burman

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan 12.—There'll be heavyweights by the ton in the Madison Square Garden ring tomorrow night in a six-bout card headed by a ten-round gettogether between Tonypandy Tommy Farr and Jack Dempsey's hopeful, Red Burman.

Somehow it seems proper that Tonypandy Tommy should be picking Friday the 13th to take a whack at his American jinx. Tommy has come to bat four times since beginning his invasion of this country, and to date his record shows no runs, no hits. No. 5 may be different. At least, the betting boys along Bash boulevard think so, for they've installed him as favorite.

Landon Five Is Defeated

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., Jan. 12.—Episcopal High School cagers opened their 1939 campaign successfully here this afternoon, turning back the Landon School five, 21 to 10. It was the Maroons' first start under the direction of Billy Ravenel, new varsity court coach, who assumed his duties the first of this year.

Young Democrats Win in League

Atchison-Keller Plumbers (Falls Church) took one of the worst trimmings since joining the Southeast Community Center Basketball League at the hands of Young Democrats of Southern Maryland, 63 to 41. The victory for the Democrats gives them exclusive leadership of the league with seven victories and only one defeat.

Educator Urges Engineers Aid Society,

State Control Coming But Not to Be Feared, Dr. Zook Tells Council

Holding "social control" necessary in modern engineering, Dr. George F. Zook, president of the American Council of Education, declared "professional men cannot live in a splendid isolation, but only as members of society" at the opening session of the American Engineering Council at the Mayflower yesterday.

Engineers, like doctors and lawyers, will be required to submit to a considerable measure of social control," Zook told delegates from all over the United Statese, but an alert profession, doing its job well, need have no fear of such control.

Broader general education is one of the most pressing needs of the American engineering profession, he said, pointing out that after an "incomplete" secondary schooling, the great majority of engineering students immediately begin technical training.

Background Stressed

Speaking at the evening banquet of the secretaries, delegates, and their guests, Dr. Dexter S. Kimball, past president of the council, stressed the importance of an economic and historical background for modern engineers.

If engineers of today are to assume a larger role in the "solution of our economic and social difficulties," they must acquire a "wider range of experience and knowledge than the term engineer now connotates," Kimball declared.

At another session Brig. Gen. Earl McFarland, assistant to the Chief of Ordnance, appealed for the cooperation of the engineering profession in preparing for such "timely and effective use of our power" that "this country need never fight another war."

Brookings' Chief Speaks

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution, opening a symposium on "National Planning and the Engineer's Relation to It," remarked that there is nothing new in the conception of national planning.

Feudalism and its successor in western Europe, mercantilism, were both forms of national planning, he said, while today communism and fascism carry the idea "to an extreme." Planning in this country does not replace private enterprise, but takes up its slack, he concluded.

Administration Drops Defense Council Plan

The Administration has abandoned proposals that a national defense committee or council be set up in connection with its preparedness program, it was learned authoritatively yesterday.

The plan, said to have been suggested by Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier, contemplated the creation of a group organization patterned along the lines of the old War Industrial Board, of which Baruch was head.

Such an organization, however, in the opinion of Administration officials, would conflict with the President's desire to avoid any appearance of "hysteria" in connection with defense preparations.

The Administration policy, it is understood, will be to deal with each industry individually in carrying out the defense program. In any event, no attempt will be made to establish any form of group organization to mobilize industry and labor, at least so far as peace-time activities are concerned.

Sadur Told to Pick Lawyer by Tuesday

Justice Laws yesterday told Gordon L. R. Sadur, income tax expert, that he would appoint a lawyer to defend Sadur in his forthcoming second trial for criminal conspiracy unless Sadur obtained counsel for himself by Tuesday. The first trial, last November, ended in a hung jury.

Withdrawal of Former District Attorney Rover, who defended Sadur when he and the Warring brothers were tried last year, was approved by the court. Sadur said he was unable to get another lawyer and that he supposed he would have to act as his own lawyer. The court then set the deadline.

Sadur and Emmitt, Leo Paul and Charles "Rags" Warring are due to be tried January 23 for conspiracy to defraud the Treasury of the income tax on the profits of the $2,000,000-a-year numbers racket. District Attorney Pine commented that if another lawyer came into the case next week it might be necessary to put the trial off one week.

Dollar Assails Cab Inspections

Duplication of compulsory mechanical examination of taxicabs by the Public Utilities Commission and the proposed District inspection stations was hit as "unfair and useless" yesterday by E. Erwin Dollar, chairman of the legislative committee of the local taxicab union.

Dollar said taxicab operators now were paying $25 annually for their license to do business and that this fee included two inspections annually by the Public Utilities Commission. He said the operators had received notice they would have to pay another fee of $1 for the compulsory inspection by the Traffic Department.

He said this would tax the industry with $4,000 "unnecessary expenditures" each year, and would require more inspections for taxicabs than privately owned cars.

Pharmaceutical Talk

"Specialties and New Products" will be the subject of a talk by Dr. Ralph W. Clark before the Washington Branch of the American Pharmaceutical Association on Monday, January 16, in the Institute of Pharmacy at 2215 Constitution avenue northwest.

Harry Culshaw Will Speak at AIB Function

Midyear Educational Dinner; Many Local Bankers to Be Present

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Harry C. Culshaw, assistant treasurer of the Pennsylvania Co. for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities, will be the principal speaker at the midyear educational dinner of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at the Willard Hotel next Tuesday, at 6:30 p. m., according to William H. Laughlin, Washington Loan & Trust Co., chairman of the educational committee. Mr. Culshaw's message is one which will be of great interest to all connected with Washington Chapter, as he is a past president of Philadelphia chapter of the institute.

It is at this meeting that plans for the coming semester of Washington Chapter will be outlined. More than 100 persons are expected to attend the dinner, including officials of local banks, officers and governors of the chapter, together with its instructors, committee chairmen and consuls representing the various local financial institutions.

Other responses will be made by Ord Preston, president of Union Trust Co., and first vice president of the District of Columbia Bankers' Association; Joseph R. Fitzpatrick, president of Washington Chapter; Frances E. Robey, chairman of its program committee, who will outline future social functions; Raymond L. Jones, chief consul; Herbert Lawson, chairman of the membership committee, and Raymond B. Dickey, representing the faculty.

Committee Assistants

Chain Store Sales In December Hit Peak for Year

New York, Jan. 12.—Chain stores, in their December sales, made the best showing for the year 1938, according to the monthly compilation released today by Childs, Jeffries & Thorndike, Inc.

The first 25 chains reported an aggregate December volume of $381,050,304, an increase of $18,800,645 or 5.2 per cent over the same month a year ago. For the 12 months ended December 31 these chains had sales totaling $2,936,721,525, which compares with sales of $3,061,312,704 in 1937, a decrease of 4.07 per cent.

The 1938 figures also compare favorably with December 1936, when the sales volume of the same chains was $365,234,249, and also with 1935, when reported sales volume totaled $331,813,587 for December and $2,624,190,470 for the 12 months period in 1935.

Brokers' Loans Drop $13,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $704,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $13,000,000, when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $726,000,000.

2,152,000 Patents

The United States Patent Office, now entering its 150th year, reports the granting of approximately 2,152,000 patents, which is equal to about 1.7 patents every hour since it was created in 1790.

Late Selling Forces Wheat Prices Lower

Winter Wheat Crop Reports Are More Optimistic

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—The wheat market fluctuated today within a range of ⅝ cent to close unsettled. July and September contracts were slightly lower.

Speculative interest was at a low ebb. Fractional gains of as much as ½ cent appeared around midsession but selling predominated in the final hour. Less pessimistic tone of crop reports from some sections of the winter wheat belt accounted partly for liquidation of new crop contracts while weakness of the stock market discouraged buying.

Wheat closed ⅜ higher to ¼ lower compared with yesterday, May and July 69¼@69¾; corn unchanged to ¼ off, May 52⅞@52¾, July 53⅞; oats unchanged to ⅛ down; rye ⅛@½ higher; lard unchanged to 5 lower.

Stocks Generally Lower as Reaction Continues; Armament Shares Lower Rail Issues Decline on Bond Market

New York, Jan. 12.—The reaction continued today and trading expanded on the downside, amounting to 1,362,830 shares, the heaviest volume seen on any of the days of declining prices this year. Judged by the composite average, the net loss was only 0.51 point, but this was after a fairly substantial rally before the close. At the composite low for the day, the list was down an average of ⅝ point, which meant 1 to 4 points in the active speculative leaders. The rally was of sufficient proportions so that the great majority of pivotal issues were off only fractions.

The day's action was such as to make the army of chart followers sharpen their pencils and start figuring the probabilities of the list violating the lows of late November. The high for the bull market was made on last November 10, the list then reacting until November 28.

The comeback, which culminated on January 4, did not go through the highs of November 10. From that date the trend has been lower and at today's low there was less than a point separating the composite average from its worst on November 28.

Chartists Look for Drop

Should this previous resistance point be broken on the downside with volume, the chartists would regard it as a reversal of the trend and an indication that, from a technical standpoint at least, the market was headed for lower levels before effective resistance could develop. The Bears point out that the rally of December and early January was unable to go through the early November high.

On the other hand if the list can rally from this level, as it did in the closing hours yesterday, it would be taken by the chart followers as indications of at least a technical recovery, which might conceivably proceed upward until it tested the two former resistance points on the upside.

So much for the followers of graphs and trend lines. Those who follow only the day to day news developments felt that the sharp reaction resulted from a combination of bearish influences.

Foreign Trades Sell

Foreign security traders, usually credited with more foresight than the home-grown variety—although this is debatable—were on the selling side until today. One of the major Wall street houses handling foreign orders reported today a switch among their foreign clients, who are now on the buying side.

The relatively low figures given by the president in his defense message was held responsible for a major portion of the decline, not that the figures were actually low in these days of billions, but they were low in comparison with what everyone expected the President to request.

Armaments Bear Brunt

Aviation stocks and the shares of other armament companies naturally were called upon to bear a large portion of the selling. Curtiss Wright, Sperry, North American and Bendix were the most active of the group and were down fractions.

Less active Douglas was off about a point, Glenn Martin a point and Wright Aero, 2½. Continental Motors was the day's most active stock and edged forward ½ point. United States Steel and Bethlehem each were down ⅞, as was Anaconda, although the metals did relatively better than the other departments of the market. Central, among the rails, stood out against the downward trend. Among the manufacturing issues, Johns Manville gave up 4¼, and Westinghouse, 2¼.

Among the commodities, wheat was unsettled and there was a low speculative interest. A less pessimistic tone in crop reports from some sections contributed to selling, and July and September futures closed off slightly. The Chicago market ended the day up ⅜ cent to off ¼ cent a bushel. Cotton edged forward 5 to 8 points.

Bond Trading Dull

Listed bond trading was dull today, with the high-grade investment issues well supported, while speculative bonds dropped along with equities. United States Treasury securities held at or near the highs of recent years, and best corporate investments also were maintained. Rail bonds of the secondary classification dropped in the wave of speculative pessimism, and other groups also softened. Foreign dollar issues attracted little support. Turnover was $7,390,000.

Treasury Issues Gain

Disclosure of bank holdings of Treasury bonds seemed to aid the market for these obligations slightly, as gains ranging from 1-32 to 4-32 point were registered. The modest movements sufficed to produce one fresh high. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations also were in modest demand. Small gains appeared in many of the highest grade corporate bonds, and the others were steady.

Low-Priced Rails Dipped

Medium priced interest payers among the rails moved slowly lower, with few signs visible of the effects of the late rally in the equities section. Net losses ranged from fractions to 3 points. Default carrier bonds also were marked downward. Holding company issues were unsettled and industrial convertibles suffered from the equities decline. Local tractions fell with the rest of the market, but some of the communications issues remained stable.

Canadian and Scandinavian bonds were in demand in the foreign division, but Argentine and Australian obligations suffered a little interest because of the Rome parley. The Japanese group took a turn for the worse. There was little speculative enthusiasm for Latin-American or European default bonds.

company's 89 years. A notable result of the year's business was an increase of $15,011,374 in the amount of insurance in force. National annuities were purchased in much greater volume than in 1937, new premiums for such contracts amounting to $3,243,253, as compared with $2,783,276. Mr. Cook announced that the new paid business for his agency in 1938 exceeded that of the previous year by more than 15 per cent.

Building Permits in December Under 1937

New York, Jan. 12 (AP).—Building permits as issued in 215 United States cities in December totaled $89,582,203, against $89,659,369 in November and $118,743,015 in December, 1937, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. The sharp drop under a year ago was due to an extraordinary bulge in filing of permits in New York City in the final 1937 month before the new city building code went into effect, the credit agency said.

December contracts for the cities, excluding New York City, totaled $67,319,756, against $67,497,501 in November and $43,924,911 in December, 1937. For the full year 1938 permits for the 215 cities aggregated $1,147,543,436, against $1,130,915,007 in 1937, a gain of 1.5 per cent.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Washington, D. C. Separate sealed bids for the construction and completion of the Superstructure of Ward Building No. 3 (including X-Ray Equipment and the construction of a Central Heating Plant, at Gallinger Municipal Hospital, D. C., located east of Nineteenth Street and south of B Street, Southeast (in Reservation No. 13), Washington, D. C., will be received by said Commissioners at Room 509, District Building, Washington, D. C., until 2 o'clock P. M., JANUARY 31, 1939, and then publicly opened and read aloud. The Instructions to Bidders, Form of Bid, Form of Contract, Plans, Specifications, and Forms of Bid Bond and Performance Bond may be examined and secured at the Office of the Chief Clerk, Engineer Department, Room 427, District Building, and copies thereof obtained upon deposit of a certified check, payable to the Collector of Taxes, D. C., in the sum of Fifty Dollars ($50.00) for each set. Not more than three (3) sets of drawings and specifications, etc., will be furnished to any one general contractor. Upon returning such sets promptly and in good condition, said deposits will be refunded. The Commissioners reserve the right to waive any informalities in or to reject any or all bids. Each bidder must deposit with his bid security in an amount equal to five per centum (5%) of the base bid in the form and subject to the conditions provided in the Instructions to Bidders. Attention of bidders is particularly called to the requirements as to conditions of employment to be observed and minimum wage rates to be paid under the contract. No bidder may withdraw his bid within 30 days after the actual date of the opening thereof. G. M. THORNETT, Secretary, Board of Commissioners, D. C. Dec. 31, 1938. 4.5.6.11.12.13

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

THE Civil Service Commission goes introspective in its annual report to the extent that some of its attitudes are interestingly set forth:

"The commission has noted with real satisfaction the constructive work of organized groups of employes in improving personnel practices. Leadership of employe unions has been responsible and intelligent. Co-operation from employe groups has been outstanding. The commission believes that the maintenance of a close co-operative relationship with employe organizations is an assurance of progress in the field of personnel administration, and an assurance against friction and misunderstanding preventable wherever enlightened personnel management exists . . . further.

"Members of Congress are constantly besieged by constituents interested in employment in the Government. Members of Congress from time to time have occasion to call upon the commission and its staff for information concerning pending examinations and procedures under the rules and regulations . . . The commission has no adequate system of liaison with the Congress to render information, to enable it properly to co-operate with the public and necessary explanation which alone can alleviate points of possible friction between the public and the commission . . . further.

"The problems of personnel administration, which has become an extremely important, complicated and technical art, have been neglected in too many places in government" . . . further, "No central personnel agency can perform its work successfully without the enthusiastic support, leadership and backing of the Chief Executive. The President of the United States has given the highest order of support and leadership to the United States Civil Service Commission."

THE office boy returns from the Department of Agriculture and excitedly bats off the following contribution:

"The elevator operator told me the news . . . almost too full with the importance of the occasion to talk she let me onto the fact that 'the firs' Lady of the Lan' was on the sixth floor . . . 'That so,' I said; take me up . . . Walking down the corridor and looking carefully right and left, as not to miss anything, I nearly ran full into two ladies walking quickly toward me . . . One of them was tall and slim . . . It was the first time I had ever seen her . . . My face must have mirrored my surprise and interest for she smiled graciously; and by the grace of heaven remembering my hat and manners in time, I smiled back . . . It was almost my last act . . . I had just time to dodge into a convenient telephone booth and escape being trampled under the thundering heels of lunch-hour-freed employes, following on the trail of the First Lady."

And there is another Democratic voter!

THE Postoffice Department is planning late this year to publish a series of stamps carrying the faces of distinguished Americans such as scientists, prominent contributors to the public good, authors and the like. The result of this projected enterprise has been to bring upon the department a swarm of letters urging this or that face for the stamps. The bulk of these have urged inclusion of Frances E. Willard, the temperance leader, in the series. But two faces, for reasons suitable to the department, will not appear. One is of Will Rogers; the other is of any baseball player whatsoever. Despite the fact that the President and Mr. Farley are well known baseball fans, there will be no baseball players on the stamps. We hear that this is final.

ADD latest squawk about Internal Revenue's decentralization that is sending hundreds of people from Washington to far-flung field offices: the Washington (stamp) Collectors Club says the move has deprived them of three stellar members and they don't think it's right . . . Missouri Congressmen will be guests of honor at the Missouri State Society's dance tomorrow night at the Shoreham. The society's officers are Orville Zimmerman, president; Harry S. Truman, Richard M. Duncan, Col. Carl L. Ristine and Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, vice presidents; W. W. Badgley, treasurer; Craig L. Reddish, secretary, and Arthur W. Brown, tyler.

Bob Burns Says—

I just finished readin' a book about successful men an' women an' it seems to me most every one of 'em got where they are because they could make up their minds in a hurry an' make the right decision in an emergency. About the only quick thinker in our family was my Aunt Boo, an' I always said she'd have gone a long way if she'd been a business woman instead of a housewife. I never saw anyone that could act quicker than she could in a jam. Take the time her youngest son, Herschel, swallowed a button. When Uncle Unie heard about it, he came runnin' in from the field, scared to death. But Aunt Boo kept on gettin supper just like nothin' had happened. An' he yelled at her: "How can you act so unconcerned? Don't you realize our boy has swallowed a button?" "I sure do," she said, "but, Unie, there's nothin' to get excited about. The minute he told me I made him swallow a button-hole!"

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

As people are playing more and more cards, so is their skill increasing. This is particularly true of contract bridge, and no phase of the game is more exemplary than the defense. A few years ago defenders considered themselves expert if they executed the standard defensive plays inherited from whist. Today, a host of new playing signals have been developed to aid the relentless opposition to declarer.

A nice example of the progress made in this most fascinating phase of the game is shown in today's hand, wherein a defender defeats a slam by refusing to take a certain trick until he has received a discard signal from his partner. Had he won the trick, the first time it was offered, he would have been compelled to lead blind. He most certainly would have led wrong, and the contract would have been made.

Was South Surprised!

"In a recent rubber bridge game, sitting South, with no one vulnerable, I picked up these cards:

♡ K Q J 10 3
◇ A J 10

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	1 ♠	3 ♡	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

♠ A 5
♡ A 9 8 7 5
◇ Q 9 8 7
♣ 10 4

"I saw a chance to get rid of my losing club on a diamond, provided West didn't have the club ace, or provided he didn't lead clubs if the diamond finesse failed.

"I took the spade queen with dummy's ace and laid down the ace of trumps. East and West followed suit, leaving one heart outstanding.

"If I removed the last trump before I took the diamond finesse, I feared that if East were blank in hearts and had the club ace, he would signal West for a club lead.

"So next I finessed the diamond ten and was delighted to see that it held. The contract was safe! I drew the last trump and East discarded the nine of clubs. Back to dummy I went with a spade ruff, first playing the spade king and finessed the jack of diamonds.

"West grew a Satanic smile laid down the king of diamonds and led a club to East's ace. Down one!

He Waited for a Cue

"West explained that he refused the first diamond trick, hoping to get a possible encouraging lead signal from East on a discard. If none came, he would have to lead another spade, which would have allowed the contract to be fulfilled.

"The complete deal:

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Honors Even

Go where you will, you find the innocent suffering in reputation for the deeds of the guilty. It is even so in the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows. All too often the innocent are accused of dark deeds they would not dream of doing.

Sue had seen a bird she was certain was Mocker the Mockingbird kill and carry off a Sparrow, and her indignation knew no bounds. Farmer Brown's boy was sure that she was mistaken and that she had seen Butcher the Shrike, but Sue was stubbornly sure that she was right, insisting that she would have to see Butcher before admitting that she had been mistaken.

For the next day or two it was plain that the feathered folk who had been coming so regularly to the feeding-shelf at a window of Farmer Brown's house were in fear. They came, to be sure, but they came singly and furtively, dashing in for a seed and then away. Even Sammy Jay seemed fearful.

"He acts scared," declared Sue. "They all act scared, all but one. You notice that Mockingbird isn't scared. He would have to be scared of himself if he was scared, I guess."

"No," said Tommy; "he isn't scared, but it isn't because he is the one the others are afraid of, as you think. You'll see, one of these days."

It was hardly five minutes later that there was a sudden commotion on the shelf and a thump against the window. "Look!" cried Sue. "I told you it was that Mockingbird! He has—why, there are two of them! There are two Mockingbirds fighting!"

It was a short but furious fight. The two birds fell off the shelf, fluttering to the ground and striking at each other fiercely with their bills. As Sue said, it was difficult to tell which was which. Farmer Brown's boy started for the door.

"What are you going to do, Tommy?" cried Sue.

"Save the Mockingbird!" retorted Tommy.

"Which one?" asked Sue, and added, "you needn't bother. They have separated and one has flown up in a tree and the other over to a fence post. Both have lost some feathers, but neither is flying away. I guess each found he had more than he could handle."

"That's right, Sue. I guess honors are even. It is a draw. Now if you still think both are Mockingbirds, take a good look at that fellow over on the post. What do hold-up men wear?" said Tommy.

"Masks," was the prompt response from Sue's twin brother Sammy.

"Sure. And if you look closely you will see that that fellow is wearing a mask," replied Tommy.

It certainly looked that way. Right across the face was a broad black patch that looked much like a robber's mask. It did so. It gave that bird a bad look.

"That is Butcher the Shrike," said Tommy. "You may always be sure of him by that black mask. Then look at that bill of his and compare it with Mocker's. Butcher's bill isn't as long as that of Mocker, and it has a little hook at the end, while Mocker's is a straight point. They are about of a size and they both dress in gray. At a little distance they do resemble each other. But that mask tells the story. Now, Sue, do you believe it was Butcher the Shrike, not Mocker the Mockingbird, who killed that Sparrow the other day?"

Sue readily admitted her mistake and took back all the harsh things she had said and believed about Mocker. "I guess Butcher realizes now that he made a mistake when he picked on Mocker," said she. "Why is he called Butcher?"

"Get your wraps on and perhaps I can show you instead of telling you," replied Tommy.

Mrs. Schwab, Steel Titan's Wife, Is Dead

She and Her Husband Once Declined Offer Of $50,000,000

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 12.—Mrs. Charles M. Schwab, wife of the steel magnate and philanthropist, died early today at her Manhattan home. Mrs. Schwab, 79, had been ill for some time.

MRS. SCHWAB

She was the former Emma Eurana Dinkey, of Loretto, Pa., and was married to Schwab in 1883.

Schwab, modest in his success, often credited his wife when he was praised for some accomplishment.

Turned Down 50 Millions

At one time he was offered $50,000,000 for a half interest in the Bethlehem Steel Co. Discussing the proposal with his wife, he said:

"That is a big sum. Half of what I have is yours. What shall we do? If we sell your share, invested at 5 per cent, it will bring you an income of more than $100,000 a month for the rest of your life."

"We wouldn't sell for five times that much," Mrs. Schwab replied. "What would I do with the money and what would you do without your work?"

The offer was declined.

Stricken on Christmas

Mrs. Schwab had been a virtual invalied for several years, and their Riverside drive salon, where great artists of the music world and the theater once gathered was closed.

Death came in the Schwab's Seventy-third street home, just off Riverside drive. Mrs. Schwab suffered a heart attack Christmas Day. Her condition grew gradually worse until her collapse early this morning. At her bedside were her husband, her sister, Mrs. Marshall Ward, and Mrs. Paul Walters, a niece.

When Mrs. Schwab was married in a small Pennsylvania town, Schwab, was then an obscure workman employed in one of Andrew Carnegie's steel mills.

Worthington Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow

Widow of Classmate Of President Grant Dies Here at 96

Mrs. Rebecca Britton Worthington, 96, daughter of a classmate of Gen. Grant and a resident of Washington since the War Between the States, died Wednesday at her home in the Toronto Apartments. She was the widow of Charles Worthington, a member of one of the city's oldest families.

Mrs. Worthington remembered vividly the assassination of President Lincoln, which occurred soon after her arrival at the Capital. One of the greatest pleasures of her later years was recounting this and other historic events she had witnessed to her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Worthington was the daughter of Capt. Forbes Britton, and was born in Tampa, Fla. Capt. Britton later was stationed in Texas, where his daughter met Mr. Worthington. They were married in 1860, and abandoned plans to live in the West when the war broke out.

Mr. Worthington has been dead 20 years. His family, who came here from Annapolis, settled in Georgetown before the Capital was established in the District of Columbia.

Mrs. Worthington is survived by two daughters, Miss Eliza P. Worthington and Mrs. Elizabeth Trescott, both of Washington; two grandchildren, Mrs. Philip Torrey, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. G. Wade Martin, of Washington, and three great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Matthew's Church, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Md. Couple Joined in Death After 41 Years of Marriage

Married 41 years, Leonard H. Taylor, 62, and his wife, Mrs. Florence R. Taylor, 62, of Mount Rainier, Md., were joined in death last night.

Mrs. Taylor suffered a heart attack at 6:10 p. m. and was pronounced dead shortly after. Her husband, a victim of paralysis, suffered a stroke when he heard of his wife's death. He died at 7:30 p. m.

They were married in Washington, where they lived until moving to Mount Rainier 16 years ago. A native of Bel Alton, Md., Mr. Taylor formerly was employed with the Virginia Life Insurance Co. and with the Washington Terminal Co. Mrs. Taylor was born in Washington. The lived at 3311 Thirty-seventh street in Mount Rainier. Mr. Taylor retired about ten years ago.

Dr. William Norton, Mount Rainier physician, pronounced both dead.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. E. Lorraine Beard, of Mount Rainier, and Mrs. Elsie Hendry.

Services for the couple will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at their home. They will be buried together in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

George Scott Dies; Ex-Red Cross Aide

Word of the death in Chicago of George E. Scott, veteran member of the Red Cross central committee, was received here yesterday. Mr. Scott was known in Washington for his work during the World War as general manager of that organization. He directed the Red Cross relief in the Mississippi Valley flood of 1927.

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, sent a message of condolence to Miss Cornelia Scott, sister of Mr. Scott.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow in Chicago, with burial in St. Louis. The Red Cross will be represented by James L. Fieser, vice chairman, and Eliot Wadsworth, of Boston, member of the central committee.

Mrs. Lillie M. Glover Dies; Rites Tomorrow

Mrs. Lillie M. Glover, resident of this city for 20 years, died yesterday at her home, 1458 Columbia road northwest. She was the widow of L. K. C. Glover.

Services will be tomorrow at 10 a. m. at the Hines funeral home. The body will be taken to Berryville, Fla., her birthplace, for burial.

Mrs. Glover is survived by her brother, H. D. Young, and a sister, Mrs. Lilly P. Eastwood.

William Shea's Funeral Will Be Held Today

Civil Engineer and Writer to Be Buried At Arlington

Funeral services for William E. Shea, civil engineer and writer, will be held at 9 a. m. today in St. Thomas' Catholic Church, following brief services at his residence, 2815 Cathedral avenue northwest. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery. Mr. Shea died on Wednesday at his home, at the age of 49.

Since coming to Washington in 1923, Mr. Shea had been associated with Mark Sullivan, writer, and had helped him gather material for his six-volume work "Our Times—the United States."

Born in Bellevue, Ohio, Mr. Shea studied engineering at Harvard University, and after graduating in 1914 spent nine years in engineering work in Cuba. During the World War he served at an officers' training camp.

Mr. Shea edited educational bulletins and publications for the National Wild Life Federation and wrote for the Detroit Saturday Night. He belonged to the National Press Club and the Congressional Country Club.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Tomasita C. Shea; a son, William L. Shea, student at Georgetown University and member of the university golf team; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Shea; four sisters, the Misses Mabel and Margaret Shea, Mrs. Jose Baron and Mrs. Walter Dempsey, and two brothers, James P. and Theodore J. Shea. All of the survivors live here except Mrs. Dempsey, whose home is in Pittsburgh.

Oliphant Praised By Morgenthau; Rites Tomorrow

Secretary of the Treasury Henry A. Morgenthau paid tribute last night to Herman Oliphant, 54, general counsel of the Treasury Department and originator of much New Deal legislation, who died Wednesday.

"I am inexpressibly shocked and grieved by the death of Herman Oliphant," said Secretary Morgenthau in a message from Florida, where he is vacationing. "He was a great idealist and a great public servant and a deeply loyal friend, both to his Government and to me personally."

Undersecretary John W. Hanes expressed the grief felt by himself and the staff of the Treasury Department, declaring that Mr. Oliphant was "untiring and faithful to every trust."

The funeral will be held at Frankfort, Ind., at 3 p. m. tomorrow, with burial in the family plot. Treasury officials are expected to attend.

Funeral Tomorrow for Julius Reiners

Was Former Manager Of Press Club; Knew Roosevelt and Windsor

Funeral services for Julius Reiners, 58, former manager of the National Press Club, who died early yesterday at his home in Mount Rainier, Md., will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at Gasch's funeral parlors, Hyattsville. Burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

REINERS

A native of Hamburg, Germany, Mr. Reiners, came to this country as a small child in 1892. He was on of the first residents of Mount Rainier, where he had lived at 4119 Thirtieth street, for 33 years.

He retired 17 months ago from his post at the Press Club after serving for 9 years. Among his friends were some of the Capital's most distinguished citizens.

Knew Roosevelt and Windsor

He was a close friend of Presidents Taft, Harding, Coolidge and Franklin Roosevelt and was personally acquainted with the Duke of Windsor, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Lord Northcliffe.

His friendship with the Duke of Windsor began with Edward's visit to Washington as Prince of Wales. When Edward became King of England, Mr. Reiners received an invitation to visit him at Buckingham Palace, but was unable to accept.

Sang In Quartet

He sang barytone in the famous Press Club Quartet, with Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to President Roosevelt; the late Morton M. Milford, director of public relations for the Works Progress Administration, and John F. Daly, newspaperman.

Mr. Reiners was treasurer and a former president of the Mount Rainier Volunteer Fire Department, which he helped to organize.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Jennie Reiners; five sisters, Mrs. George C. Flemming and Mrs. William Henson, both of Arlington, Va.; Mrs. Arthur Lehman, of Laurel, Md.; Mrs. Carl Rottman, of Mount Rainier, and Mrs. Mary Stejneger, of Washington, and a brother, Alvin Reiners, of Arlington, Va.

FALSE TEETH

That Loosen Need Not Embarrass

Many wearers of false teeth have suffered real embarrassment because their plate dropped, slipped or wabbled at just the wrong time. Do not live in fear of this happening to you. Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH, the alkaline (non-acid) powder, on your plates. Holds false teeth more firmly, so they feel more comfortable. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH at any drug store.—Adv.
